Half of D. C. Drivers Get 'X' or 'B-3' Gas Cards

11,463 to Receive Unlimited Supply; Only 25% Rated As Nonessential

On the basis of figures covering the first two days of Washington's three-day gasoline registration, which ended last night, one out of every two motorists in Washington will have either an X ration card, entitling him to an unlimited supply of fuel, or a B-3 card, which will allow him 57 gallons of gas between now and July 1. The rationing program goes into effect today.

Figures on yesterday's registration were not available last night, but a report on the first two days disclosed that:

Only one-fourth of those who registered received the A cards, classifying them as nonessential motorists;

The coveted X cards have been issued to 11,463 motorists, or 11.6 per cent of the 98,066 who registered on the two days;

Registrants receiving the B-3 cards, next in desirability to the X cards, totaled 37,018 or 37.7 per cent of the total, and B-1 cards, for drivers who travel 6 to 10 miles daily, went to 10,527 motorists who comprised but 10.7 per cent of the registration, while B-2 cards, good for 45 gallons between now and July 1, were issued to 13,947 men and women. They represented 14.2 per cent of the total.

Registration Concluded Smoothly

These figures were disclosed by the office of Lawson J. Cantrell, assistant superintendent of schools in charge of the registration, which announced at the same time that yesterday's registration was carried off smoothly and without congestion and was "much slower" than the other two days.

The 28 schools where the registration was conducted closed last night at 8 p. m. after being open since 10 a. m.

Wednesday's registration did not bear out early reports that it was heavier than Tuesday's, only 48,329 cards being issued on the second day. On Tuesday, 49,722 cards were issued.

Nor did Wednesday bring the ap-

Barkley Defends His Colleagues With 'X' Cards

(The Tanker "Crisis," See Page 8.)

Senator Alben Barkley, as of the moment this edition of The Post went to press, has lost a bet in which he staked his "head against the hole in a doughnut."

Registering vigorous opposition yesterday to Senator Sheridan Downey's resolution asking his colleagues to pledge themselves to waive any special privileges under gasoline or other rationing programs, the Senate Democratic leader declared:

"If the only business of Congress is to compete for the size of boxcar headlines in the newspapers, it ought to quit. I'm willing to bet my head against the hole in a doughnut that what I'm saying here won't get a headline."

The headline, Senator, is in its customary spot at the top of this story.

Shirer To Write For Sunday Post

Wm. L. Shirer, author of "Berlin Diary" and noted news analyst, will write a newspaper column once a week, exposing Axis propaganda. This column will appear regularly in The Washington Post on Sundays. Propaganda is considered by the Axis a weapon as important as tanks and planes. Our defense against it is exposure of this propaganda as it appears and understanding of its methods, purposes, and sources. Shirer's column in The Sunday Post will be devoted to these ends.

$5 Fee to File Tax Return Is Suggested

Would Cover Compiling And Net 'Tidy Sum,' Morgenthau Asserts

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

A $5 "examination fee" or head tax, imposed on every person in the United States who files an income tax return, yesterday was suggested informally by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau.

The proposal was advanced at a Treasury press conference, for possible application to more than 30 million individuals who would file returns under drastically reduced exemptions recommended by the House Ways and Means Committee.

Secretary Morgenthau said experts are now studying constitutionality of the plan, and "if we can do it legally, we'll recommend it."

Paul Comments On Move

Randolph Paul, Treasury tax adviser, later said there was no question but what the proposal would be constitutional if the tax were imposed as an "excise" instead of an income tax.

Millions of persons filing income tax returns now pay no tax at all, or only a few cents, due to exemptions, special credits and deductions, and this number would greatly increase if exemptions were cut to $500 for single persons and $1200 for married, as proposed by the Ways and Means Committee.

It costs the Treasury about 50 cents to collect and compile each return, almost as much as the Government would collect from an average of the very low bracket taxpayers covered by the new base.

"A Very Tidy" Sum

Secretary Morgenthau remarked that Senator George (Democrat) of Georgia had recently suggested a similar tax. George called it an "examination fee," because it would pay for the cost of examining those returns now yielding little or no revenue.

Morgenthau suggested a tax of "several dollars," and later mentioned $5 as a possible minimum. He said it might produce about 100 million dollars—"a very tidy" sum—

Navy Names 2495 Missing; 14 From D. C.

Explains That Some May Be Prisoners Or in Remote Spots; Denby's Son Included

The Navy yesterday released the names of 2495 officers and men reported missing since the attack on Pearl Harbor December 7 and up to April 15. Fourteen officers and men from the greater Washington area are included.

It was officially pointed out that the "missing" classification covers "those who cannot be accounted for, some of whom may be prisoners, some of whom may have been rescued at sea and landed at isolated spots and have no opportunity to communicate with U. S. naval authorities."

Many may be alive, as in the instance of James F. Taylor, now at his home in Strasburg, Va.

Among the listed missing from the Washington vicinity are Lieut. William O. Spears, jr., the son of Rear Admiral and Mrs. William O. Spears, of Woodley Park Towers, and Lieut. Edwin Denby, jr., son of the late Secretary of the Navy under President Harding, whose wife lives at 2029 Connecticut Avenue Northwest.

Other Washington officers unreported are Lieuts. Thomas Benjamin Payne, Roscoe Franklin Dillen, jr., John Francis Fairbanks, jr., Robert Burwell Fulton 2d, Leon William Rogers and John Ford Woodruff.

Enlisted Men

Missing enlisted men from metropolitan Washington include Filmore Ernest Burton, fireman first class; Thomas Edison Wetherell, chief pharmacist's mate; Sidney Griffith Amory, fireman; Max Newton Schuler, fireman first class; Roy W. Lanham, seaman second class; Paul Eugene Phillips, storekeeper.

Two seamen first class, Robert Thomas Sheldon and Elmer Ward, were also identified in the Navy release as Washingtonians, but their residences or connections here could not be ascertained.

Among the missing officers from Maryland and Virginia are Lieut. Comdr. Welford Charles Blinn, Lieut. Morris Davies Gilmore jr., and Lieut. Joseph Gulliver jr., all of Annapolis; Lieut. Comdr. Jacob William Britt and Lieut. Joseph Francis Dalton, of Baltimore; Comdr. John Ambrose Hollowell jr., Lieut. Lion Tyles Miles, and Ensign Herbert Ross Hein jr., all of Norfolk.

Brief-biographies of the missing officers and men from Washington and nearby follow:

Lieut. Thomas B. Payne

Lieut. Thomas B. Payne was born in Potter, N. J., June 14, 1909. He attended the Clarendon Grammar School, Clarendon, Va., and Western High School in Washington. He entered the Naval Academy in 1927 from the Eighth Virginia District. He was graduated in 1931 and was

World-Wide Dye Plot Is Charged

A world-wide conspiracy to monopolize the manufacture and sale of dyestuffs was charged against eight major chemical companies yesterday in indictments returned by a Federal grand jury at Trenton, N. J.

The grand jury indicted 20 officers and directors of the corporations, including Lammot duPont, chairman of the board of E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. Several foreign corporations were among those named.

Navy to Immobilize 3 French War Vessels at Martinique

By the Associated Press

The United States Navy, in peaceful cooperation with French authorities on the spot, has begun the immobilization of French warships at Martinique, it was authoritatively disclosed yesterday.

This is a preliminary but vital step toward padlocking French Caribbean bases against possible use by the Axis.

Discussions are continuing on other points involved in the United States Government's request that effective steps be taken to keep the French possessions from becoming a menace to the United Nations.

The warships are the airship carrier Bearn and the cruiser Emile Bertin, at Martinique, and the cruiser Jeanne D'Arc at nearby Guadeloupe. French Guiana, on the South American mainland, also is involved in the discussions.

Presumably, the immobilization of the warships, would involve such steps as the removal of ammunition, fuel or essential machinery parts which could not be readily replaced. Exactly how it might be done was not made clear.

Still to be settled apparently, was the future status of some 140,000 tons of French merchant ships and tankers. It is reported that orders have been issued by Vichy that they be scuttled rather than yielded to the Allies.

This Government, however, has repeatedly made it clear that, so far as it is concerned, Vichy's attitude has no bearing whatsoever on the current negotiations. The United States has frankly taken the attitude that under Pierre Laval, the Vichy government will do its utmost to promote the Axis cause.

Consequently, all discussions have

Tokyo Put Up Funds For Ryder, Williams, Court Here Is Told

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

Hidden beneath the "commercial" operations of the propaganda agency, Jikyoku Iinkai, were the firm control and the constant supervision of the foreign office in Tokyo, two Japanese subjects testified in the District Court yesterday.

From Tokyo, these witnesses said, came the money that made the agency go, and the Mikado's consuls general in San Francisco always were on hand to see that it kept going.

Special Prosecutors Albert E. Arent and Arthur B. Caldwell offered this testimony against David Warren Ryder and Frederick Vincent Williams, on trial before Justice T. Alan Goldsborough for criminal conspiracy and violation of the Foreign Agents Act.

Townsend Involved

Alleged to have conspired with these men were Ralph Townsend, Scribner's Commentator writer, and Tsutomu Obana, secretary of Jikyoku Iinkai—both of whom pleaded guilty to violating the Foreign Agents Act—and four other Japa-

Army Ordered To Take Over All Airlines

Half of Planes Going To Military; Schedules To Be Curtailed

President Roosevelt yesterday ordered the Army to take over the operation and control of all of the Nation's domestic airline planes.

The sweeping move will transfer about half of the transport planes now in use to the carrying of troops and military cargoes, while the remainder will remain in service under strict Army control and "always available for emergency military missions."

Announcing the steps it was taking under Presidential instructions, the War Department said:

"All routes and services not regarded as essential to the war program will be terminated."

Approximately 300 Planes

The War Department announcement said that the plan to be put in effect will use the fleet of some 300 American airline planes as follows:

A "substantial portion" will be transferred outright to the Army Air Forces and be operated by military pilots wherever needed in the war effort.

The airlines themselves will convert approximately 70 planes from

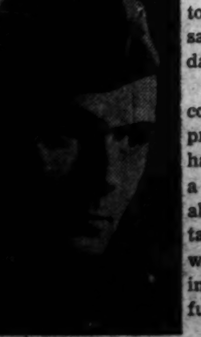
CHAPTER XII

Camp Polk, La., May 14.—Training tank drivers and gunners presented perhaps the most difficult problem of all in developing the Seventh Armored Division. A few young farmers were found who had handled caterpillar tractors back home, and these took readily enough to tank driving. But the bulk of the Seventh's tank drivers had to be cut from whole cloth.

These embryo drivers were given a period of instruction on a tank course which took them through increasingly difficult stages until they became thoroughly proficient in operating their powerful vehicles. Then all of them had to be taught tactics, without a knowledge of which a tank driver is useless in combat, since he must be able to put his tank, in the shortest time by the safest route, where it can do the most damage.



ANDREWS

To train drivers and section and platoon commanders in tactics a most ingenious practice course was evolved here which has been called the "golf course." It is a section of terrain which presents just about every obstacle and every aid to tank fighting which can be found anywhere. Tank crews went over it alone, in pairs, in fours, until they knew the fundamentals of tank combat by heart.

First the crew of a single tank watched a demonstration in which a skilled crew took its tank over the course, crushing a machine gun, turning off the road to pass under a protecting hill and take an antitank gun in flank, and so on. Then the crew climbed into its own tank and went through the same maneuver.

They were taught some of the first principles of tank fighting: to attack the most dangerous enemy weapon first; to use every bit of shelter in approaching a weapon which can disable the

As Thousands Cheer

U. S. Armed Might to March Here in Big Parade May 30

The parade which Washington wanted on Army Day and was denied, is coming on May 30—Memorial Day.

Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson made the announcement yesterday at his press conference. He said the War Department wanted the National Capital to see "our armed forces and some of their various components."

In the line of march will be infantry combat teams, parachute troops, light and medium tanks, the new 105 and 155-mm. howitzers, Negro troops, motorized weapons and engineering equipment from Fort Belvoir.

The armed services other than the Army also will take part in the parade, which promises to be one of the best Washington has ever had. A battalion of Marines will be in line, and also three companies of Coast Guardsmen and a company of Navy bluejackets. Army, Navy and Marine bands will march and some others yet to be announced.

Secretary Stimson said he hoped that some of the veterans of the Grand Army of the Republic also will be able to take part.

He said the time of the parade had not yet been settled. The tentative route, he said, was Constitution Avenue from Delaware Avenue to Seventeenth Street.

The Memorial Day parade will be a fulfillment of a promise made by President Roosevelt on March 24. A week earlier, at a White House press conference, the Chief Executive had said he thought it was time that America had a few more parades, a few more bands.

The Washington Post heartily agreed with the President, and

Burma Road Japs 100 Miles Inside China

Foe Still Advancing In Spite of Stiff Resistance; Another Battle Rages to West

By the Associated Press

Chungking, China, May 14.—Heavily engaged yet still advancing through China's back door, Japanese columns fought farther up the dizzy, twisting heights of the Burma Road today and, to the west, threatened the historic caravan route city of Tengyueh.

One invading column had branched from the main route to assault Tengyueh, ancient treaty port of entry for that little-known corner of Free China; the other, despite grievous casualties, was pushing northeast from Lungling, itself 100 miles by road, inside China, along the Burma Road in the area where it climbs to 7500 feet through the Kaolikung Mountains, then plunges crazily for 5000 feet to the Salween, or Lu River.

The Chinese said they had destroyed the Salween bridges and were holding the east bank in strength. Paoshan, east of the Salween and half way to the Mekong, still was in their hands.

Of the situation at Tenyueh, however, it was stated only that heavy fighting was raging. Tengyueh is on the old caravan trail from Burma to China, 100 miles east of Japanese-occupied Bhamo in Burma and 50 miles west of Paoshan.

The Japanese still on the Burma Road itself captured Taochi and pushed on toward Hungmushu, west of the Salween.

(Across upper Burma to the west, the remnant of the roughly handled British imperial armies, after a gallant counterattack in the midst of their tragic retreat, apparently were on the point of escape across India's Assam border.

(A communique from New Delhi said the British had not been in contact with the enemy since their counterattack on May 10 frustrated a Japanese attempt to trap them at Shwegyn in the Chindwin Valley, and reports reaching London said the rearguard now was around Kalewa, 40 miles from India.

Hint of Offensive in '43

Bulk of Army to Be Ready For Front Line by Autumn

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

The Army yesterday revealed plans to have the great bulk of its existing troops ready for front-line fighting by fall.

This disclosure, hinting a major American offensive early in 1943, was made by Secretary of War Stimson, in announcing plans for a rigorous schedule of field maneuvers this summer.

The final "dress rehearsal" for modern war will begin week after next and run through the first week of November, he said. Every kind of fighting that troops may face in war today will be practiced by the troops during the coming months to fit them for "any type of combat operations" by fall, it was said.

Stimson did not give any indication as to where or when America's divisions will go into action, but his words and the War Department announcement left no doubt that the summer's field exercises are considered the final drills for actual war.

"The purpose of these maneuvers," the War Secretary told reporters, "is to provide a large body of fighting men so trained and physically hardened that they will be ready—every man of them—to meet whatever is coming against them."

Combined air-ground operations, desert fighting, jungle warfare, small "task force" operations and night fighting will be emphasized in the rigorous "rehearsals for combat," Stimson said.

None of the new divisions formed this year will take part in the Sydney, Australia (Friday), May 15.—The men who fought the Battle of the Coral Sea for the Allies have landed at an Australian port, unheralded.

The first casualties of the battle, which may have been the greatest since Jutland, were taken in Army ambulances to an Allied hospital many miles inland.

No one was permitted to welcome the returning heroes, except the hospital staff. Some walked only with assistance. Others were borne on stretchers. Two were carried in, swathed in bandages. Others were shielded only in blankets. Some showed evidence of severe

Mexican Ship Sunk by Sub Despite Flag

Neutrality Flouted; Vessel Is Nations' First Torpedo Loss

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., May 14.—An Axis submarine stalked a fully lighted Mexican government-owned merchant ship, the Portrero Dell Llano, off the Southeast Coast for half an hour recently and then rammed a torpedo directly into the large, illuminated Mexican flag painted on its sides beneath the bridge.

It was the first Mexican ship lost by submarine action since the war began.

Tonight in Mexico City, it was announced the Mexican government, in a note addressed to Germany, Italy and Japan, demanded "complete satisfaction and a guarantee of damage reparations" by May 28 for the sinking of the 7500-ton vessel. The government threatened otherwise to "take a position in accordance with Mexican traditions."

The Mexican foreign office said notes were addressed to all three Axis governments because of the difficulty of determining the identity of the attacking submarine.

"The Axis is all one, so it makes no difference to which one of the totalitarian powers the submarine belonged," the statement added.

Survivors who landed at a Florida port said the ship burst into flames and 13 men, including the captain and deck officers, were killed. The 22 who reached safety told in amazed voices of the attack on their neutral ship. Naval craft rescued them, and the Navy released news of the sinking today.

The blazing ship floated for hours past one of the most populous beach resorts in the United States and thousands of persons gathered on the seashore to watch its flaming course. Many persons heard the

140-Mile Front Aflame

By Henry C. Cassidy

Moscow (Friday), May 15.—Red army shock troops supported by heavy tanks and antitank "Stormer" planes still were advancing early today on the great Nazi-held industrial city of Kharkov in the Ukraine, but the Soviets acknowledged a new "fighting retreat" of their armies on the narrow Kerch Peninsula in the Crimea.

In what probably is the greatest Red army offensive of the war—the fan-like movement upon Kharkov—the Soviets said they had knocked out not less than 150 Nazi tanks in two days of hard fighting.

The fall of Kharkov, which the Germans have held since last October 25, would imperil all the two million troops which Hitler had poured into the south, including those now attacking in the Crimea and those who are poised for eastward assault along the upper shores of the Sea of Azov.

The midnight communique said: "During May 14 our troops on the Kerch Peninsula, under pressure of superior enemy forces, are fighting stubbornly but retreated to new positions.

"In the Kharkov direction our troops continued to advance successfully. In two days' fighting we destroyed and put out of action not less than 150 German tanks.

"Many trophies were captured and prisoners taken.

"On other sectors of the front nothing of significance occurred."

Guerillas Active in Crimea

Russian guerillas were reported aiding the stubborn Soviet defense in the Crimea. A Sevastopol dispatch said these well-organized bands blew up a German supply train.

Although the Crimea offered the firmest footing for military operations in Russia at this time, some traces of the long, hard winter still linger even there. One dispatch said a river was flooded 5 miles wide, hampering Russian supply problems. The Red army was using pontoons to bridge the flood.

(The Berlin radio said Russian resistance on the Kerch Peninsula was confined to "isolated points," and said that despite a heavy rain which soaked the ground the Ger-

Bullets Whistle Past King George At Maneuvers

London, May 14.—Grenades and land mines exploded around King George VI and bullets screamed past him as he stood in the midst of a realistic "rehearsal" battle in South England today.

Live ammunition was used, and while the King was watching a soldier had a foot badly hurt in a grenade burst and another got splinter wounds on both arms.

Charging past the King, the battling troops flung themselves to the ground to fire their Bren guns and rifles and hurl grenades at the "enemy." It was King George's first experience of "tough" fighting, staged to represent real battlefield conditions.

Officers told the royal spectator that what he saw was part of the regular training, and not a specially staged show for his benefit.

Goering's Powers Reported Reduced

Rumor Strips Him Of Command

REICHSMARSHAL GOERING

Action Accompanied By Rumor That He'll Be Peace Emissary

London, May 14 (U.P.).—Radio Moscow, quoting "well-informed sources at Geneva," said tonight that Adolf Hitler has stripped Reichsmarshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering of his command of the German air force on the Soviet and Mediterranean fronts.

Field Marshal Erhard Milch has been placed in command of the Luftwaffe on the Russian front and Field Marshal Albert Kesselring in the Mediterranean, and both are now answerable only to Hitler, the broadcast said.

Furthermore, the Moscow radio said, Goering has been removed as director of naval supplies under the German four-year plan and coincident with his decline from power Gestapo Leader Heinrich Himmler has been placed in command of new storm trooper police regiments.

The Geneva sources said, according to the Russian report, that the Hitler-Goering rift reached a climax when Goering complained that he had been left out of the recent Hitler-Benito Mussolini conference at Salzburg and only Gen. Wilhelm Keitel and Gen. Alfred Jodl invited.

(Private advices reaching the United Press tonight said that it was rumored Goering and Italian Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano might meet British and American "personalities" in Lisbon.)

The Moscow broadcast said it was reported some German generals were voicing dissatisfaction over Hitler's conduct of the Russian war since he took over full command of the army in midwinter.

They were said to complain that the winter fighting deprived the troops of badly needed rest and made them unfit for a summer offensive.

The generals feel that "Hitler alone is responsible," the broadcast said.

muffled roar of the exploding torpedo and saw the first flash of flames.

To prevent just such an occurrence, the Mexican Naval Ministry recently ordered all Mexican ships to keep lights burning at night and the nation's flag flying by day. Obeying orders, Capt. Gabriel Cruz y Diaz had every light burning and spotlights on the Mexican flag painted on each side of the ship.

The attack came in the dead of night. Captain Cruz was on the bridge and with him were the deck officers—First Officer Rafael Castlean y Orta, Second Officer Jorge Pawling y Salazar, and Third Officer Jose Virgen y Rojas. The torpedo explosion wrecked the bridge, killing all of them.

Florida Throngs Watch Ship Burn

By the Associated Press

A Florida East Coast Port, May 14.—Thousands of persons on rooftops along the beach watched flames sweep a Panamanian merchantman after it was torpedoed by an Axis submarine off the southeast coast.

The torpedo blast and subsequent explosions aboard the ship awakened residents along the coast. They streamed to the beach or gained roofs and other vantage points to watch the distressed craft drift away, burning briskly.

Naval authorities announced the ship's loss today. Thirty-two survivors, who abandoned the vessel in lifeboats, reached a nearby coastal town safely. Thirteen others who dived overboard when the torpedo struck are missing and presumed lost.

Rescuers Praised

From West Palm Beach, Fla., came high praise from the survivors for naval craft that hurried quickly to them.

One crewman, Robert Beyer (address not available), found himself alone in a lifeboat too large for one man to handle. He drifted into a patch of burning oil. A naval craft plunged after him and brought him out safely. He was hospitalized for burns.

Another lifeboat capsized and Capt. Eugene Van Schonenberg of Belgium said some of its occupants would have been lost except for prompt Navy work.

Men of eight nationalities composed the crew. They were American, Canadian, Belgium, Dutch, Norwegian, Irish, Swedish, and Puerto Rican.

Ship Survives Torpedo, Shell Hits

New Orleans, May 14 (AP).—A sturdy medium size cargo ship survived three torpedoes and a prolonged shelling from an Axis submarine and was safe in a Gulf of Mexico port today with loss of one life.

The ship had torpedo holes in its sides and had suffered at least nine shell hits.

Holgar K. Mikkelson, chief mate, of Staten Island, N. Y., died of shrapnel wounds and shock aboard a liferaft and his body was returned home. One other man, Radio Operator Sam A. Trecino of Simpson, W. Va., was injured by shrapnel and hospitalized. The other 36 crewmen are safe.

Captain William H. Sheldon of Quapaw, Okla., said the first torpedo struck his ship on the starboard side at 2:35 a.m. Central War Time. Although the ship began taking water it proceeded at 10 knots trying to escape the sub which was not sighted.

Bulkheads were closed to regain an even keel. A general alarm went out and an SOS was sounded. At 3:55 a.m. another torpedo hit the ship on the starboard, followed immediately by a third torpedo hit.

Sub Shells Vessel

With the ship listing badly, the captain ordered it abandoned, and the crew left aboard a lifeboat and two liferafts. A few minutes later the submarine surfaced and began shelling the vessel with two guns. Between 17 and 20 shells were fired, and the ship showed at least nine direct hits, but did not sink.

Captain Sheldon said the sub circles the ship rapidly, and that it was possible two submarines engaged in the attack. The crew heard German voices from the submarine they saw. Just before daybreak the submarine left hastily with approach of a plane which signalled that help was coming.

Nazi Fliers Escape

Bowmanville, Ont., May 14 (AP).—Frederick Oeser and Everhardt Wildermutch, both 23-year-old German air force lieutenants, escaped from the officers' prison camp near here during the night. It was Oeser's third break since he was brought to the camp last December. Each is 5 feet 4½ inches tall.

Strategy in New Russian Drive

OBJECTIVES—Rich Caucasus oil-producing area is the objective of the Nazi push eastward into the Crimea. The new Russian drive is reportedly aimed at putting enough pressure on the Kharkov front (1) to the north to threaten Hitler's Crimean supply lines. Kerch (2), around which Russians admitted yielding some ground after six days of fighting, is the gateway to the Caucasus man-Rumanian forces were still pressing forward).

A supplementary Russian communique reported that Red airmen on Wednesday destroyed or damaged 120 Nazi tanks on various sectors of the front. This announcement did not make clear whether this was in addition to the 150 tanks knocked out on the Kharkov front.

The airmen also reported destroying 120 German trucks in their swoops on the long Nazi supply lines.

In the northwest "severe losses" were inflicted on the Germans, the communique said, and one single Soviet unit killed more than 4000 Nazis in a 10-day operation.

But the most vital Red action was the drive on Kharkov. After fighting a five-month retreat at the beginning of the war, the Russians hurled the Germans back in their big winter offensive and now have had the advantage of choosing their own spring offensive target—Kharkov, a key to the entire southern Nazi military structure.

The sudden dramatically timed onslaught by Marshal Semeon Timoshenko's massive and well-equipped southern command was aimed straight at the pivot of the whole German southern line and was intended to demolish all the carefully laid and slowly developing Nazi plans for a vast offensive toward the Russian Caucasus.

First battle-front reports to the army newspaper Red Star made it plain that the Russians were attacking heavily in several sectors of the Kharkov front and moving forward steadily despite thick forest and enemy fortifications.

(German high command reports said a strong Russian attack in this "Donets area" were being resisted, but did not claim they were repulsed; later broadcasts described the employment of a vast Russian tank which was termed "an armored colossus.")

Simultaneously the Red army announced a break-through in the Nazi primary lines before Leningrad, and there were other manifestations of savage Russian assaults at many points on a 1100-mile battle front.

After smashing the first German defense line at Leningrad, the Russians announced early today, the Red army forces pushed on and inflicted heavy losses on the Nazis as they tried to hold their second line. The Red air force was said to have won superiority in the air.

Before Kharkov, said Soviet military dispatches, the powerful initial Russian assault smashed strong enemy fortifications and the advance was pouring through a widening breach while the Red command called up more troops, tanks and guns for a frontal assault on the city itself.

This action outshadows the struggle on the Kerch Peninsula, across the narrow strait from the Caucasus, and scene of reverses which the Russians have acknowledged.

On the Kerch Isthmus, the Russians were resisting stubbornly after falling back to new positions under the weight of superior German numbers. Today's communique, which did not specifically mention the greater Kharkov battle, said violent battles continued overnight on the Crimean front.

(Here a German high command spokesman said Thursday night, the Russians launched a counterattack along the "Tartar Ditch," an old line of fortifications about 13 miles west of the town of Kerch. The spokesman added that the counterattacks had failed and that German and Rumanian troops had forced their way across the line.

(Earlier the German high command had stated that the Soviet Kerch force was beaten and in flight, but Berlin said it had no confirmation of Rumanian reports that Kerch had fallen to the Germans.)

American and British tanks were engaged in the great Kharkov battle, and Soviet artillery and warplanes were in violent action.

Soviet dispatches said the Red fliers dominated the air, destroying more than 30 German aircraft on the ground in the first day and shooting down five fighters.

The suddenness of the assault spread panic in the German ranks, and many of the defenders were reported to have fled, abandoning both artillery and mortars.

German reinforcements were being rushed up from the Ukraine man power reservoir, to replace losses already described as tremendous.

The army organ, Red Star, said: "Everything is being abandoned by the Germans in great quantities on the field of action."

An especially savage battle was reported at one point, where the Germans had erected powerful fortifications, spread thick mine fields and raised many antitank barriers.

Red army troops attacked on two sides of this point, piercing the defenses, neutralizing the pillboxes and pursuing the retreating Germans.

On the Leningrad front, Soviet accounts indicated that a similar all-out effort for the relief of that city was in progress.

Russian troops driving through the dank slush of spring were said to have smashed the German front positions in a number of sectors and in some areas to have compelled Marshal Wilhelm Ritter von Leeb to fall back from his second lines.

(The British wireless broadcast that the Russian Baltic fleet had steamed out of its base at Kronstadt, near Leningrad, and was in action in the Gulf of Finland against German positions along the coast.)

Apart from these major actions against the two main Russian cities now in Nazi grip or control—Kharkov and Leningrad—other Soviet offensive action was reported over wide areas.

About Smolensk, west of Moscow, large bands of Russian guerillas, armed with such comparatively heavy stuff as trench mortars and even captured field pieces, were assaulting the German rear in synchronization with attacks by Red bombers.

In the Staraya Russa region below Leningrad—where the remnants of the Sixteenth German Army had long been reported encircled—strong Russian attacks were reported. The German positions about Novgorod north of Lake Ilmen also were said to be under assault.

Within the past few days, it was stated, 266 German planes—229 of them troop transports—had been destroyed about Staraya Russa.

On the Kalinin front northwest of Moscow, said Russian dispatches, the Germans had been thrown back with heavy losses after their counterattacks had been broken.

Sidelights of the War

New Antitank Gun Fails to Stop Monster Russian Machines

London, May 14 (AP).—Soviet dispatches from the Leningrad front said today the Germans had wheeled new 6-inch antitank guns into action against the heavy Russian "Voroshilov" tanks, but that the land battleships continued to advance.

Shells of the new Nazi guns develop a temperature of 3000 degrees centigrade—5432 degrees Fahrenheit—when they explode, the dispatches said.

(This suggests an incendiary missile, perhaps an adaptation of the gasoline-bomb idea, but how the temperature was ascertained was not reported.)

The Leningrad front correspondents said the tanks were proving better fighting machines than anything the German possess and had destroyed a good number of the new guns.

Free French Nostalgic

London, May 14 (AP).—Bombing and machine-gunning their old home towns has ceased to be anything new for numerous Free French fliers operating with the R. A. F., but one who remained particularly glum after a raid was quoted:

"That factory we smashed the other day—I am its principal shareholder; in fact, I practically owned it."

Others told of somewhat happier experiences.

"Recently I was right over my own kitchen garden," said one. "I wanted to go down for a look, but I was chasing a Focke-Wulf and had a Messerschmitt on my tail."

Still another reported:

"While scouting over Normandy I flew over my old homestead. I saw my apple trees in good fettle. In the doorway a woman waved. I'm sure it was my mother."

S. R. O. For Internees

London, May 14 (AP).—A Reuters dispatch from Chungking said today 20 persons are crowded into each room of the former New Asia Hotel in Shanghai where more than 200 British and American citizens are interned.

Those held include a number of Americans brought from Guam and Wake Island, the report said.

Kerch Counterdrive Balked, Nazis Say

Red Thrusts Hurled Back; Rumanians Report Kerch Taken

(Dispatches from enemy countries are published with the warning that they frequently contain misleading information intended for propaganda purposes.)

By the Associated Press

Berlin (From German Broadcasts), May 14.—A German high command spokesman asserted tonight that the Russian forces embattled at Kerch had begun counterattacking on a line 13 miles west of that important eastern Crimean town, and northward on the Donets Front the Soviet troops were declared to be attacking in strength with tanks.

The Red army's counterattacks at Kerch were launched along the "Tartar Ditch," an old line of fortifications. The spokesman said that so far all these counterthrusts had failed and that German and Rumanian troops had forced their way across the old line in a continuation of their week-old offensive.

Earlier the high command in its daily communique said of the Kerch Front that "pursuit of the beaten enemy is being relentlessly continued."

Foreign reports (originating in Axis-controlled Bucharest) that Kerch itself had fallen to the Germans were termed by the German radio late today as "not confirmed by German competent quarters." The radio added that "no statement is possible on this report."

In interpretation of the high command communique the Berlin radio said that the Kerch action was in part a pursuit of forces which escaped encirclement in a German break-through at Parpatsch, near the neck of the Crimean Peninsula about 50 miles west of Kerch Strait.

German military commentators said that in the port adjacent to Kerch many large fires had been observed following strong German air attacks. They said that these attacks had resulted in the sinking of five freighters, a tugboat and a trawler and the damaging of three freighters, one transport ship and several small vessels.

Raiding Sevastopol

The German air force was said also to have raided Sevastopol, Russian stronghold at the southern tpi of the Crimea.

Tonight the high command spokesman said that fighting was proceeding in the region of Manai, where, he said, "a great number of enemy troops have been encircled." Earlier the Berlin radio had stated the Germans were mopping up a pocket at Akmonai.

(Neither Manai nor Akmonai appear on most maps, but the above references apparently were to the same town.)

The high command made it clear that the Russian attacks on thhe Donets front were strong. "At several points on the Donets front," said the daily communique, "our troops are resisting strong enemy attacks, supported by tanks."

Farther north the high command claimed "local successes."

Jap Cargo Ship Sunk

Tokyo (from Japanese broadcasts), May 14 (AP).—A large Japanese merchant vessel has been torpedoed and sunk in the eastern part of the South China sea by an enemy submarine but the submarine itself is believed to have been sunk, an official announcement said today.

The war and navy ministries said the merchant ship was under naval escort when attacked on May 8.

"The sunken vessel," said the announcement, "carried as passengers persons engaged in economic activities in the southern regions.

"A torpedo hit the vessel and set the ship ablaze. It is revealed that up to the present 541 persons have been saved."

Jane's Tells of Great Navy Building Race

Japs Constructing 5 Battleships, U. S. 17 And 6 Battle Cruisers

By Alfred E. Wall
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, May 14.—Spare outlines of the greatest battleship building race in history, that between the navies of the United States and Japan, are sketched by the new 1941 edition of Jane's Fighting Ships, the authoritative naval annual made public today.

To previously known details of the Japanese capital ship program, a huge effort in relation to Japan's resources, the new edition adds the names of the last three of a group of five fighting monsters of "more than 40,000 tons."

Two of the five, the Nissin and Takamatu, are completed or near completion, the annual indicates, while the other three, now identified as the Kii, Owari and Tosa, probably are not far from ready, the last having been laid down 2½ years ago.

Tremendous U. S. Program

Against these, the new Jane's describes progress on 17 tremendous United States battleship and six battle cruisers.

"Never before has such a quantity of capital ship construction been under construction at the same time for any country," says the foreword. "A similar remark applies to aircraft carriers and cruisers for the United States Navy, numbering 11 and 40, while the number of destroyers building challenges comparison with the program of 1918 (when America was carrying out the largest destroyer program in history).

"All six of the 35,000-ton Washington class have been launched. Two of them are in service and one, if not two, may be ready before the next issue of this annual appears.

"Six battleships of the Iowa class of 45,000 tons and five of the Montana class either are under construction or are in process of being laid down.

"The first of a class of six battle cruisers, the Alaska, was laid down in December, 1941."

Jap Battle Line of 14

Completion of Japan's five new battleships is expected to give her a battle line of at least 14 ships, including nine pre-Washington conference vessels and excluding the Haruna, listed in United States records as sunk off the Philippines.

(The United States lists two others as damaged.

(United States capital ship strength is given in latest Washington tabulations as 15, including the North Carolina and Washington—of the new 35,000-ton class—and excluding one battleship sunk and one damaged.)

Concerning the British navy the new edition's most interesting contribution is pictures of new cruisers of the 8000-ton Mauritius class and the 5450-ton Dido class. It also includes a picture of the 33,950-ton battleship Nelson under way after being holed by an Italian torpedo.

Jap Naval Picture Uncertain

The new book records a class of 12,000 or 15,000-ton Japanese warships apparently modeled after Germany's pocket battleships and known as the Chichibu class. Jane's says these actually are heavy armored cruisers rather than battleships. It lists them this year in place of three similar ships identified last year as the Kadekura, Kasino and Hachijo, to which the 1940 edition attributed six 12-inch guns each instead of the 8-inch guns carried by most cruisers and larger than the 11-inch guns of the German pocket battleships.

"Before Japan entered the war (in December, 1941), a good deal of fresh information had been collected, some of it certainly of less definite character than could have been desired by enabling a clearer account to be given of the Japanese navy," the annual said. "The actual number of capital ships under construction still is somewhat doubtful nor are the names absolutely certain."

The Nissin, it added, may turn out to be an airplane carrier while the Takamatu may wind up in the Chichibu class of pocket battleships. These two, however, still are listed in the group of five 40,000-tonners.

Jap Sub Total Put at 80

The Kii, Owari and Tosa all are named for ancient provinces of Japan in keeping with the nomenclature which assigns names of provinces or famous mountains to capital ships. They take the place of three huge ships of these names which Japan had laid down or projected in the great program which was scrapped as a result of the 1921-22 Washington conference.

The book noted a slight increase in Japanese cruiser and destroyer strength over that listed in the last edition, and said it was "believed that the total Japanese submarine strength is over 80."

Jane's said "a certain shrinkage is observable in the pages devoted to the German navy, which appears to have done little or nothing to replace its losses in capital ships and cruisers." (Chiefly the 35,000-ton Bismarck and the pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee.)

It noted that identification numbers of German submarines now are known to run as high as U-570, but added that "this does not necessarily imply that the total built is equal to this figure, since the numbering is done on an arbitrary basis, leaving gaps between groups."

Japan's Cruiser Strength Depleted

Jane's noted that in the list of the Italian navy "gaps are rapidly growing and would be still more frequent were it possible to identify all the cruisers and destroyers sunk in encounters with the British Mediterranean fleet.

"It seems probable that not more than half the cruisers with which Italy entered the war have survived, nor is it believed that there has been any substantial reinforcement from the list of ships under construction, presumably owing to a shortage of steel and other metals."

The yearbook said news of the Russian navy "remains scanty," adding that "little can be ascertained about war losses, though undoubtedly enemy claims are exaggerated."

Allies Sink Jap Ship At Amboina

By Lee Van Atta
International News Service Staff Writer

United Nations Headquarters in Australia, May 14.—American and Australian fliers roared out over the shark-infested Arafura Sea today to blast at the Japanese-held Island of Amboina in the Netherlands Indias. One 3000-ton enemy ship in Ambon Harbor was sunk and two other vessels damaged.

Amboina, second largest naval base in the Netherlands Indies, was one of the first points in the rich island empire to be attacked by the Japanese in their conquest of the area. It is more than 650 miles from Australia.

Enemy ships in the harbor were attacked by heavy bombers which flew more than 1300 miles to accomplish their mission. The damaged ships were of 3000 and 2000 tons, respectively. A wharf was left flaming.

Complete Surprise

Amboina is one of the most important Japanese bases in the Southwest Pacific. Second only to Sourabaya as a naval base, it is a direct stepping stone for the Japs in their drive southward.

The attack was a complete surprise.

[The leader of the attacking squadron, according to the Associated Press, said:

["We could see the terrified Japs run in all directions on the ships," he said. "They didn't have time to man the guns until after the bombs were dropped.

["Over the bay we saw hundreds of natives scurrying away in canoes. Unlike the Japs, we did not machine-gun them."]

Other United Nations bombers again visited the battered Japanese base of Rabaul, New Britain Island. A group of 15 enemy bombers was surprised on the ground. Three were seen to blow up, while many others were severely damaged, if not destroyed. Enemy shipping in the harbor was attacked with good effect.

Two Zeros Shot Down

"Enemy fighters were in the air but did not engage us," the communique announced.

Six enemy Zero (naval) fighters attempted to stage a low-level attack on Port Moresby, southeastern New Guinea. Two of them were shot down and one was damaged.

Meanwhile, reports carried by American press associations that the Japanese fleet was massing behind a screen of islands for a fresh invasion attempt against Australia did not find confirmation anywhere in Australia.

Official quarters would not comment, but correspondents at advanced bases said they saw no indications of any new Japanese fleet movement.

First Synthetic Rubber Is Made In Defense Plant

Akron, Ohio, May 14 (AP).—The Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. announced today manufacture of "the first synthetic rubber to be produced in any of the new synthetic rubber plants being erected for the Government's Defense Plant Corporation."

A test run of several thousand pounds was pronounced satisfactory, the company announced, adding "regular production is expected to get under way in a few days and will increase to plant capacity as raw materials become available."

Firestone said the first batch of synthetic rubber from the new plant was used "in making the latest type combat tire for military vehicles."

President John W. Thomas said "while definite progress is being made in our synthetic rubber program, there is no justification for any civilian car owner to expect any relief for a long while."

It's All A Military Secret

JOHN THOMAS HEBBE, 4, was the first casualty of the war treated at Bellevue Hospital, N. Y. The boy was in Pearl Harbor during the Jap attack and arrived last week in New York. His arm was somehow broken en route. How it happened is a "military secret," his mother said burns.

It was a slow, sad procession.

These men were all heroes. They had fed the guns in battle and served below decks during the cannonade.

One man waved his left arm, his only unbandaged limb, at a group of hospital nurses on a balcony.

The first intimation that the sailors who had fought the battle were ashore leaked out in a hotel where three sailors drank silently and then broke their glasses deliberately.

"What did you do that for," asked the hotel keeper.

The reply was:

"You'd better go away. We're toasting comrades who did not come back."

Nothing more was said.

Japs Exaggerated Allied Sea Losses, Nazis Admit

Berlin (From German Broadcasts), May 14 (AP).—Rear Admiral Luetzow, German naval spokesman, said today in a weekly talk over the Berlin radio that first Japanese reports of the Coral Sea naval battle had greatly exaggerated Allied losses.

Luetzow cited specifically the reported sinking of the British battleship Warspite, but said "such errors were promptly put right in later Japanese reports."

Photos Refute Jap Claim Weather Ended Battle

Melbourne, May 14 (U.P.).—Tokyo radio's alibi that last week's Coral Sea battle was interrupted by bad weather was blasted today by photographs, taken from an American bomber flying at 18,000 feet, which showed that the entire engagement was fought in clear, perfect weather.

The photographs were shown to war correspondents and are expected to be released shortly for general publication.

Dispatches from Canberra revealed, meanwhile, that Australia had worked out a plan whereunder members of the militia may be dispatched for service outside Australian territory.

It was announced after a conference between Army Minister F. M. Forde and Lieut. Gen. Sir Thomas Blamey, head of the United Nations ground forces under Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

Members of the militia, the announcement said, now are eligible to volunteer in the Australian Imperial Force.

Japs Continue Burma Road Advance

come to the aid of the retreating Burma army. New Delhi announced a successful bomb and machine gun attack on Japanese paddle steamers and barges, moving up the Chindwin.)

Much of the Chinese-Japanese fighting both in Yunnan Province of China and in northern and eastern Burma constituted attempts by both sides to execute encircling movements, none of them wholly successful to date.

Chinese troops who some days ago reoccupied Maymyo, on the Mandalay-Lashio railway which connects with the Burma Road, were reported, however, to have more or less isolated the Japanese in Bhamo and Myitkyina to the north by disrupting their communications.

In eastern China, meanwhile, 30,000 Japanese troops have begun a drive aimed at wiping up all territory from which Allied air raids might be directed against Japan proper, a Chinese military spokesman reported tonight.

He said these troops were massed in Siaoshan, on the Chientang River south of Hangchow in Chekiang Province. They are driving toward the provincial capital of Kinhwa, he said, advancing along a railway, but have been repulsed by the Chinese while trying to cross the Puyang River.

French to Immobilize Three Warships

been pursued with Admiral Georges Robert, the French high commissioner at Martinique, and any consultation with Vichy has been pointedly omitted.

This Government's spokesmen have been Admiral John H. Hoover, the commanding naval officer in the Caribbean, and Samuel Reber, of the State Department's western European division. Admiral Hoover has made two visits to Martinique within the last week.

Robert was offered an arrangement, under which the French flag would continue to fly over Martinique, Guareloupe and French Guiana, and he would be recognized as the ultimate government authority in those territories.

In return, it was asked that steps be taken to prevent any Axis use of the French possessions, and keep them from becoming in any way a menace to the United States and its Allies.

It was uncertain what other question remained to be settled, but presumably they included the disposition of a large number of airplanes, American-built fighter craft, which were en route to France in 1940, but got no farther than Martinique.

Lieut. Roscoe Franklin Dillen, jr., is the son of Capt. Roscoe F. Dillen, U. S. N., retired, who formerly was chief of staff of the Asiatic Fleet.

Born in the District in 1914, Lieutenant Dillen attended the Brent School in Baguio, Philippine Islands, and later came back to Washington to attend Western High.

He entered the Naval Academy from his father's home State of Indiana in 1931, was graduated in 1935, and was assigned to duty on the U. S. S. Maryland, attached to the Pacific Fleet.

Lieutenant Dillen's wife lives with her mother, Mrs. Howard Meyers, at 2126 Connecticut Avenue Northwest.

Sidney Griffith Amory

Sidney Griffith Amory, 21, son of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony G. Amory, 4816 North Sixteenth Road, Arlington, reported among the missing in the battle of Java, February 27-March 3, enlisted in the Navy in December, 1938.

He attended Gordon Junior High School in Washington.

His father said he last saw his son in Norfolk, Va. in 1939 when he was attending the training school. He was a fireman on a destroyer.

Lieut. John F. Woodruff

Lieut. (j. g.) John Ford Woodruff, reported missing by the Navy Department after the sinking of the Houston, is a native of New York State.

He was appointed to the Naval Academy from New Hampshire in 1934 and was graduated in 1938, when he was a member of the Navy track team.

His wife, the former Marjorie Damon, of 3519 Prospect Avenue Northwest, has received one letter from him since war was declared.

Lieut. Robert B. Fulton

Lieutenant Fulton was reported missing in the sinking of the cruiser Houston during the battle of Java. The Navy reported the sinking May 14.

He was born December 22, 1910, in Burlington, Vt., and came to Washington at the age of 4. A cadet captain at Central High School here, he went on to the Naval Academy in 1928.

He was assigned to duty with the Asiatic Fleet last summer. Earlier in the year he completed postgraduate work at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. His wife, Mrs. Frances McCarley Fulton, and a 2½-year-old son, William L. Fulton 2d, live with Lieutenant Fulton's parents at 5510 Thirty-second Street Northwest. His father is William L. Fulton, ICC examiner.

Lieut. Leon W. Rogers

Exactly three months ago today Lieutenant Rogers, the son of Interstate Commerce Commissioner John L. Rogers, mailed his last letter home to his parents, who live at 45 T Street Northeast.

Lieutenant Rogers, who was transferred last summer to duty with the Asiatic Fleet, was born August 9, 1915, in Knoxville, Tenn., and was brought to Washington when he was 2 years old. He attended McKinley High School and Columbian Preparatory School here and Bolles School in Jacksonville, Fla., and entered the Naval Academy from Minnesota in 1934.

After graduation in 1938 he served aboard the heavy cruiser Northampton and the mine-laying destroyer Pruett. In 1940 he was sent to the Hawaiian Islands as camera officer.

His parents live here with another son, John L., jr., a law student at George Washington University. His wife is the former Miss Virginia Bonzer of Long Beach, Calif.

Thomas Addison Wetherall

Three small children and a wife are anxiously awaiting at their Laytonsville (Md.) home further news from Chief Pharmacist's Mate Thomas Addison Wetherall.

Wetherall, who is 36, has served all over the world in the Naval Medical Corps, including a two-year tour at Naval Hospital in Washington and two years at Annapolis. He attended schools in Terre Haute, Ind., his native city, and also attended George Washington University here while he was on duty at the hospital.

He left October 8 for service in Pacific waters and his wife was notified April 4 that he was missing in action. He has three sisters, Mrs. Mary West, Akron, Ohio; Miss Iona Wetherell, Robinson, Ill., and Mrs. Carsa Hieny, Orlando, Fla.

Roy W. Lanham

Roy W. Lanham, 22, seaman second class, of Landover, Md., was a high school cadet at Eastern and later learned to fly at local airports.

A member of the Navy Reserve, he enlisted for active duty last November and after a training period was assigned as a member of the crew of an armed merchantman, which was reported sunk off the coast of South America.

He had made his home with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Lanham, and two younger sisters, Mary and Helen. He has two brothers, Olin, 32, of Landover; and Aubrey, 27, of Seat Pleasant.

Paul Eugene Phillips

Paul Eugene Phillips, 29, a storekeeper aboard the U. S. S. Langley, lived at Berwyn, Md. His parents, Justice of the Peace George Phillips and Mrs. Phillips, were notified that he was not accounted for.

Phillips was educated at the Berwyn Elementary School and Hyattsville High School, stopping at the end of his second year to join the Navy.

He served several years aboard the New York and reenlisted in the Navy Flying Corps, stationed at Hampton Roads, Va. He later was transferred to the Langley.

His parents heard from him about a week after the attack on Pearl Harbor.

Max Newton Schuler

Max Newton Schuler, 21, fireman, first class, was born in the home where his father now lives in Silver Hill, Md. After attending Surrattsville High School, he enlisted in the Navy in June of 1939.

After his basic training at Norfolk, he was assigned to the Pennsylvania and was transferred to the Perry in November. The Perry was reported sunk off Darwin February 19.

His relatives are his father, Gustav M. Schuler, an employe at the Washington Navy Yard; three sisters, Mrs. Mary Caputo of Bradbury Heights, Md., Martha Caputo of Washington, Mrs. Anna Stanford of Kenilworth; and a younger brother, Richard.

Filmore Ernest Burton

Filmore Ernest Burton, 22-year-old Hyattsville (Md.) resident, is a fireman, first class, and enlisted in the Navy nearly three years ago.

Born in the District, he moved to Hyattsville with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Burton, when he was 6.

Always fond of the water, he enlisted after his graduation from Hyattsville High School in 1939.

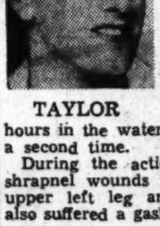
Reported Missing, Virginia Sailor Is Home Wounded

James F. Taylor, 23, whose name appeared in the list of missing naval men, now is recuperating from injuries at the home of his mother, Mrs. Gussie Thomas in Strasburg, Va.



TAYLOR

An aviation metal smith, second class, he was aboard the Langley, which was sunk during bomber attacks. Later the Pecos, on which he and many of his comrades were rescued, also was sunk. After hours in the water, he was rescued a second time.

During the action, he sustained shrapnel wounds in his left knee, upper left leg and left arm. He also suffered a gash above the right eye.

In a hospital in Australia, he heard his name broadcast as missing, sent his mother, a cablegram, and later returned home.

STORE UP IRON for YOUR BLOOD
Get Vitamin B for Your Nerves

When the body craves these vital elements, a rich supply will put color in your checks, enrich your blood, benefit your glands and other organs WITHOUT ALCOHOL OR HABIT-FORMING DRUGS.

When your system is low in iron and vitamin B all your organs slow down—you look bad, get tired easily, and feel played out. Iron makes red blood and red blood is vital for healthy muscles, healthy skin, healthy glands and healthy organs. Iron-poor blood may cause low vitality, heart palpitations, shortness of breath, swollen ankles and frequent periods of ill health.

Your nerves need vitamin B and so do your stomach and bowels; if you don't have enough Vitamin B you may get a painful neuritis, stomach upsets, constipation, weak appetite, mental depression, restless sleep and you can suffer in other ways.

In these conditions, you need ENRICH, the thrilling new tonic that tastes like juice of wild cherries and gives you more iron every day than a bushel of spinach or boxes of raisins; more vitamin B daily than 8 ordinary cakes of yeast. Your pep comes back with a bounce when you restore missing iron and Vitamin B, and you eat more, stop worrying, and sleep better. Thousands of men and women feel keen and lead happier lives, through the help of ENRICH. Don't wait.

One bottle, $1.79; full course treatment, large size, $3.19. Money refunded unless ENRICH improves your state of well being.

AVIATION
HOW THEY FLY AND WHY

Prepare for your part in War Production and on the Home Front—with well-written

Technical and Defense Books

T1. THE ABC OF AVIATION. By Lieut. Col. Victor W. Page, U. S. Air Corps Reserve. New enlarged edition, up-to-date. An introduction to the study of aviation for students, mechanics and non-technical people wishing a groundwork in the basic principles of aviation. $2.48

T2. AEROPLANE RADIO EQUIPMENT. E. Molloy, Editor. A survey of the two leading British makes of equipment—The Marconi and Standard Ranges—and of representative American radio equipment. $2.50

T3. AIRCRAFT PRODUCTION. By E. Molloy. A practical survey of materials and processes used in the construction of modern aircraft. $1.69

T4. AIR RAID DEFENSE (CIVILIAN). By Dr. Curt Wachtel. The most effective measures and methods now practiced in Europe. Includes protection against fire, gases, explosives; air raid shelters, warnings, rescue works, health defense; coordination of air raid defense. $3.50

T5. AIR RAID PRECAUTIONS. Scientific data on shelters, watch towers, respirators, others, and general information on tools, clothing, care and custody of equipment. $3.00

T6. AVIATION INSTRUMENT MANUAL. The construction, use and maintenance of instruments used in airplanes and of instruments used on the ground associated with those of airplanes. $5.00

T7. BARLOW'S TABLES OF SQUARES, Cubes, Square Roots, Cube Roots and Reciprocals. By L. J. Comrie. These well-known tables have been reset in modern types. For mathematicians, astronomers, surveyors, opticians, statisticians, engineers, physicists. Particularly useful for those using calculating machines. $3.00

T8. CABLES AND WIRES. By J. Rosslyn. Deals with the construction of all the main types of power cables, their characteristics and selection for various working conditions. Over 100 illustrations. $1.98

T9. CHEMICAL DICTIONARY. By F. H. Campbell, D.S.C. A concise dictionary of frequently used terms and of new terms. $2.50

T10. THE CHEMICAL FORMULARY. Compiled by a staff of experts. H. Bennett, Editor in Chief. An up-to-date collection of valuable and tested formulae for making thousands of products in every field of industry. Explains each step in the production of the finished product, new methods of working and new uses of the product. Nearly 700 pages. $6.00

T11. CHEMICAL WARFARE. By Curt Wachtel. An outstanding authority presents the history and classification of war gases according to composition and physiological effects, the psychological social and economic aspects and treatment and protection. For the layman as well as the scientific worker. $4.00

T12. CIVIL DEFENSE. By C. W. Glover. A most complete and authoritative book on methods of safeguarding civilian populations against aerial attack. Deals with communal and individual shelters, respirators, conversion of buildings, camouflage, trenches, evacuation, protection for city and country and other vital phases. Over 700 pages, fully illustrated and up-to-date. $16.50

T13. THE DETECTON AND IDENTIFICATION OF WAR GASES. Describes their properties, methods of detection, responsibilities of gas identification officers; and tables of properties, reactions and odors and irritant effects of war gases. $1.50

T14. A DICTIONARY OF METALS AND THEIR ALLOYS. By F. J. Camm. Composition and characteristics of every known metal and almost every type of commercial metallic alloy. $3.00

T15. DICTIONARY OF RADIO AND TELEVISION TERMS. By Ralph Stranger. Also scientific terms allied to these subjects. $2.50

T16. DIESEL ENGINE OPERATION. By E. Molloy. For erectors, installation and plant engineers and for all concerned with the practical side of Diesel engine operation. With 60 illustrations. $1.69

T17. DRILLING AND GRINDING. By E. Molloy. A practical treatise on drilling and grinding machines, and the methods and machines used in precision grinding. With many illustrations. $1.69

T18. ELECTRICAL AND RADIO NOTES FOR WIRELESS OPERATORS. An excellent reference book on the development of all types of wireless communications. Should be in the library of every wireless operator. $1.98

T19. ELECTRO-PLATING AND ANODISING. By J. Rosslyn. Deals with gold, silver, nickel, copper, chromium, cadmium and zinc plating. Also anodising and aluminum plating. With 90 illustrations. $1.98

T20. ELEMENTARY MATHEMATICS FOR ENGINEERS. By Sir Ambrose Fleming. The practical portions of ten departments of mathematics for engineering students. $2.50

T21. ELEMENTS OF FIELD ARTILLERY. By Leslie Edwards Babcock. An authoritative handbook that includes chapters on field guns, automatic rifles, explosives, fire control instruments, radio in artillery, liaison, other related subjects. Illustrated, 870 pages. $1.49

T22. THE ENGINEER'S MANUAL. By F. J. Camm. For designers, draughtsmen, toolmakers, turners, fitters, erectors, foundrymen, millwrights, and all those engaged in the practical branches of mechanical engineering. With 345 illustrations. $1.98

T23. FACTORY INSTALLATION WORK. By A. J. Coker. A practical work for electrical installation engineers and contractors, plant engineers and electricians. $2.50

T24. FORENSIC CHEMISTRY. By H. T. F. Rhodes. A practical guide to the chemical laboratory methods of the identification of the person through examination of stains, firearms and explosives, questioned documents, counterfeit money and toxic agents. $5.00

T25. GEARS AND GEAR-CUTTING. By F. J. Comm. Deals with methods of cutting all types of gears, including spir, helical, worm, bevel, spiral and screw gears. Over 100 illustrations. $1.69

T26. GLOSSARY OF AERONAUTICAL TERMS. By Douglas H. Nelson. For those engaged in aircraft construction, in flying or maintenance of aircraft. $1.50

T27. THE HOME GUARD TRAINING MANUAL. Edited by J. Langdon-Davies, War Correspondent in Spain and Finland, and revised by General Sir A. Godley. Tells how to organise and train a home guard and covers fieldcraft, gas, antitank and antiaircraft, village defense and street fighting, rifles, hand grenades and automatics, others. Illustrated. $2.50

T28. HYDRAULIC MACHINERY. By E. Molloy. Deals with the design, application, operation and maintenance of hydraulic presses and shears, including those used in the manufacture of armaments. With 50 photographs and diagrams. $1.69

T29. INTRODUCTORY PHYSICS. By L. Grant Hector. A first year textbook for college students, presenting the subject as a living science. Offers not only fundamentals but a perspective of Physics as whole, its relation to other sciences and to life, and the working methods of the scientist. 89c

T30. JIGS, TOOLS AND FIXTURES. By P. Gates. Drawing and design of equipment for practically 11 modern machine tools, with chapters on special equipment and drawing office procedure. $4.00

T31. LATHEWORK. By E. Molloy. A practical guide to the use of the engine and toolroom lathe, and the setting and operation of capstan, turret and automatic lathes. $1.69

T32. MANUAL OF AIR NAVIGATION. A handy reference book including the latest developments in the theory and practice of air navigation. Deals with instruments and general practice in use, flying controlled by radio beams and other important data. Illustrated with photographs and diagrams. $3.50

T33. MECHANICAL POWER TRANSMISSION. By E. Molloy. For factory engineers, fitters, erectors, and all concerned with industrial power transmission. Notes on fitting belts, V-rope drive, friction clutches, and the installation of magnetic clutches. Illustrated. $1.69

T34. MEDICAL MANUAL OF CHEMICAL WARFARE. Methods of minimizing effects of chemical warfare substances, for medical officers of the defense services. $2.50

T35. METEROLOGY FOR AVIATORS. By R. C. Sutcliffe. Organization of a meteorological bureau and interpretation of results of weather forecasting. $4.00

T36. MILLING PRACTICE. By E. Molloy. Describes modern types of milling machines such the various forms of milling cutters employed in modern production work. 97 illustrations, photos and diagrams. $1.69

T37. MODERN NAVAL STRATEGY. By Admiral Sir Reginald Bacon and F. E. McMurtrie. Acquainting the layman with practical principles of war and peace strategy; air attack; amphibious warfare; convoys; psychology and its effect on strategy. Includes maps and diagrams. $3.50

T38. PATTERNMAKING AND FOUNDRY WORK. By E. Molloy. A practical manual dealing with the making of wood and metal patterns and the operation of moulding and casting, including die-casting. With 135 photographs and diagrams. $1.69

T39. PIPES AND VALVES. By E. Molloy. Devoted to practical methods of installing piping of all kinds, together with the necessary valves and coupling. With 167 illustrations. $1.69

T40. PLANNED AIR RAID PRECAUTIONS. By "Tecton." Improving the recognized type of shelter and a plan for complete protection of a city's whole population. Vividly illustrated. $2.50

T41. PLASTIC MOLDING. By D. A. Earle. The how, when, where and what of commercial molding; examples of shop practice and layout, and estimating costs. $4.00

T42. POWER FACTOR PROBLEMS IN ELECTRICITY SUPPLY. By G. W. Stubbings. A simple and comprehensive explanation of the problems arising from the low power factor of A. C. electrical supplies. For power plant engineers, electricians and students. $2.50

T43. POWER RECTIFIERS. By H. Rosslyn. Rectifiers used in connection with railways, electroplating plant, cinema projectors, welding and battery-charging equipment. $2.50

T44. PRACTICAL DESIGN OF SMALL MOTORS AND TRANSFORMERS. By E. Molloy. Data for the design, construction and rewinding of small motors, dynamos and power transformers. $2.00

T45. PRESSURE GAUGES, INDICATORS, THERMOMETERS, PYROMETERS. By James Smith. A handbook for the practical man and the student. $1.50

T46. PRODUCTION ENGINEERING. By E. J. H. Jones. Jig and tool designing for the designer, the technical college lecturer and the student. $5.00

T47. PUMPS AND PUMPING. By E. Molloy. A manual on the operation, installation and maintenance of reciprocating, centrifugal and rotary pumps. With 100 illustrations. $1.69

T48. RADIO ENGINEERING POCKETBOOK. By F. J. Camm. Includes arithmetical, geometrical and trigonometrical formulae and a cross-referenced index. $1.50

T49. RADIO NAVIGATION. By W. J. Allan. Describing the most modern apparatus available to the radio operator concerned with navigation problems. $1.50

T50. RUBBER AND ITS USE. By Harry L. Fisher. A practical discussion of what it is, its history, where it comes from, how it is obtained, and how it is manufactured into countless articles of daily use. $1.69

T51. SHEET-METAL WORK. By E. Molloy. Dealing with the methods of working sheet metal into various forms, using hand tools and simple machines. With 95 illustrations. $1.69

T52. STEAM ENGINES AND BOILERS. By E. Molloy. Describes the main types of land, locomotive and marine boilers, and the operation of reciprocating engines and condensing plant. With 115 illustrations. $1.69

T53. THE STRUCTURE OF METALS AND ALLOYS. By Wm. Hume-Rothery. Fundamental principles and changes due to recent research on whose theories have undergone electrons and the atomic structure. $2.00

T54 TEST ENGINEERS' HANDBOOK. By E. Molloy. Covers the testing of steam and internal combustion engines, and also the work of testing of engineering materials. 105 illustrations. $1.69

T55. TESTING ELECTRICAL INSTALLATIONS AND MACHINES. By J. R. Stuart. Tests for wiring installations, transformers and motors, and localizing of faults on distribution cables. $2.50

T56. WARTIME BUILDING CONSTRUCTION. Stressing the necessary fire protection, and including construction of single story buildings for armed forces, temporary offices and hospitals. $4.00

T57. WEATHER PREDICTION. By Major R. M. Lester. How you can predict the weather with surprising accuracy. With photographs, charts, maps. $4.25

T58. WIRING CIRCUITS, FOR LIGHTING, POWER AND INDUSTRIAL CONTROL. By J. R. Stuart. Selected circuit diagrams for the busy electrical engineer. $2.50

T59. WORKSHOP CALCULATIONS, TABLES AND FORMULAE. By F. J. Camm. Methods of calculation, solutions and the rules and formulae necessary in workshop processes. $1.50

T60. INTRODUCTION TO WORKS PRACTICE. By E. Molloy. A complete survey of the processes and operations involved in engineering manufacture. Chapters on blueprint reading, the micrometer and vernier caliper and workshop calculations. 108 illustrations. $1.69

T61. STEDMAN'S SHORTER MEDICAL DICTIONARY. By Thomas L. Stedman, M. D. Completely revised and enlarged 1942 edition. A handy volume for doctors, dentists, pharmacists, veterinarians and the general public. With thumb index. $2.50

T62. WELDING AND METAL CUTTING. By E. Molloy. A practical survey of the three main types of welding, namely the oxy-acetylene process, electric arc welding, and electric resistance welding. $2.50

T63. SHORT-WAVE MANUAL. By F. J. Camm. It covers the whole subject of short-wave aerial systems, eliminating interference, bandspread tuning, H. F. amplification, the Morse code, aerial couplings, others. $2.50

Army Ordered To Take Over All Airlines

luxurious airliners to cargo planes, and operate them for the Army Air Service Command. Title to the planes will remain in the companies and airline personnel will fly them under contract to the Army.

The remaining ships, about half of those now in commercial service, will continue to be owned and flown by the airlines "until further notice" but will be subject to call by the Army for emergency work at any time.

Duplication to Go

New schedules, worked out by the Civil Aeronautics Board, will soon go into effect, the War Department said, with all routes and services not "essential to the war program" eliminated.

Under this move, the Government is expected to do away with duplication of service by competing lines and rearrange and reapportion franchises generally.

Air travel vital to the country's needs, the War Department said, will continue, but under a strict system of priorities to be enforced by agencies set up in various parts of the country.

Everyone who can travel by train must do so except in real emergencies, it was made plain. Army and Navy officers and officials of war agencies will not be entitled to use the airlines merely because of their status, it was said.

Air Mail Affected

Priorities on air travel have been in effect since the war began, but the new arrangement will be much stricter, it was said.

The War Department said that for the present, air mail service will continue over the shortened routes, but added that "it may become necessary to curtail this service still more at a later date."

There was no immediate indication of the routes and flights to be eliminated under the move nor was the time indicated when they will go into effect. Airline officials will meet here with representatives of the Army and CAB today to work out details of the order.

"The entire plan," the War Department said in its announcement, "follows the intent of the law setting up the airlines as an element of national defense and has been drawn up for the purpose of further utilizing in the war effort the equipment of the airlines and the valuable experience of their trained personnel. The War Department is confident of the complete cooperation of both the carrier companies and the general public in putting it in into operation promptly and effectively."

Suspect Admits Setting Great R. I. Forest Fires

Hartford, Conn., May 14 (AP).—The Connecticut and Rhode Island State police announced jointly tonight the arrest of a man they said had admitted starting forest fires which swept a wide area in both States two weeks ago, causing damage estimated as high as three million dollars.

State Police Commissioner Edward J. Hickey said the man was Edward Francis LaCasse, 30, of Plainfield. He was being held in Kingston, R. I., tonight, and the commissioner said a bench warrant charging arson would be sought in Superior Court at Putnam, Conn., tomorrow.

Hickey said there was no suspicion of sabotage, and he described the man as a pyromaniac who was unable to give any explanation for his alleged acts.

D. C. Man Named For Rear Admiral

By the Associated Press

President Roosevelt yesterday nominated William R. Munroe, jr., 56, of Waco, Texas, and John Franklin Shafroth, jr., 55, of Washington, D. C., to be rear admirals.

Both men presently hold the rank of captain although for some time they have been performing the duties in serving in the temporary capacity of rear admiral.

Other captains nominated to be rear admirals included: Capt. James Lawrence Kauffman, 55, of Miamisburg, Ohio; Donald B. Beary, San Marino, Calif.

YANK IN AUSTRALIA SENDS WORD—Father, mother, brother and sisters of Pvt. Calvin Brockdorff hear his voice from Australia on a record presented by the American Red Cross. The message was transmitted by short wave. Mr. and Mrs. Henri C. Brockdorff and their children listen to the recording in their Takoma Park, Md., home

Members of the Henri C. Brockdorff family can congregate in the front room of their home at 212 Buffalo Avenue, Takoma Park, Md., any time they wish and hear the cheerful voice of their son and brother in far-off Australia, Pvt. Calvin Brockdorff, with this greetin:

"Hello, Mother and Dad and all my brothers and sisters . . .

Calvin's voice, of course, is transcribed on a phonograph record, and the particular disk carrying his message is one of the first made available by the American Red Cross as part of its recently announced program to record soldier's words for delivery to their families back home.

Private Brockdorff's record recounts his trip to Australia, which took less time than he anticipated, and the friendly reception accorded the troops by Australians, whom he at first thought were merely being sorry for the Yankees because they were "so far away from home."

"But now I'm convinced that they really are sincere in their actions and that's their natural way of acting," he says.

The record, which was transcribed in Australia, shortwaved to America and then re-transcribed on wax here, urges "Peggy," described as a "neighborhood friend," to remember "all those plans we made before I left home because we're going through with them when I get home and that won't be very long."

Present in the Brockdorff home when the record was played for the first time this week were Mr. and Mrs. Brockdorff and six of their ten children, including Beverly, the youngest son, and their five married daughters: Mrs. George White, who lives with her parents while her husband is serving with the Army; Mrs. Walter White, Silver Spring; Mrs. Earl Lowe, 8101 Schrider Street Northwest; Mrs. Charles Krautler, 5616 Thirteenth Street Northwest, and Mrs. J. D. McIntosh, who also lives at home.

Japs Admit Consuls Ran Propaganda

nese, who are not on trial, having gotten safely back to Tokyo.

Brought from the District Jail, Obana told the court that the Japanese consul general came to every meeting, in which the men of Jikyoku Iinkai drafted the speeches and pamphlets put out by Ryder, Williams and Townsend. Often, said Obana, the consul for San Francisco came, too.

Brought from internment at Fort Meade, under Army guard, Kiyoshi Miyazaki, former New York manager for the industrial trust, Mitsui, testified that the consular propaganda agency was greatly concerned over the Foreign Agents Act. It was decided that Williams should register, Miyazaki said.

"But not Mr. Ryder," he added, smiling at the jurors. "It was felt that this would impair his value."

John A. Piggott, of counsel for Mitsui, said his firm was consulted by Jikyoku Iinkai about the Foreign Agents Act. Piggott testified that he derided the suggestion that the propaganda agency was a "trade" organization, although he did not know that the Japanese government was putting up the money.

Piggott said he warned the nominal chairman, Takahashi:

"One more incident like the Panay and we'll put you boys behind bars! This stuff you are putting out is propaganda!"

Takahashi, Piggott said, suggested that the agency's connection with Japan might be concealed, to eliminate the need of registration as a foreign agency.

Mails Barred for Good To Philadelphia Herold

The Postoffice Department yesterday brushed aside a promise to be patriotic, and permanently barred the weekly newspaper, Philadelphia Herold, from the United States mails.

"A reading of its editions ," said Assistant Solicitor Calvin W. Hassell, "will show that they have devoted themselves to defending and comforting the enemy."

Meanwhile, the special grand jury on Axis agents which is probing the defeatist press, grilled the Boston Christian Front leader, Francis P. Moran, for two hours. Also questioned was his wife. They were surmised to have been called in connection with the investigation of Carles E. Coughlin's weekly, Social Justice, which folded up and was barred from the mails some weeks ago.

The special grand jury will resume its sessions next week.

2 Mission Groups Left $1000 Each

Grants of $1000 each went to two Baptist missionary societies and the National Women's Temperance League under the will of the late Mrs. Luella B. C. Osgood of Bethesda, it was announced yesterday by the Rockville Orphans Court.

The missionaries named were the American Baptist Foreign Missionary Society and the American Baptist Home Missionary Society.

The Bethesda Church received a bequest of $500 and 23 relatives and friends received sums ranging from $25 to $500.

Mrs. Osgood's husband, the late Rev. Bertram M. Osgood, was the founder of the Bethesda Church and was its pastor at the time of his death seven years ago.

Soldier Hero Saves Baby in Hotel Fire

Wichita Falls, Tex., May 14 (INS).—Corp. Albert D. Fulkerson, 25, of Columbus, Ohio, was hailed as a hero tonight for his rescue of an infant trapped alone on the fifth floor of the Texas Hotel when fire destroyed the structure.

Fulkerson, a drill instructor at Sheppard Field, soaked his clothing and blanket in water and carried the baby to the street. He suffered severe burns of the hands and lost personal effects valued at $100 in his room.

Chester F. Windell, of Dallas, and W. W. Collier, of Fort Worth, guests at the hotel, died of injuries in leaps to the street. Eleven other persons were injured.

Bulk of Army To Be Ready By Autumn

maneuvers, it was said, but will continue with the prescribed basic training until ready for the "postgraduate" work scheduled for the divisions that have been in training for at least a year.

In order to save the time required to assemble large bodies of troops, none of this year's battle practice will be on the scale of the maneuvers held last summer and fall, when huge field armies of hundreds of thousands of troops clashed in the South.

Corps Exercises Planned

Instead Army Corps exercises will be held in four areas—the new Desert Training Center in the West, Louisiana, North and South Carolina, and the Camp Forrest area in Tennessee.

At the same time, the War Department announced that four new divisions would be created in September. They will be numbered and assigned as follows: Ninety-fourth, Forth Custer, Mich.; Ninety-eighth, Camp Breckinridge, Morganfield, Ky.; 102nd, Camp Maxey, Paris, Tex., and 104th, Camp Adair, Corvallis, Oreg.

Officers and noncom cadres for the new units will be formed about the middle of June and detached from existing divisions about August 1. The four units are the latest of 32 new divisions to be added to the Army this year. Sixteen are already in process of formation.

Warning for West Coast

Secretary Stimson repeated at his press conference a warning given previously—his belief that the West Coast is in "real danger" of attack.

Commenting on the numerous air-raid alarms on the Pacific Coast, he declared that "they're on their toes out there. I'm glad they're alert. You can't be on the alert without going farther than necessary at particular times."

He said he had no more information "than anyone else" about reports the Germans are using poison gas, but added that the American Army is "prepared for threats of that sort."

The Secretary said he had no information to give out as to whether the forthcoming maneuvers would include practice in chemical warfare operations.

Discussing the field exercises, he said they will stress the offensive and be directed at hardening the troops. Every man must be able to make a continuous foot march of 25 miles with full equipment. Much of the time will be spent in training small units—companies, battalions and special task units.

"Antitank defenses, guerilla warfare, street fighting, defense of rivers and night operations will also be stressed," the Secretary said.

"This training will be given every semblance of reality. Much of it, at least one-third, will be at night. Smoke screens, aircraft of all types —including parachute troop carriers and transport planes — armored forces and all other weapons of modern warfare will be utilized in this phase."

Capital to See Big Parade Memorial Day

urged that the abandonment of the annual Army Day parade here on April 6 be reconsidered. The Post said:

"A good parade, with plenty of John Philip Sousa, and flags and pennants whipping in the breeze, is worth a billion words uttered by propaganda experts who still imagine that it is necessary to 'sell' the war to Americans. . . ."

Two arguments had been raised against an Army Day parade. One was that it would be dangerous to have a great concentration of troops and spectators here in view of the possibility of air raids. Maj. Edward J. Kelly, superintendent of police, said he had not even been consulted. Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, who was then commandant of the Washington Provisional Brigade, said he wasn't much impressed by the crowd argument.

Gen. Cox, who has since been transferred, said he had decided against an Army Day parade primarily because of the difficulty of getting troops, and because he was afraid it might interfere with Washington's war effort. Also he expressed the opinion that he knew of no city "less in need of a parade than Washington."

Ten days before Army Day, at another press conference, President Roosevelt was asked by a Washington Post reporter if he would use his "influence" to get the city a parade. He laughed and asked if the reporter was sure he had influence. Then he promised to talk the matter over with Secretary Stimson.

On the eve of Army Day, however, Secretary Stimson pointed out that Baltimore was to have a big parade, and he suggested that Washingtonians who "still have tires and gasoline" could go over to the Maryland metropolis.

Memorial Day will make up for all of that.

Pan American Union to Exhibit Refugee's Art

An exhibition of water-color sketches and mural designs by Ernesto Lothar, a citizen of Santo Domingo who recently escaped with his wife from the Gestapo in Germany, opened yesterday at the Pan American Union.

The exhibit, to continue for two weeks, is one of a series on South American art and industry sponsored by the Pan American Union.

Some of Lothar's work was exhibited last December in the International exposition at Trujillo City, Dominican Republic, and 100 of his character studies and landscapes are now on display in a New York art gallery.

Hours of the exhibit are 9 a. m. to 4 p. m. Monday through Friday, and 9 a. m. to 12:30 p. m. on Saturday.

Navy Officer Testifies on Ship Repairs

By the Associated Press

A Navy officer testified yesterday that Ralph D. Weyerbacher, general manager of the Cramp Shipbuilding Co., had attempted on several occasions to obtain rehabilitation work at the Philadelphia yard for one contractor on a negotiated basis.

Lieut. Roscoe A. Davidson, the Navy's assistant supervisor of ships in the Philadelphia area, told the House Naval Committee that Weyerbacher had "suggested" and at times "insisted" that the work go to Charles F. Rohleder without competitive bidding.

"The only inference here is that I tried to speed up the job by negotiated contracts," declared Weyerbacher after Representative Maas of Minnesota, the committe's ranking Republican member, broke into the naval officer's testimony to declare: "Some of this testimony constitutes inferentially an indictment of some people.

Up to Attorney General

"I don't know whether anything wrong has been done. That's for the Attorney General, to decide. But these men are entitled to a fair, opening hearing and I demand that Rohleder and Weyerbacher be given an opportunity to be heard."

The committee already has decided to turn over the evidence it collects in the investigation to the Department of Justice, and Maas said that the Federal Trade Commission would investigate practices of bidding on subcontracts at the shipyard.

Edmund Toland, the committee counsel, stated that the general manager of Cramps & Rohleder, general contractor for facilities at the shipyard, would be called to testify today. Weyerbacher had asked for an opportunity to present his side of the case.

Joseph P. Rainey, subcontractor for electrical work under Rohleder, under questioning, stated he had simultaneously:

1. Held a $130,000 electrical subcontract at Cramp's, on which he realized "about 12 per cent."
2. Received $125 a week "fee" from Rohleder for "supervising" work on another Cramp electrical contract held by Rohleder.
3. Supplied Rohleder with material under another subcontract.
4. Carried on work outside the shipyard.

Criticized, Dropped Fee

He said that he gave up the $125-a-week "fee" after naval committee investigators began their inquiry because of "criticism."

An unmailed letter from Rohleder to William M. Anderson, plumbing contractor, asking for help in obtaining complimentary bids for Rohleder, was introduced by Toland and Vincent Burns, committee investigator.

Rohleder, they said, wrote that Weyerbacher had promised to award him the job on repairing fire damage estimated at $60,000 in a building in the yard, but that "the Navy has come into the picture" and was getting "finicky" about producing competitive bids.

Burns testified the contractor explained he tore up the original letter to Anderson, but the copy remained in the office files.

Joseph P. Ripley of New York, chairman of Harriman, Ripley & Co., testified that the Harriman brothers, W. Averill and E. Roland, controlled the present Cramp Shipbuilding Co. through their holding companies, the American Ship & Commerce Co. and the Merchant Sterling Co.

Estimates By Telephone

Toland told the committee that its investigators found stationery of subcontractors in the desk of Allen M. Ward, former Rohleder employe.

Ward explained that on some occasions, when there was need for fast delivery of material, he obtained estimates of its cost by telephone and filled them out on stationery of the various companies.

Navy Cross Given To Capt. Robinson, Marblehead Chief

Secretary Knox presented a Navy Cross yesterday to Capt. Arthur Granville Robinson of Washington, the master of the American cruiser Marblehead which recently completed a 13,000-mile journey from the Java Sea to a United States port after being badly damaged.

The citation read by the Navy Secretary said:

"For distinguished service in the line of his profession as commanding officer of the U.S.S. Marblehead on February 4, 1942, during an engagement with superior Japanese enemy forces.

"While subject to heavy bombing by enemy aircraft, during which his ship suffered severe damage from two direct hits and one near miss, the personnel under his command engaged a large attacking force of Japanese bombing planes, and by effective use of the anti-aircraft batteries, destroyed two enemy planes and inflicted damage on others.

"The excellent seamanship displayed by Captain Robinson combined with the actions of his well-trained officers and crew resulted in saving his badly damaged and crippled ship."

New Jersey Jury Charges Link With World-Wide Plot

The Justice Department announced yesterday that a Federal grand jury at Trenton, N. J., had indicted eight corporations and 20 of their officials on a charge of world-wide conspiracy to monopolize the manufacture and sale of dyestuffs.

The actual defendants, topped by the giant E. I. duPont de Nemours & Co., are Americans, but the indictment named as co-conspirators the leading chemical companies in Germany, France, Great Britain, Switzerland and Japan, along with some satellite corporations in South America and Canada.

These were named defendants: Allied Chemical & Dye Corporation; E. I. duPont de Nemours & Co.; American Cyanamid Co.; General Aniline & Film Corporation; General Dyestuffs Corporation; Ciba Co., Inc.; Sandoz Chemical Works, Inc., and Geigy Co., Inc., all except duPont having headquarters in New York. DuPont's are in Wilmington, Del.

Officials Are Named

Also Bertrand A. Ludwig, Charles F. Weber and F. J. Emmerich, vice presidents of Allied Chemical; E. R. Ellis, foreign sales manager; Guy W. Talbert, general manager, and E. M. Maxwell, domestic sales manager, of national aniline and chemical division of Allied Chemical; Lammot duPont, chairman, W. S. Carpenter, jr., president; F. W. Pickard, vice president; Cesare Protto, director of the dyestuffs division, and Ambrose R. Chantler, director of sales, dyestuffs division of E. I. duPont.

Also Ernest K. Halback, president, and Rudolph Lenz, vice president, of General Dyestuff; F. M. Fargo, Jr., vice president and director, and Sidney C. Moody, sales manager, Calco chemical division of American Cyanamid; Hans Aickelin, former vice president of General Aniline; Walter Saenger, vice president, and William Zipse, vice president of Geigy; Edgar Gossweiler, vice president and treasurer of Sandoz, and Alfred Lichtenstein, president of Ciba.

The indictment alleges that a conspiracy was begun in 1929, with agreements involving DuPont and the leading British, German and Swiss companies, with the German dye trust, I. G. Farbenindustrie—largest corporation in the Reich—as the keystone.

Eliminated Competition

Summing up the results of the conspiracy, the indictment declared: "The defendants and co-conspirators have eliminated competition in the manufacture and sale of dyestuffs in the United States. They have restricted imports into and exports from the United States. They have exacted exorbitant prices from consumers of dyestuffs by fixing and maintaining uniform and arbitrary prices.

"They have also restricted the production of dyestuffs and dyestuff intermediates in the United States and have prevented other manufacturers from engaging in the production of dyestuffs. They have kept from all other groups in the industry and from consumers the benefit which would otherwise flow from free and vigorous competition."

Named as coconspirators were these corporations:

I. G. Farbenindustrie of Frankfurt Am Main, Germany; Society of Chemical Industry in Basle, Switzerland; Chemical Works (formerly Sandoz), Basle, Switzerland; J. R. Geigy, S. A., Basle; Cincinnati Chemical Works, Inc., Cincinnati, Ohio; Imperial Chemical Industries, Ltd., London, England; Francolor (formerly Compagnie Nationale de Matieries Colorantes et Manufactures de Products Reunies Establissements, (known as "Kuhlmann"), Paris, France; Mitsui Trading Co., Tokyo; Canadian Industries, Ltd., of Montreal; Industrias Quimicas Argentinas Duperial, of Buenos Aires, Argentina.

Several Other Firms

Also Industrias Chimicas Brasileiras Duperial of Rio de Janeiro, Brazil; National Aniline & Chemical Co., Inc., of New York, a wholly-owned subsidiary of Allied Chemical; the Calco Chemical Co., Inc., of Bound Brook, N. J.; General Aniline Works, Inc. (formerly Grasselli Dyestuff Corporation) of New York, a wholly-owned subsidiary of General Aniline.

Individuals named as coconspirators were Eric J. Monaghan of Wilmington, Del., assistant sales manager of Dupont's Dyestuff Division; Rudolph Hutz of Englewood, N. J., former vice president of General Aniline, and Charles W. Maknken, of New York, assistant director of sales for Geigy.

Firms Deny Charges

In New York City the American Cyanamid Co. issued a statement in behalf of itself and its officers denying the charges.

"We have not violated the anti-trust law," the statement said. "We have not been a party to any international cartel. We have not attempted to limit production. We have not charged exorbitant prices for our products."

In Wilmington, Del., du Pont officials made no immediate comment on the Government's action.

The national aniline and chemical division of Allied Chemical & Dye Corp., in a statement from New York commenting on the indictment, said, "We are not aware of any such violations of law by this company."

U. S. About to Cut Shirt-Tails Off; Also Some Buttons

Men are going to lose some of their shirt-tails.

To conserve textiles, H. Stanley Marcus, chief of WPB's clothing section, announced yesterday that an order would be issued soon trimming shirt-tails an inch or so, eliminating pockets on regular shirts and cutting down on the number of buttons.

And there won't be any more long-pointed "Hollywood" collars, either. Sport shirts will be limited to one pocket.

The appearance of the average shirt won't be changed materially, Marcus emphasized, but enough cloth will be saved to make several million more shirts.

Bare Legs Ugly to First Lady; Slacks Deemed Only for Slim

The First Lady believes that most women look "very ugly" strolling about without stockings.

Socks, though, are all right around the house, Mrs. Roosevelt said yesterday, commenting on sundry things at her press conference.

As for slacks, as far as the women are concerned, they have to be "young and slim" to wear them, in Mrs. Roosevelt's opinion. Unless the job specifically calls for slacks, Government girls ought not wear them to work, she said.

The First Lady disclosed she had received an "A" gasoline ration card, given to nonessential motorists, and in preparation for the low gasoline rating she has been practicing with her bike, which she plans to use only at her Hyde Park country home.

Sugar supplies at the White House have given no trouble to date, Mrs. Roosevelt said, although no more lump sugar is being purchased—because granulated is less wasteful to use, she said.

She laughingly commented that when "we reach the point where there is not enough sugar for visitors, we ask them please to bring their own."

Nazis Tap Navy Wires, Chilean Police Charge

Santiago, Chile, May 14 (AP).—Police said today they had discovered an alleged Nazi tapping of the Chilean Navy's private telephone line between here and the chief port of Valparaiso, and the Chamber of Deputies was expected to vote Monday its approval of an investigation of German activities in the country.

Congress' Gas Fight Reveals Tanker 'Crisis'

Announcing that "all oil tankers have been withdrawn from service on the Atlantic Coast and America faces a dangerous crisis," Senator Sheridan Downey (Democrat), California, yesterday pleaded unsuccessfully with his colleagues to waive "special privileges" under which Congressmen may get unlimited gasoline rationing cards.

After indignantly refusing to consider a resolution pledging themselves to waive any special rights they might receive as a result of "X" gasoline ration cards, members of the Senate will "put themselves down in black and white" on the proposal today.

Majority Leader Barkley—who joined in yesterday's criticism of Senator Downey for suggesting the resolution—cleared the way for its consideration today. Still visibly irked at printed criticism of Congressmen who accepted the unlimited cards, he broke into debate on the Agriculture Department appropriation late yesterday afternoon with a motion to adjourn instead of the usual move to recess, which would have left the controversial measure "on the table."

"I hope we can vote tomorrow," Senator Barkley declared. "It was the desire of practically everyone that we vote today, and it was regrettable that objection did not permit it."

In the meantime, the Office of Price Administration extended gasoline rationing to two West Coast States, Washington and Oregon, and started tabulation of rationing information from the 17 East Coast States affected by the first order. If figures show that the number of "X" cards given out run much above the 25 per cent counted on, a readjustment will be made of the number of gallons permitted to holders of restricted cards.

Commenting on the possibility of a further extension of the curtailment areas, Petroleum Coordinator Harold L. Ickes told a press conference that action to designate new rationing zones conceivably could be ordered to conserve rubber or reduce unessential travel. But it would not be brought about by the oil supply, he said.

While he was discussing the point, some Congressional circles forecast Nation-wide rationing of transportation. Senator Aiken (Republican), of Vermont said he believed before current ration cards expire June 30 plans will have been worked out to limit the use of domestic transportation systems.

He predicted that Governmen control of the movement of all products carried by rail and water would be reflected in the rationing of gasoline on a Nation-wide basis, a development Senator Downey predicted would come in any event.

Government officials refused to comment on Mr. Downey's disclosure that all American tankers have been removed from the Atlantic, but spokesmen for Ickes announced that specifications for a new 1500-mile pipe line to carry oil to the East will be submitted prmoptly to the War Production Board for approval.

Ickes' project was rejected earlier this year because it required nearly 400,000 tons of steel, but his aides said last night plans had been revised to lower the steel requirements to 300,000 tons by using thinner tubing. Withdrawal of the tankers is expected to bolster the coordinator's arguments in behalf of the pipe line.

Before this announcement was made, Ickes himself told reporters that the only sure solution to the gas shortage at the present time is the pipe line. He scoffed at reports that use of barges would remedy the situation.

Senator Downey declared last night he was "unhappy and surprised" at the amount of Congressional opposition his resolution had aroused. Reaffirming his statement on the floor that he intended no reflection on Congressional integrity, he expressed fear that "instead of helping public morale, the morale may have been hurt."

"I do think, however, that it is best to have a vote on the resolution," he said.

Main paragraph in his resolution read: "It is understood as the sense of the Senate that the members of this body shall collectively and individually waive any special rights, perquisites, or exemptions they may be accorded under the terms of any rationing order, and shall consider themselves bound by honor to the acceptance of the common rule."

Senator Barkley was on his feet immediately to assert he for one was not going to be "cowed or intimidated" by what he termed a newspaper campaign "to undermine the faith of the people in Congress." He declared he would take the card he was entitled to without apologies to anyone.

Thereafter followed 90 minutes of heated comment, shut off only when Senator Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, rose to object quietly to consideration of the proposal. He declared the resolution had no meaning and was not needed.

Senator LaFollette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, declared Downey had "impugned the motives of the Senate" in introducing the measure. Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, suggested sarcastically that perhaps the resolution ought to be amended to pledge the Senators against "holding up trains or robbing banks."

Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, holder of a B-3 card, entitling him to 57 gallons of gasoline in the first seven-week rationing period, broke in to point out that Congressmen who got "X" cards had first to sign a pledge they would use the gasoline only on official business. He said much of the business they did not only was a right, but an obligation from their voters.

Senator Danaher (Republican), Connecticut, said Downey's action in making his resolution public before it was offered in the Senate constituted "cheap demogoguery," and explained some of the trips he had been making in his automobile to see Government department heads and on other official business for constituents.

Senator Barkley declared he was tired of attempts to make the Nation's lawmakers appear "contemptible and contemptuous."

There have been previous reports that tanker shipments on the East Coast were halted because of submarine sinkings. But Downey was the first to make an official announcement on the subject.

Downey did not elaborate on the statement except to add that "what the next six months will bring no one knows."

The gasoline shortage admittedly is due to lack of transportation facilities. Most of the East Coast's gasoline supplies have been transported by tankers.

Gas Hoarder Fined,

Wilmington, May 14 (AP).—Declaring that a person "who hoards gasoline is just as much a saboteur as one who deliberately destroys property," Judge P. Warren Green today fined Charles Jones $10 on charges of possessing an illegal amount of the fuel.

Fire Marshal Eugene H. Barcus said he arrested Jones yesterday as he was siphoning gasoline from a 50-gallon drum into his automobile. It was the first case of its kind in Wilmington.

Half of D. C. Drivers Get 'X' or 'B-3' Cards

preciable drop in the demand for X cards which had been forecast by Cantrell's office on the basis of incomplete reports. The coveted cards were issued to 5606 motorists Wednesday as compared with 5857 on the preceding day.

Reports from other cities in the rationing area indicated that many motorists who received X or other of the larger allotment cards were voluntarily returning to their registration centers to exchange them for cards allowing smaller amounts, but this did not appear to be true in Washington. Cantrell's office, emphasizing that no exact figures were available, said only a few isolated cases of such returns had been reported.

Other developments of interest here and nearby includde:

The OPA director of Maryland, according to the Associated Press, announced a check would be made of all X and B cards issued in that State. Applications for these were unexpectedly heavy in Baltimore and other Maryland cities.

Price Chief Leon Henderson announced supplementary gasoline supplies will be available for motorists away from home after rationing starts today. These supplies, he said, also will be available for those who use their autos to take small children to school.

The supplementary rations also will be available to persons who change their place of residence and need additional gasoline to move their cars to their new residences.

Meantime, the general pattern of the Washington registration appeared to be following closely that of the entire ration area, where almost 10,000,000 motorists were ready to cope with curtailed supplies beginning today.

After receiving telegraphic reports sampling initial registrations throughout the East, the American Automobile Association estimated that 25 per cent of motorists were receiving A cards. Other percentages, all unofficial, coincided closely with Washington figures.

The Office of Price Administration originally estimated one-third of all motorists would take the A cards, but officials there were unable to say yesterday whether this upset in its calculations would make it necessary to revise downward the three-gallon unit value of the ration cards. Two weeks probably will be necessary, it was stated, to tabulate registration figures and determine whether a readjustment will be necessary.

The A. A. A., however, declared that "25 per cent acceptance of the low ration would go far to assure a sufficient supply for the more necessary vehicles" and "should end once and for all the bureaucratic yapping about motorists' failure to cooperate in conservation programs."

While the registration was nearing its uneventful close, motorists ganged up on filling stations in an effort to get a running start on the rationing program by starting out with full tanks—but many of them were doomed to disappointment.

Many filling stations instituted a rationing system of their own while others closed up earlier than usual to conserve their supplies.

Late last night, however, the A. A. A. said the situation never reached a point where motorists were calling in any appreciable number to get the names of stations still open. Most stations closed at 7 p. m.

Stealing a jump on the rationing program, representatives of the larger meat packers in Washington met yesterday and agreed to suspend deliveries to retailers on each Wednesday. The move was taken, a spokesman said, in cooperation with Federal orders for a 25 per cent curtailment in local deliveries. Further economies directed toward conserving both gas and tires likely will be effected, it was said.

Firms participating in the agreement included L. S. Briggs, Inc., Armour & Co., Swift & Co., Cudahy Packing Co., Kingan & Co., Auth-Loffler Co., James A. Witt & Co., Pointer Beef Co., Maurice H. Katz and Siegel Beef Co.

Meantime, 14 trucks from Wallace, N. C., loaded with strawberries destined for New York, Army camps and other points, pulled out of Washington after being detained here overnight Wednesday because of inability to obtain gas.

Morris Fox, owner of the Washington Truck Terminal, 1249 New York Avenue Northeast, where the carriers stopped, said he had managed to procure gas for the trucks from other stations in town. He himself was able to offer the drivers but 15 gallons each.

At College Park, Md., it was learned that a number of University of Maryland students who reside in Washington and in the Chevy Chase section likely will experience difficulty in getting to classes.

They disregarded college recommendations, it was stated, that they register at the school for their gasoline ration books and received A cards at the other centers to which they went. Students who registered at school, officials said, received cards allowing them enough gasoline for their trips to and from classes.

Baruch Returns 'X' Card for Gas, Takes 'A' Instead

New York, May 14 (INS).—Bernard Baruch, friend and adviser to President Roosevelt and OPA Chief Leon Henderson, today turned down an "X" card entitling him to unlimited gasoline.

Baruch's chauffeur secured the card yesterday giving as reason that the boss was in the Government service because of his frequent conferences with Federal officials.

Today Baruch personally returned the "X" card and insisted upon receiving an "A" entitling him to only three gallons of gasoline a week.

"We're not going to get anywhere with rationing—or in fact with the war effort—until people cooperate voluntarily because they believe they've got to do their best to win the war." Baruch said. "The country needs gasoline for vital services. I guess I can hoof it."

Byrd Opens Drive To Pare Farm Bill

Issues Blast at Payment of 100,000 AAA Committeemen Out of Benefit Funds

Senator Byrd (Democrat) of Virginia yesterday began an economy bloc assault on the big $680,383,695 Agriculture Department bill with a blast at payment of 100,000 AAA committeemen out of farmer benefit funds.

Byrd told the Senate that an army of county and community committeemen providing local administration of the soil conservation program are paid over 44 million dollars, or 10 per cent of the entire conservation appropriation, out of money intended for farm benefit checks.

Variation Stressed

The Virginian stressed wide variation of percentage deductions for committee expenses, between States, and counties within each State, and said Agriculture Department officials have never given a satisfactory explanation.

"If the farmers only knew that these county association expenses are being paid out of their checks, you would be hearing from them," he said.

Senator Russell (Democrat) of Georgia, floor manager of the big bill, said the law required that farmers be advised and that names and pay of committeemen be posted, but Byrd insisted that most farmers have never been told.

Russell also denied that all the 44 million dollars went to committeemen. He said all but about 20 per cent of it went to clerks and personnel assisting the farm committees in administering the conservation program. Byrd replied that the money went for local administration costs, but the bulk of it went for pay and traveling expenses of committeemen.

Action Postponed

Byrd's attack came after the Senate had postponed action on such controversial features of the farm appropriation as the 25 million dollar cash increase for the Farm Security Administration, the 55 million dollar added authorization for rural rehabilitation loans, and the committee's compromise on the President's request for a free hand in below-parity sales of Government stocks of farm products.

Extravagance Charged

Senator Wheeler (Democrat) of Montana, also accused the Agriculture Department of "waste and extravagance" in administering farm programs and of being "asleep at the switch" on farm experimentation.

Wheeler said the department had lagged in finding ways to make synthetic rubber out of farm produce and in overcoming shortages in sugar and other commodities.

Mr. Byrd's attack on outlays for 100,000 farmer committeemen brought from Senator McKellar (Democrat) of Tennessee, a suggestion that county agents, maintained in each of the 3000 counties, take over the duties of the committeemen.

"I was dumbfounded when I learned that we spend 44 million dollars out of the farmers' money for administration of these county programs," said Mr. McKellar.

Political Organization Seen

Mr. McKellar, a member of the Byrd committee on unessential spending which did spade work for a broad program of farm economies, recently told that group that the AAA farm committees are "rapidly becoming one of the biggest political organizations in the country."

Senator Russell agreed that administrative expenses of the county and community committees are "very large," but he said his Appropriations Committee had investigated and could not discover a better system.

Senator Bankhead (Democrat) of Alabama), leader of the Senate farm bloc, defended payments made to committeemen, which, he said, did not exceed $3 to $5 a day for days worked, which seldom covered their expenses. Bankhead said the committeemen are required to measure every farm in their counties, and must visit each farm many times to determine whether farmers are complying with their allotments. Both Mr. Bankhead and Mr. Russell denied the county agents, who have general charge of the entire program, could take over all of the work of the committees.

Senator Byrd denied the committeemen in most cases have to measure farms for compliance, saying most of this was done by airplane mapping.

Byrd said that in Virginia the gross amount due farmers in benefits is $4,082,862, but out of this is deducted $614,407 or 15.1 per cent for committee expenses.

Variation of the expenses by counties, he said, range all the way from 3 or 4 per cent in some counties to 40 per cent in others, "without any explanation for the variation."

In Maryland, he said the gross sum in soil benefits due farmers is $1,510,550, out of which $115,021 or 7.6 per cent is deducted for farm committee administration. In West Virginia, the gross benefit amount due is $1,509,790, but out of this comes $279,871 or 18.5 per cent before it reaches the farmers, he said.

Senator Taft (Republican) of Ohio pointed out that farmer committeemen in his State required 9 per cent of payments, while in adjoining Illinois farm committee expenses are only 4 per cent.

Mr. Wheeler said there were "no excuses for these differences."

Senator Butler (Republican) of Nebraska said he had observed that farm program costs went higher in election years than in off-years.

American U. Group To Present Play Tonight, Tomorrow

A streamlined version of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" will be presented tonight and tomorrow night by the American University Theater Group in the natural amphitheater on the arts and sciences campus at Massachusetts and Nebraska Avenues Northwest, under the direction of Dennis Connell.

Tonight's performance will be the initial evening out-of-door presentation by the group. Special lighting and stage sets have been designed by the college play production classes.

U. S. Frowns on College Activities Not Preparing Men for War

The Army and Navy yesterday frowned on athletic and social activities in the Nation's universities which do not help prepare students for war activity and declared that "colleges in war time must be places of intensive effort and accomplishment."

In a statement explaining the new policy of enlisting college men as reservists and continuing them in school, the War Department, speaking also for the Navy, declared that colleges have a definite but different educational function in war time.

While the department made no attempt to pass on what is good and what is bad in the way of big football games, theatricals, proms and such, it said:

"Can No Longer Afford . . ."

"The country can no longer afford to have young men proceed with their education at a moderate tempo. Extracurriculum activities not specifically directed toward physical or mental preparation for participation in the war effort cannot longer be encouraged.

"In wartime, recreation in college life must be limited to that necessary for a healthy and well-rounded existence. In other words, the colleges in wartime must be places of intensive effort and accomplishment.

"For those colleges which are prepared to proceed with education along these lines and for those young men who are prepared to enter or remain in college with these purposes and who have the qualities of mind and character to carry them out, the Army and Navy urge the continuance of college education.

"The Army and Navy will enlist a substantial number of such men in the appropriate Enlisted Reserve Corps, and under present conditions will leave them on an inactive status to continue their education, subject to immediate call of the Secretary of War or the Secretary of the Navy if for any reason this should thereafter be deemed necessary.

"Performing Their Full Duty"

"Men who accept the opportunity of enlistment in the Army and Navy Reserve and who conscientiously devote their efforts in college in the manner indicated and those teachers in the colleges who are necessary for the education of these men may feel assured that they are doing the job their country wants them to do and are performing their full duty in the war effort."

The statement declared that the Army and Navy appreciate the spirit of patriotism and self-sacrifice which has led many young men to give up college to enlist in the service. It is imperative, however, they added, that numbers of youths continue in school to prepare themselves for technical jobs in the war effort. Able-bodied young men must decide for themselves which course to take, it was stated.

Navy Accepts Woman's Corps Plan

The Navy yesterday yielded to opposition of Senator Walsh (Democrat) of Massachuseetts, chairman of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee, to direct enlistment of women in the Navy, and agreed instead to creation of a Navy Women's Auxiliary Corps.

The proposed new Navy corps would be patterned after the Women's Auxiliary Army Corps, which has been approved by Congress.

Mr. Walsh introduced a revised bill creating the Navy Auxiliary Corps. It limits the corps to shore duties within the United States, to duties where males can be replaced and limits the number by limiting the officers.

HERE'S HOW YOU CAN HELP WIN THIS WAR!

To Mrs Jones

WITHOUT EXPENSE
WITHOUT INCONVENIENCE

The three things needed most to win this war are gas, rubber and man-power. You can help save all three. Such simple things as being home when deliveries are made—carrying your smaller bundles home—Ordering well ahead of your needs to avoid disappointment—being careful in your selections, to avoid returns—all these things and other sensible, practical, thoughtful considerations reduce waste of rubber, gas and man-power.

It isn't hard to ask you to cooperate—to help us help Uncle Sam—when we know that you and all other patriotic Americans are eagerly looking for every way to help. And if you're foresighted—if like a good General you do your planning well ahead of the "orders"—YOU won't ever be disappointed—You'll still get what you want, when you want it, and you'll be helping our fighting lads get what they want—when they want it—too!

These Stores are helping America by avoiding waste, and this is one of a series of advertisements, paid for by them, to show you how much you can help them do their part.

"The Love of My Country Will Be the Ruling Influence of My Conduct."—Geo. Washington

WE ASK YOU TO MAKE THIS VICTORY PLEDGE

★ I won't ask for "Special Delivery"—a few days delay here, may save months "over there".
★ I'll be careful in buying, to avoid returns—and the waste they create.
★ I'll have someone home to receive packages and thereby eliminate "call-backs".
★ I'll carry all small packages because little bundles take room in big trucks that use lots of rubber and gas.

Next Blackout to Be Tri-Regional Affair

Entire States of Maryland and Virginia, Plus District, Will Be Covered

The next blackout will be a tri-State test, in which the District will be joined by the entire States of Maryland and Virginia, if details can be worked out in a conference to be held in Baltimore next Tuesday.

Local Civilian Defense officials will meet there with representatives of the State organizations and of the Third Corps Area headquarters.

Emphasis will be placed on home participation in this blackout, District Defense Executive Lemuel Bolles announced last night. He pointed out that air-raid tests were supposed to be drills for householders as well as for the protective forces.

"People have been fine about darkening their houses," he said, "even though a great many persons probably content themselves with turning out the light and sitting in the dark.

"Keeping the light from showing is only the first step in air-raid precaution, however. There are many other things to be done in the home, and we wonder how many people are doing them."

Cites Other Precautions

He cited the necessary turning out of gas, having blankets and sand on hand, and retiring to the room selected as the family air-raid shelter.

"How many apartment houses conduct air-raid drills when the sirens go off?" Bolles questioned. "Most of them are very helpful and conscientious about having regular drills—but they usually choose their own time."

Bolles admitted that the civilian defense organization had been engrossed with other problems, chiefly that of communications, during the past two blackouts and had been relying upon the public to have assimilated the basic principles of what to do in an air-raid.

"But there should be no slacking up at any time in the insistence that every individual acquaint himself with the safest procedure during an air raid," Bolles added.

One of the major problems now confronting civilian defense planning is that of ventilation during summer blackouts. If they should be of such short duration as the past two have been, it would not inconvenience people too much to extinguish the lights and leave the windows open for air circulation, Bolles said.

But if there should be a series of dusk to dawn blackouts, he said, some way will have to be devised whereby people can carry on their normal activities and still not stifle in airless, blacked-out rooms.

Low Watt Light Bulbs

The Venetian blind "light traps" demonstrated in Alexandria during the April 14 blackout are considered by the Civilian Defense Office adequate for this purpose, but these blinds are not in mass production, and they are not suitable for all houses.

The use of low watt light bulbs for home illumination during blackouts is another possibility being explored. If traffic lights, cut down by the 98 new rheostats to 27 watts, are not visible from the air, a five-watt bulb within a house might not be hazardous, some defense officials argue.

Others hold that one five-watt lamp might not be visible, but the combined glow of hundreds of them might form an effective beacon for enemy bombers. At any rate, Bolles said that nothing in the way of new regulations for summer blackouts will be considered until the War Department and the national OCD make official recommendations.

1626 Red Cross Graduates Get Diplomas Today

In a procession led by the United States Army Band, 1626 graduates of the nine volunteer services of the District Red Cross and representatives of the 71,459 individuals who have trained in Red Cross classes in the last year, will receive graduation certificates at exercises to be held at 8:15 p. m. today in the Departmental Auditorium.

Rear Admiral Ross T. McIntyre, surgeon general of the Navy, will make the principal speech. Miss Mabel T. Boardman, chairman, District Red Cross Volunteer Services, will preside and give the service pledge to the graduates. The invocation will be given by the Rev. Howard S. Wilkinson of St. Thomas' Church, and the benediction by Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld of the Washington Hebrew Congregation.

From April 30, 1941, to May 1, 1942, 44,248 volunteers gave more than 1¼ million hours of work to the District Red Cross, it was announced. More than 12,000 blood donors were enlisted during the period and 17,000 packages were sent to prisoners of war.

Two Women Seek Custody of Girl, 5

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

KIDNAPING CHARGES BROUGHT BY MOTHER—Mrs. Vera Evelyn Ashcroft, 25 (left), pressed her fight in Minneapolis yesterday for custody of Judith Ann, her 5-year-old daughter, charging her former employer kidnapped the child when she was 5 months old. Raymond Austin, cafe proprietor, said the child had been boarded out with Mrs. Walter N. Jensen, with whom she is shown at right

By the Associated Press

Minneapolis, May 14.—Mrs. Vera Ann Ashcroft, young mother of 5-year-old Judith Ann, for whose custody she is fighting in District Judge Paul S. Carroll's Court, denied from the witness stand today that she wanted nothing to do with the child prior to her marriage in 1940.

That assertion had been made by her former employer, Raymond O. Austin, Rochester, Minn., restaurant proprietor, whom she accuses of kidnaping her child in April, 1937, and turning the girl over to Mr. and Mrs. Walter N. Jensen of Minneapolis.

Both sides rested late today and the court set final arguments for tomorrow.

Austin, testifying for the Jensens, who seek to legally adopt Judith Ann, asserted the Jensens brought the child to his restaurant with them a dozen times from 1936 to 1940.

Mrs. Ashcroft, then Vera Bacon, he asserted, evinced no interest in the child. He said he offered to introduce her to the Jensens "so that she could get acquainted with the people taking care of her baby."

"That's not true," Mrs. Ashcroft testified.

Whenever the Jensens came in with her baby, she continued, "I was forced to go to the office and stay there—I was threatened."

She said that once Austin beat her when she asked for information of her baby.

She said it was not until 1940, when Austin was absent from the restaurant, that she opened a safe and found letters disclosing her child's custodians and their Minneapolis address.

It was for the purpose of getting this information only, she continued, that she remained in his employ. The moment she had it she left for Portland, Oreg., where she met and married her childhood sweetheart and the father of the child, Bernard Ashcroft.

Federal Engineer Named To Aid D. C. Water Probers

The assignment of Frederick H. Weed, member of the Federal Power Commission Engineering Staff, as special investigator for the Senate District Committee's probe into operations of the D. C. Water Department, was announced yesterday by Chairman Pat McCarran.

McCarran said that Weed possessed considerable experience in the installation and operation of water works and had worked on water department projects in several States.

He is scheduled to serve as special aide to the committee, which is currently seeking to establish a proper basis for District water rates and to determine expansion needs of the Water Department.

Auxiliary Firemen's Unit Seeks Members

Battalion Chief J. C. Allen and Capt. W. C. Rees of the District Fire Department will address the District of Columbia Auxiliary Firemen's Association tonight in Roosevelt High School auditorium. The meeting, opening at 8 o'clock, will start a membership drive.

At 10:30 p. m. a program of motion pictures depicting the bombing of London and showing how to control incendiary bombs will be presented. The public is invited to attend.

Parks Secretary To Be Replaced

The National Parks Association announced yesterday that its executive secretary, Lieut. Edward B. Ballard, is leaving immediately for Jefferson Barracks, Mo., for training as a camouflage officer in the Army Air Forces. His position with the association will be taken by Devereux Butcher, writer and conservationalist.

Frank Churchill, Song-Writer, Kills Self With Gun

Newhall, Calif., May 14 (AP).—Frank Churchill, composer of the song hit, "Who's Afraid of the Big Bad Wolf," was shot and fatally wounded today on his ranch near Newhall. Deputy Sheriff John Morrell said the death was a suicide.

The composer, 40, long had been employed at the Walt Disney Studios in Hollywood. He returned only yesterday for a rest.

Morrell said he left a note to his wife, reading:

"Dear Carolyn: My nerves have completely left me. Please forgive me for this awful act. It seems the only way I can cure myself."

His "Big Bad Wolf" was from Disney's "The Three Little Pigs." His most recent tunes are in the Disney films, "Dumbo" and "Bambi," the latter not yet released.

Morrell said Mrs. Churchill, aroused by a shot, asked Don Dernford, a hired man, to investigate.

He found Churchill, a bullet wound through his heart and a rifle lying beside him. Beneath his body was a rosary.

He was dead when Dr. E. C. Innis reached the ranch from here.

Churchill was born in Rumford, Me., and started his musical career as a theater pianist in Ventura, Calif.

2 Alsatians Executed; Helped Prisoners Flee

Bern, Switzerland, May 14 (A.P.). Two young Alsatians have been executed at Strasbourg for helping war prisoners to escape, it was reported in the Strasbourg newspaper reaching here today.

The Slovak press published death sentences in Absentia against the Czecho Slovak General Rudolf Viest and Lieut. Col. Anton Sznaczky, former military attache in Rome. General Viest fled to Paris in 1939 and later went to London. Sznaczky fled after he was charged with espionage.

Wardens Urge Retention of Chief Murphy

Protest against the transfer of Chief Air Raid Warden Clement Murphy back to his full-time job as drill master of the Fire Training School was filed with Commissioner John Russell Young by a committee of deputy wardens yesterday.

Young assured the delegation, which was headed by William J. Mileham of the downtown area, that he would confer at length with Murphy before making any decision on Murphy's request to be relieved of his warden duties.

The wardens predicted that Murphy's loss would be a serious blow to the morale of the warden service. They asked Young to do "everything within his power to persuade Murphy to continue as chief air raid warden," to grant him full power, and to assure him that his continuance in the warden service would not interfere with seniority compensation, leave or other perquisites, due him from the Fire Department.

"In spite of lack of sufficient authority, and in spite of lack of complete co-operation from his superiors, Chief Murphy has performed a splendid job," the committee's petition read. "He has earned the loyalty and full support of all of his deputy wardens and the thousands they represent. Be it resolved that Chief Murphy is our choice as the best man for this position."

The committee also requested that Murphy's assistants, Lieut. W. H. Ronan and Pvt. R. V. Denton, be retained in the warden service.

The return of these three men to full time fire duty, and their relief from warden duty responsibilities had been requested by Fire Chief Stephen T. Porter last week. Murphy had several times made informal request to be relieved of one or the other of his duties, saying that either was a full time job and it was impossible for one man to do both.

Eli Oliver Quits Labor Relations Branch of WPB

By the Associated Press

Eli Oliver, chief of the War Production Board's labor relations branch and a principal aide to Sidney Hillman, former WPB labor director, resigned yesterday, declaring that "there's no job left for me to do."

Under the recent reorganization of the WPB labor setup, the important supply and training functions were transferred to the War Manpower Commission, leaving Oliver's branch in WPB. Subsequently, Wendell Lund, Michigan State unemployment compensation commissioner, was appointed to head the WPB "labor production division."

"The only thing left is my department," Oliver explained, "and under the reorganization, that's a one-man job."

He said his resignation was effective immediately and that he planned to return to the labor movement as an economic adviser and labor relations consultant. He formerly was associated with the railroad brotherhoods and was at one time executive vice president of labor's nonpartisan league.

tank; to halt before using their cannon; to move under hills rather than along their crests. From the practice course they were taken to a strange piece of ground and put through the same maneuver until they learned to apply there the principles acquired on the golf course.

After this work with single tanks, two tanks with new crews were put together in a section and sent over the practice course. They learned to work together, like a pair of bird dogs; to advance one tank while the other covered it; to approach dangerous enemy weapons from two directions; to help each other every minute. From there they went to a strange bit of ground, as did the single tank, and worked out the problem again until they had it pat.

Gunners Use Moving Targets

Tank machine gunners, one of whom is the driver, were trained on a combat range which gave them practice in firing while the tank was in motion, at fixed and moving targets. On this range the tank speeds toward the target, careening over logs place athwart its path to make the going tough, its gunners firing whenever they can bear on the targets. Scout car and half-track gunners got the same training, but without the logs.

Cannoneers in the three field artillery battalions and in the 75-millimeter howitzer platoons of the armored infantry battalions fire their heavy pieces on an artillery range. All artillery in the armored divisions is now self-propelled; no time is lost unlimbering and limbering up again. The artillery keeps up with the tanks and the fast moving infantry, mounted in half-tracks.

Down in the shops, where light tanks, big medium tanks, half-tracks, howitzers, machine guns, submachine guns, rifles and all the miscellaneous gear of a tank division are kept in repair, men of the new Seventh have been working side by side with men of the Third Armored Division, from which the training cadre was drawn. They learned by doing and they learned sometimes the hard way.

As, for instance, the time somebody left a little insignificant cotter pin out of a medium tank transmission and the whole massive assembly had to be taken off again to repair the resultant damage. It was an unforgettable lesson in taking pains.

Tanks are driven by air-cooled radial aircraft engines, and the men who keep them going must be aircraft engine mechanics as well as tank experts. It takes a lot of knowing to keep a tank in action.

Armored Force engineers, dealing as they must with extremely heavy vehicles, are equipped with special bridge and flotation devices unknown to engineers of Infantry divisions. Their truss bridge, for instance, must carry the 28-ton medium tank, which would collapse the Infantry division's 10-ton bridge like so much cardboard.

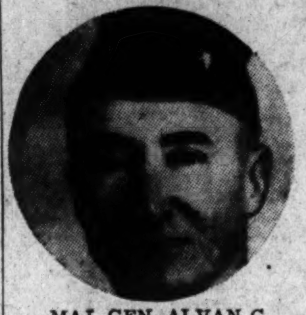
They have enormous rubber boats which can be built into tank ferries and powerful cranes to lift their bridge equipment and help tanks out of trouble. And on top of that, they must be prepared to fight in the line if need be, to plug holes and back up the armored infantry in tight spots.

Training an armored division, aside from the difficulties of equipment, is a matter of imparting high technical and tactical skill while making fighting men. That is what has been done at Camp Polk in the last 13 weeks.

This camp is buried about as far from civilian distractions as a camp possibly could be. Alexandria, La., the nearest city, is 67 miles away over a road which is none too good. The little town of Leesville, 10 miles from camp, provides little opportunity for recreation.

The men do not like this situation, and they will tell you without being asked that Camp Polk "is the lousiest post in the Army." From their standpoint that may be true.

Camp Polk, named for the Confederate Bishop-Gen. Leonidas K. Polk, lies in a desolate countryside, rutted by erosion and studded with the stumps left after repeated reckless sawmilling operations in the great pine forests. Even the few trees left have been so beaten by chains and cables in snaking out logs that hundreds have died and stand naked and dispirited like thin gray whiskers on an old man's chin.



MAJ. GEN. ALVAN C. GILLEM, JR.
Commanding Second Armored Corps

It is an unprepossessing place, disheartening to men and discouraging to tanks, which make heavy going through the maze of stumps. Yet it has proved ideal, in the end, for training a division which must do the toughest kind of fighting and learn so many things to do it.

There have been none of the distractions here which impeded training of the National Guard divisions which were assembled near the big cities of the East. Men of the Third and Seventh Armored Divisions have not been thinking all day long of what they will do that night; their minds have been on their work and that alone; they have given their time to training for battle, not to making life pleasant for all the local damsels.

To remedy somewhat this lack of facilities for recreation, convoys are sent every weekend to nearby Gulf Coast resorts. Hundreds of Armored Force soldiers are sent without cost to themselves to cities within a 100-mile radius, where they blow off what pressure they may have accumulated during a week of unremitting work.

Leesville Swamped

Even so, Leesville is swamped with them every weekend. They come into the little town, throng its streets, drink its soda fountains dry and manage to embroil themselves with the M. P.'s just as soldiers will do in any army anywhere. And on payday nights they smother Leesville; the town, a buxom young native explained, "looks like it had a khaki tent spread over it." That is an apt description.

To ease the strain on local accommodations and give the men themselves as much opportunity for uncongested recreation, paydays are staggered. Half of the personnel is paid the first of each month; the other half is paid the seventh.

Morale has never been a problem in the Armored Force. These men are learning something new and interesting every day. Armored Force divisions have not been created until equipment was available in sufficient amounts to train them. Even last summer, when the morale of most of the Army was dragging bottom, soldiers of the Armored Force moved about with the defiant, chip-on-the-shoulder swagger which marks tank fighters the world over.

What equipment they had has served the country overtime. There are light tanks here which helped train men of the First, Second and Third Armored Divisions. They have been to the ordnance shops for major overhauls three times. The Seventh has them now, using them every day, and will pass them on in time to a new division which it may itself father.

A remarkable job has been done here at Camp Polk, dreary and unprepossessing as the place is. It is a job which points the way for the future, a milepost on the way to victory.

This is the way a peaceful nation girds for war.

Nelson Sees Nation's Industry Producing Entirely for War

New York, May 14 (U.P.).—Donald M. Nelson, chairman of the War Production Board, said tonight that from now on America's industrial plant—factory, farm and mine—will make nothing but war goods to the "absolute maximum of production," but warned that shortages of some vital raw materials already are in sight.

The Nation's production achievement, he said, has been "remarkable." A country which had no war industry two years ago is now succeeding in its effort to become the world's greatest producers of war goods.

"The country is actually doing things that were truly unthinkable a year ago," Nelson said. "It is executing programs which sounded utterly fantastic no more than six months ago."

The No. 1 production man spoke at the annual dinner of the National Institute of Social Sciences which awarded him its gold medal for distinguished public service. Medals adso were awarded Dr. Rufus B. von Klein Smid, president of the University of Southern California, and Mrs. Anne O'Hare McCormick of the New York Times.

Nelson said he accepted the award as an honor to all the men who have worked to mobilize America's productive resources into a militant arsenal for democracy.

"One after another we have taken our great industries which produce consumer durable goods, stopped ordinary activities and swung them into production for war," Nelson said.

"The process is continuing and must continue until our entire American productive plant—mine, farm and ship and factory—is geared into the war program.

"From now on this Nation will make only those things which are absolutely needed in our war economy—either direct war goods or things essential to a proper functioning of civilian economy.

"The absolute physical maximum is going to be very high—higher than we dared to hope as recently as last autumn. But there is a limit. We cannot go on boosting our war production indefinitely. Sooner or later we run into a deficiency of materials."

"Our goal is the absolute maximum of production,' he said, "in the shortest possible time," adding that the shortage of time is the most serious shortage of all.

"Our Army and Navy are in action today," he pointed out, "and we know it will do no good to turn out a flood of goods a year from now if we do not have adequate equipment and supplies for emergencies that are certain to arise this year. We have to have a long range and a short range goal and proceed toward both simultaneously.

"No part of the production program stands by itself," he said. "Ability to produce synthetic rubber may be limited by a seemingly unrelated factor as the necessity for building a big tonnage in merchant shipping, because of the steel plate needed for boats."

ALCOA to Cut Prices, Big Saving To U. S. Forecast

The Aluminum Co. of America has agreed to make a "substantial reduction" in the prices of aircraft sheet, castings and forgings and other fabricated aluminum products, the Office of Price Administration announced yesterday.

OPA said it asked the reductions and would make similar requests to other aluminum fabricators.

The aggregate savings to the Government in purchases of planes and other materials will amount to "many millions of dollars a year," Price Administrator Henderson said, and will not work "undue hardship upon Alcoa or in any way impair its financial position."

Tremendous increase in output has meant lower costs and substantially greater profits to the company, Henderson said.

The price cuts, effective June 15, range from 1 cent to more than 20 cents a pound on various items, Henderson said, but did not divulge the exact amount on any one item.

over and above income tax revenue.

"We can use it," said the Secretary, who called the proposal very wholesome.

Meanwhile the Ways and Means Committee, awaiting preparation of a new set of individual normal and surtax rates tailor-made to the exemption cuts voted Wednesday, turned to plugging of loopholes in the present tax structure.

The committee will vote on Treasury recommendations for taxing the interest on future and outstanding issues of tax-exempt State and local securities. A majority appeared opposed to removing the immunity on outstanding issues. There was less opposition to repealing the exemption on future State issues. Last year Congress ordered the interest on future issues of Federal securities subjected to tax.

George Backs Reserves Plan

In the Senate Chairman George, whose Senate Finance Committee is marking time pending House completion of the tax bill, indorsed the principle of post-war reserves for industry, and said some credit must be provided for debt payments by industry.

Proposals for special tax refunds for industry, for plant rehabilitation and employment after the war, are now pending before the Ways and Means Committee.

In the House Speaker Sam Rayburn said Congress should wait to see how voluntary sale of war bonds progresses before it considers compulsory savings or forced purchases of war bonds.

Rayburn said proposed compulsory savings legislation "ought to lie around for awhile, and I might say I think that's what will happen."

The Speaker was questioned on one of the anti-inflation measures introduced by Representative Gore (Democrat) of Tennessee, who proposed a graduated withholding tax on wage and salaries, returns from which would be invested in low-interest Government bonds, redeemable after the war.

Bond Sales Ahead of Quota

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, already on record against compulsory savings, reported that voluntary sales of war bonds are running ahead of this month's quota. The House Ways and Means Committee has given Morgenthau until July to test the voluntary method of sales, before considering compulsory methods.

At his press conference, Morgenthau said the Treasury was willing to accept the Ways and Means Committee decision to cut individual tax exemptions to $500 for single persons and $1200 for married. The action paralleled the Treasury request for a $1200 married couple exemption, but undercut by $100 the Treasury's proposal for single persons. The committee had refused to go along with Treasury recommendations for a $100 cut in the allowance for dependents and abolition of the earned income credit.

At the same time, the secretary disclosed that the Treasury is ready to "step in" to offset any corporate evasion of taxes by excessive increases in salaries. The Treasury plans to reach exhorbitant increases in salaries out of war profits in two ways, by disallowing unreasonable increases as an offset against corporate taxes, and by taxing the increse as income received by the individual getting the raise.

Great U. S. Cargo Plane Fleet May Help End War Speedily

By Bert Andrews

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

America's war leaders have decided to make immediate and drastic changes in the emphasis on various phases of the mighty production program, it was learned last night, in an effort to speed up the already tremendous output of all offensive weapons.

Three major changes are reported to have been decreed on the theory that victory may be achieved within six months or a year if the men in the services of the United States and her Allies are given everything they need in the way of armament.

One calls for abandoning construction of all new plant facilities, except where absolutely necessary, on the theory that strategic metals and materials which go into buildings cannot be shot at or sent at the enemy in the form of bullets and fighting and bombing planes.

The second contemplates an intensive drive to get the very maximum, all along the line, from the factories already built or under construction.

The third, arising in part from the submarine menace to surface shipping, is understood to contemplate a reconsideration of the whole plane building program—with the hope of getting, in addition to fighters and bombers, a huge fleet of giant transport planes to replace some of the cargo capacity of ships lost at sea.

As to the cargo plane side of the production picture, one report was that officials of the Board of Economic Warfare are studying the possibility of using huge transport planes to take strategic goods to Latin America, and that they are talking in terms of planes carrying loads as heavy as 50 tons and more.

For many weeks officials of many Government agencies have been doing much paper work in calculating how many men or how many tons of cargo a giant plane could carry between two points, as compared with a surface ship. The answers vary with the air-mindedness of the officials.

As one part of the WPB's work, Donald M. Nelson, chairman, appointed Dr. Luther Gulick today to direct a permanent office of organizational planning. The office will advise on methods of simplifying and decentralizing the wide administrative operations of WPB.

Dr. Gulick has been with the War Department as expert consultant to the Secretary of War on supply organization problems.

Tired Kidneys Often Bring Sleepless Nights

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. When they get tired and don't work right in the daytime, many people have to get up nights. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. Don't neglect this condition and lose valuable, restful sleep.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may also cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Hamstrung

Conrad Van Hyning, the director of public welfare, has good reason to protest the cuts that were made in his budget by the House. For the changes approved by that body suggest that it is unwilling to leave to District officials even such thoroughly local tasks as the administration of welfare activities. It has said in effect that the snap judgment of its Subcommittee on District Appropriations should be substituted for discretion on the part of local officials, even when such advice is shown to be absurd.

The House eliminated the position of principal assistant director of public welfare, at the suggestion of the subcommittee, on the assumption that "it is not serving the purpose for which it was established." This position was created two years ago. At that time the House committee report suggested that the new assistant director "devote his entire time to the inspection and administration of public welfare institutions . . ." The underlying purpose was obviously to improve the type of institutional care the District offers.

Now that general objective has been admirably carried out by Miss Gay B. Shepperson who holds this position. She has been immediately responsible for the National Training School for Girls, the District Training School, the two industrial home schools and the Receiving Home for Children. In addition she has supervised all the welfare activities for children outside of institutions. By this means thorough coordination of all child welfare work was attained. So Mr. Van Hyning was able to give much more detailed supervision to the Home for the Aged and Infirm and the closely related Public Assistance Division as well as to the penal institutions, which are under direct control of a general superintendent.

To assign the administration of prisons, relief institutions and child training to a single assistant director in these circumstances would be patently ridiculous. In following the substance instead of the letter of the subcommittee's advice, local officials simply applied common sense to their task. Yet the House would penalize them for not blindly following a stupid suggestion that was not in any case written into the law. It is impossible to believe that the Senate will permit the city's welfare system to be crippled on any such petty pretext.

In the matter of administering relief to families without a bread-winner the House also refused to let the Board of Public Welfare use its discretion. It insisted once more on fixing ceilings that prevent officials from granting relief on the basis of need. That policy is particularly out of place in this day of rising prices. Everyone knows that a family of four cannot live on $42 per month in Washington without going hungry or unclothed. If Congress is not willing to trust District officials to administer public welfare funds and assign personnel in accord with changing local needs, it had better assume the full responsibility of operating the system itself.

Kerch And Kharkov

The Russians have admitted that, as a consequence of fierce German pressure, they have had to yield some ground in the Kerch Peninsula, though they have branded as "nothing but a lie" the Nazi claims of decisive victory and the capture of 40,000 Russian troops in that sector. At the same time the Red army appears to have launched a large-scale offensive of its own in the vital Kharkov region and elsewhere along a 1200-mile battle front.

Russian forces have been pressing on Kharkov (taken by the Nazis on October 25) for several months. On at least one previous occasion the city's imminent recapture was predicted in dispatches from the Soviet Union. That, unfortunately, did not occur. Kharkov remained one of the Nazi strong points on the Eastern Front throughout the winter's "stormy lull." Should the Red army now succeed in retaking that city, a monkey-wrench will have been thrown into Hitler's plans for a spring or summer offensive aimed at the capture of the oil wells of the Caucasus.

Kharkov is not only an important industrial center—the "Pittsburgh" of the Ukraine. It is a vital railroad junction point of considerable strategic importance. Its loss by the Nazis would reduce if not destroy any possibility of a German drive to the east and southeast for some time to come. Whatever happens, the display of offensive strength by the Red army at this time is a highly encouraging development. It remains to be seen whether the Russians will develop sufficient strength to force the Germans to retreat. But as long as their offensive continues, it is likely to keep the Germans on the defensive, and thus prevent them from launching that all-out attack to which Hitler is committed.

There's A Reason

Some residents of our Eastern seaboard area feel that they have been unjustly discriminated against by being put on short gas rations when other parts of the country can buy all the gas they require. Hitherto we have been inclined to share their feeling. But if our disgruntled drivers fully understood the reasons for the local shortage, their resentment would give place to wonderment that conditions are no worse.

Last year about 95 per cent of all the oil reaching the Eastern States came here in tankers. This water-borne oil tanker traffic has been progressively reduced as a result of war casualties and war needs. Last week Petroleum Coordinator Ickes admitted that the remaining tankers on the East Coast are probably out of the picture for the duration. They are needed by the Army and Navy. Consequently the railroads are confronted by an utterly unforeseen, stupendous task of transporting most of the gas and fuel oil required to meet civilian and other needs in this part of the country.

How well the railroads, which last year brought in only 2 per cent of all supplies, have shouldered the increasing burden upon them is borne out by figures. A year ago only 350 railway tank cars of petroleum products of all kinds were being shipped weekly into the East from the central part of the United States. The total had risen to 2396 cars weekly by September, and at present weekly shipments average 20,000 cars. This is a tremendous achievement. It is due to a very considerable extent to cooperation on the part of receivers and shippers of oil to obtain maximum utilization of limited equipment. Tank cars used to haul asphalt, etc., have also been diverted to oil shipment, while oil tank cars have been withdrawn from short haul services.

It should be remembered, too, that motorists are not the only or even the most important consumers of petroleum products. Fuel oil is required in ever-increasing quantity by war industries in this area. It is needed for office and home heating purposes as well. In fact, Mr. Ickes has already instructed the oil industry to further the movement of heating oil by tank car "at the expense of gasoline."

Discussions are currently in progress looking toward still more effective utilization of existing tank car facilities. Doubtless other parts of the country will be called upon to give up some tank cars for use in the East, and in that event rationing would be extended over a larger area. But all these rearrangements take time. So do plans for constructing new pipe lines, which, in addition, call for large amounts of steel.

Meantime, despite all that has been done to make up for the loss of tankers, less than half the amount of oil normally consumed in this area is currently being received. Instead of feeling blind resentment, because of deprivation of customary gas supplies, motorists should, therefore, cooperate with the authorities to make a success of gasoline rationing. For the record shows that local conditions are an inevitable consequence of the war which no amount of grumbling can alleviate.

Lowered Exemptions

The Ways and Means Committee has gone Secretary Morgenthau one better. It has tentatively voted for a reduction of individual income-tax exemptions from the present $750 to $500, instead of to the $600 recommended by the Treasury. However, the committee has treated married taxpayers a little more generously than the Treasury. It has voted against any reduction of allowances for dependents, although agreeing to the proposed lowering of the exemption to $1200.

On general principles it is highly desirable to broaden the income-tax base. But it would be a sad mistake to assume that the lowering of exemptions alone, estimated to add between seven and eight million persons to income-tax rolls, would remove the necessity for further taxation of low-income groups. All but a negligible amount of the more than one billion dollars of increased revenue to be derived from the suggested change in exemptions would come from persons already subject to taxation. And even one billion dollars would make but a small dent in the surplus national income which must be mopped up to avert inflation.

Mr. Henderson told the Ways and Means Committee that the inflationary gap—that is, the amount of consumer purchasing power in excess of available goods—is now between 14 and 17 billion dollars. And he is reported to have said that almost 90 per cent of this total is the result of wage increases. From that we conclude that the only way to plug the gap is to tax this income where it is found. That is, we must tax the incomes of wage earners much more heavily.

The surest—probably the only politically feasible method of recapturing any substantial proportion of this new wage income—is to levy sales taxes upon articles of mass consumption. Yet Mr. Henderson, who admits that more stringent forms of taxation are necessary and thinks compulsory savings may have to be imposed, still shies away from the sales tax.

Sales taxes, he says, would add to the price of goods, make rationing more difficult, and interfere with the equal distribution of goods. Finally he brings out the familiar argument that sales taxes are regressive—that is, they bear more heavily upon individuals with small incomes than upon those who are better off.

Of course, sales taxes put extra burdens on low-income groups. But the menace of an inflationary explosion has made it essential to exact sacrifices from those who would ordinarily be spared. If their buying power is curtailed now, they will be much less likely later on to suffer the extreme deprivations of uncontrollable inflation.

The price increases resulting from sales taxes have nothing in common with inflationary price movements. The latter are unpredictable and continuous. The former are definitely ascertainable percentage additions to sales prices of goods before taxes. It is not at all clear, therefore, why Mr. Henderson thinks that sales taxes would complicate rationing, or interfere with the distribution of consumer goods, except on the unlikely assumption that sales levies would be so onerous as to choke off buying of necessities to an undesirable extent.

Addled Admiral

It appears that the Japanese naval forces which went out to do battle in the Coral Sea were commanded by none other than the Bushido Boy who some time ago announced his intention of dictating peace terms from the White House, Admiral Yamamoto.

One would have thought that along with twenty-some ships the good admiral would have lost a good deal of that important commodity called face. One might have thought, indeed, that this would be about time for him to get the hara-kiri sword out of the cupboard and begin rubbing his thumb thoughtfully along the edge of the blade. Nothing of the sort! The noble Yamamoto has returned to wherever it was that he came from in what looks very much like the role of conquering hero. Premier Tojo has plastered him with felicitations on his astounding victory, and the Son of Heaven himself has dispatched a personal message of gratitude.

Now, acting on the advice of our military experts, we are modestly keeping our fingers crossed about this Coral Sea business. It was, we understand, only round one of a much bigger battle. We understand the main Japanese fleet was not engaged, and that it therefore remains intact and capable of further mischief. We understand, further, that the threat to Australia and the South Pacific islands has not been removed by the battle. We understand all that, but still it is difficult to see just how the admiral, the premier, the Emperor and the Nazi radio have been able to work all these negatives into a "crushing Anglo-American defeat." Quite obviously the admiral and his ships were going somewhere and quite as obviously they didn't get there and a great many of them won't ever get anywhere again.

Perhaps it's just another instance of this inscrutable Oriental psychology one hears about. But a more rational explanation occurs to us. Perhaps in the excitement of battle the brave Yamamoto completely forgot which side he was fighting on.

Church Hospitality

Several days ago The Post received a letter from a Northern boy, now stationed as a Marine at Quantico, who thought there could not be a city more hospitable to the man in uniform than Washington. A spaghetti dinner served to him in one local church and a comfortable night's rest in another helped to make him think so. Such hospitality is the fruit of plans developed by the defense commission of the Washington Federation of Churches. To support its activities in social welfare, youth organization, religious education, civic affairs and other fields, a Federation Fund Drive is now being held. It is a worthwhile cause. The money will not only maintain established activities but will also aid local churches in doing those friendly things which are helping thousands of young newcomers to the city to make a social and spiritual adjustment to a strange new life.

SPRING-SONG

It's hours before the morning breaks.
The changing moonlight gleams and glooms.
In orchard boughs one birdling wakes
And sings alone among the blooms.
A cheerful sound, a springtime trill,
One little throat, out-swelling, tries.
Then moonlit boughs and birds are still.
It's hours before the sun will rise.

Attacking Congress

The Russians are pushing back the Nazis near Kharkov this morning and the British are retreating in Burma, but those are not the stories that appear in the biggest, blackest headlines. They are reserved to hold Congressmen up to hate and ridicule in the approved Washington manner. Radio commentators with quavering voices and newspapermen with pulsating pens must inform an anxious country of the latest outrage. The local authortiies extended a courtesy yesterday to members of Congress. While thousands of citizens stood in line, as we all did last week for sugar cards, special facilities were given Senate and House members to register at the Capitol. An outrage that is more than mortal could bear was further perpetrated when Congressmen were treated as men here on official business, whose trips from home to Capitol and back again, from Capitol to department in the interests of State and constituents were called official trips and they were permitted to decide for themselves what gas they needed and to use it, tires permitting.

This courteous treatment was doubtless as great a surprise to the Congressmen as it was a tragedy to the newspapermen, for all my friends had been carefully figuring up the probable mileage and wondering how in the world they were going to get it.

Now, everybody knows that Congressmen, like most citizens, furnish their own cars and their own gas and expect nothing different, while Cabinet members, presidential secretaries and innumerable heads of innumerable Government agencies are provided cars, gas, service and chauffeurs at Government expense, but no one objects, not even Congress. These people are not popular scapegoats. Congress is the safest body to ride. It is fair game for attack, always, and this gas allotment which put confidence in the honor of a Congressman, an attribute which all newspapermen know Congressmen do not possess, was an issue that appealed to the demagogic impulses of those not overburdened with intellectual integrity.

It might seem to thoughtful people that it is not quite bright of these critics of Congress to try to deliberately whip up public resentment against Congress on inconsequential matters, when parliamentary government is under attack all over the world. It might be better to be a trifle indulgent with the frailties of a body that could be much worse. Freedom of the press is rather closely bound up with the rule of the people through their representatives. Captious carping on small matters will wear away tolerance as quickly as noble attacks when great issues are at stake.

Congress is a representative body and its members are not supermen. They will, however, compare favorably with any other group in this country. By and large, it is a body of honorable, hard-working men and women. It deserves better treatment than it is receiving. To represent Congress as a body of crafty vote getters is the delight of some. An unworthy delight in my opinion.

Favored Congressmen

I have just read that members of Congress in registering "asked for and received X cards for unlimited supplies of gasoline on certificates that the cars were used for official business." I would like to know what they term as "official business." Is it the use of cars by wives and daughters for shopping trips and bridge party attendance and the chauffeur taking Mary and Johnny back and forth to school? From my own observation I know there is a lot of that sort of thing being done.

My idea was that members of Congress were supposed to be on the job at the Capitol (supposed, I said) and not driving back and forth from building to building each day.

Another thing I would like to have explained is why it is that Congressmen delight in passing laws to control and, many times, handicap the other fellow but are never willing to take the dose themselves? They vote advances in their own salaries and all the extra trimmings in addition while reductions are suggested for others. I think in times such as we are now passing through the thing to do is for everyone to buckle down and give their all to winning back our loved democratic way of life, and it takes more than the tax-burdened John Does to do the job. It takes everyone. There should be no favored classes with unheard-of privileges and five-figured salaries at the cost of sweat and blood of the overburdened.

It is about time that these superior beings come down off of their high horses and give a bit of sweat and blood themselves to this cause that means everything to every one of us. More power to Senators Tydings and Byrd and the other right-thinking, honest-acting few that are trying to bring about equality and justice for all. The precept and practice of those in authoritative places can either win or lose this war. Let us hope that the precept and practice be worthy of our Nation and that selfishness and greed be put out of the picture. MRS. N. R. STREET.

Milk Deliveries

As considerable is being said about plans to save gas and tires, a plan might be suggested as to deliveries, especially of milk.

In a local area, covering about 30 city blocks, I have noted four different milk delivery wagons within about two hours.

Could not these four companies work up a plan among themselves whereby one delivery wagon in each locality would take to the customers the milk of whichever company they preferred? Thus the same milk could be delivered and the same service performed with only one-fourth the expenditure of gas and tires. The drivers would each cover a smaller area but serve a larger number of customers.

This would seem to be much more satisfactory than late delivery, since so many customers are employed, and would have to make some arrangement to have the milk taken care of, to prevent having it sit in the sun all day till they return from work. C. L. WOOLSEY.

Fire Hazards

One of the first things to be accomplished in a program of civilian defense is the elimination of unnecessary fire hazards; and that is the one thing which seems to have been neglected, as far as the City of Washington is concerned.

A glance through the alleys in and around the older neighborhoods of this city will reveal the numerous fire hazards offered by the makeshift board fences, sheds, lean-tos and frame garages now existing. These structures not only represent hazards but constitute a menace to health by harboring rats and vermin and by their acting as a blind under which vast collections of filth have been allowed to accumulate.

There are laws and ordinances prohibiting such conditions, but their enforcement has always been retarded by politicians. The feeble attempts to correct such conditions through low-cost housing and slum-clearance programs have only nibbled at the fringes, or have aggravated the condition by transferring the slum dwellers so that the conditions crop up elsewhere in otherwise good neighborhoods.

Suggestions made in the past that the law be used to eradicate slum conditions have fallen on deaf ears, mainly because of the reasons stated above or because there is no glory or large design and construction fees in the picture.

The opportunity to put such an idea across has at last presented itself in the name of civilian defense. So why not remove these hazards mentioned in the beginning of this letter, using all the powers Congress has granted, and kill the largest part of the slum evil, at the same time protecting life and property in event of an air raid? W. K. HENKELS.

Surplus Cars

In your editorial, "Gas Rationing," your idea of having the Government buy cars from those willing to sell is good. I would be glad to sell mine at tax value or even less.

The Government buys up surplus crops and even pays farmers not to grow them. Why not buy up surplus cars? A half dozen lots distributed on the outskirts of cities, where land could be leased cheap, could be designated as purchasing centers where cars could be brought and appraised, using tax value as basis. Owners could sell for cash or bonds or a certificate of value on cars after the emergency is over, said certificate to draw 2 per cent per annum interest. If the seller wasn't satisfied with the appraisal he could keep his car.

Thousands of cars are now up for sale and should be taken. These cars could be rationed out to those most needing them or junked if not good enough to ration and tires resold to necessary users.

Purchasers with permits could select cars at cost, to which 10 per cent could be added for handling. If they need any parts they could call the parts repair man, select parts from the junked cars, the same as we do now from wrecking dealers.

In this way cars would be in the hands of those who need them. Also, the Government could get cars there for use in many places, and it might be able to replace the big limousines you read about taking single officials to work with smaller cars, and thus economize on gas and tires. F. LEWIS.

The Post Impressionist

The Back Of Beyond

Singapore from the ship looked green and alluring. It was level with the sea and as flat as a plate on the surface of the water. And then we landed, and the slight breeze the ship had raised faded away. The heat was so great that when I walked into it I wondered what had struck me. It was like a nightmare when you try with all your might to get away from something and just stand still. It took a long time to get used to the saturating heat of the Malay Peninsula. The air never seemed to move and was full of strange new smells. In a short time everything I wore held the sickish scent of mildew and my shoes became coated with green mold. But life somehow goes on and in the end you get used to it.

After we left this country, a railway was built from Singapore straight up the Malay Peninsula to Bankok in Siamor in Thailand as they now call it. It was by this route the Japanese entered Malaya. But we had to take an evil smelling Chinese boat, crowded with hogs and noisy natives, to reach Port Swettenham, the little port of the Federated Malay States on the Straits of Malacca. A small train was waiting for the handful of passengers. The blinds were pulled down all around and we sat for two hours in the dim suffocating heat. Through the slats of the shutters I could see the shining heat outside and reddish-brown earth with rows and rows of little rubber trees. There was nothing else to see.

Kuala Lumpur in the Native State of Selangor was the town for which we were bound. This was the capital of the newly federated Malay States. The Resident General of the Federated States lived here as well as the British Resident of Selangor. There were other British officials, both Federal and State, and planters who drifted in and out of the town, a few merchants and a handful of British wives.

Kuala Lumpur was built on low hills—not really hills but knolls. Anyway it was higher above the sea than Singapore and supposed to be cooler. The bungalows of the Europeans stood on these low hills. Below them was a park and an artificial lake and a long avenue of royal palms that led to the little clubhouse. The jungle pressed close about the town. There was a constant struggle to keep it back. Tigers lived in the jungle and in the early mornings would come to the lake in the park to drink. Their wide-spreading pads left marks in the dusty roads. They often sprang out upon natives venturing alone through the jungle.

You never put foot off your veranda at night for fear of what you might step on. Before dawn the monkeys began to whistle and call. I could see their little gray faces peeping through the shutters in my bedroom. As soon as the sun went down at night the noises of the jungle began. It was like the tuning-up of an orchestra, every moment growing louder. The whole jungle was awake and moving in on the town. Every moment it grew closer. And every moment you felt smaller and smaller in the face of a relentless force about to engulf you. But by and by, like the heat, you got used to it.

There was a small white plaster "Church of England" in the center of the town with palm trees at the entrance. Inside was a punkah with a red cotton flounce that on Sundays stirred the hot air with its tired wings. There was a hospital, and a school, and barracks for the Malay guides, and another for the Indian Sikhs. Besides the Lake Club for the Europeans, was a larger club in the town for the Eurasians and transient visitors called the Spotted Dog. Near the club was a resthouse or small hotel. There was also an impressive group of public offices, an ornate line of towering white-washed buildings with minarets.

The cloudy brown stream on which the town was built was called the Klang River and where on the large flat stones lining its banks the dhobies, or native washermen, beat the laundry of the Europeans to shreds.

After the sun went down the British officials gathered at the small club in the so-called Public Gardens to play billiards and drink whisky-sodas. The wives played bridge on the shaded verandas, or sat inside under the slow-moving punkah, that only fanned the heat, and looked at months-old magazines from England. Once a week the native band made languid music outside the club and always finished with "Rule Britannia." They did not play "God Save the King" because of the Malay rajahs being nominal rulers of the Malay States—or some such reason.

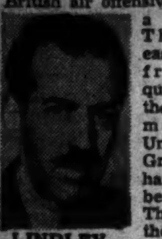
The native population of Kuala Lumpur at this time must have been 60,000 or thereabouts. This included the Chinese, who did most of the work, and the Malays who sat aside, and the Javanese who looked after the gardens, and many melancholy Eurasians. There were also Indian Sikhs who wore high red turbans with their khaki uniforms. Their black beards were parted in the middle and curled about their ears. Sometimes they dyed their beards bright red with henna. These huge Sikhs had tiny wives who wore long muslin coats and tightly wrapped trousers to the ankle. Their coats were of peach, and aquamarine and lemon and about their ankles were bracelets of gold and silver and about their throats innumerable beads. When they took the air in the evening, close at the heels of their men like faithful spaniels, you could hear the soft clashing of their beads and chains and the ring of their anklets as they passed you in the darkness.

ELIZABETH W. WRIGHT.

The Second Front

By Ernest Lindley

A Method Of Delaying Action



LINDLEY

SOMETHING of an argument has developed in the press and radio over the question: Is the British air offensive over Europe a second front? This argument easily leads away from the real questions which the high commands of the United States and Great Britain have to answer as best they can. These are: Can the Nazis be prevented from knocking out Russia, or crashing through to the Caucasus or the Red Sea? And how?

If there had been or still were plenty of time and plenty of transportation, the barrier to Hitler's eastward expansion could be made impregnable. The Russian army could be trained and equipped not only to stand up against the most powerful blow the Nazis could deliver, but to launch the counter-offensives which would drive the Germans out of Russia. And given enough time and transportation, the United Nations position in the eastern Mediterranean could be made secure beyond question.

But time and transportation have been short. Until the test comes, no one can be sure that the Germans will not break through and shatter the eastern barrier running from Murmansk south to the Red Sea. Consideration of a second front in western Europe this summer was prompted by anxiety lest the Nazis break through in the east. The purpose would be to soften the blow in the east by compelling the Nazis to hold more of their forces in the west.

SO CONCEIVED, the second front in the west could be a success even though the Anglo-American force should be driven off the continent. It would serve its purpose if it saved the eastern front. For if the Nazis can be kept in bounds this year, they almost certainly can be finished off in another year or so; whereas, if they break out, and especially if they knock out Russia, the war might develop into a five or ten years struggle.

If a second front, opened this year, could be held, it might soon develop into a death-thrust at Germany. But to wait until the Anglo-American forces are strong enough to drive through to a decisive victory in the west might lead to disaster in the east—and the force then needed to win in the west would be several times greater.

THERE ARE some signs that the fear of an Anglo-American offensive already has compelled Hitler to increase his garrisons in the west, from Norway south. If that is so, it may be argued that the mere threat of a western offensive—especially if it is bolstered by the rapid movement of American troops to the British Isles—will immobilize enough German power to prevent a break-through in the east.

British sources indicate that the R. A. F's. heavy bombing raids are having a similar effect, compelling the Nazis to hold a major part of their air force—perhaps one-fourth—in France and Norway and western Germany.

But full data are lacking. The Nazis can take a lot of punishment from the air in the west, without seriously weakening their immediate striking power in the east. The destruction of factories and damaging of power plants and railway junctions and viaducts in France and Western Germany, may substract nothing from the power of a German drive in the east during the next two or three months. Thus, the R. A. F. bombing raids may be extremely damaging without achieving the purpose of a second front: the relief of the east.

A possibility, evidently very much in the minds of the British, is that the Nazis are planning to open another front of their own by an air-borne invasion of the British Isles. Such an effort might serve the Nazi purpose, even though it did not result in conquest. It would be a success if it caused enough damage to relieve the Nazis of fear of an Anglo-American invasion of the continent during the next few critical months.

Or, as Vice President Wallace has warned, the new Nazi front may be a southward thrust through France and French North and West Africa toward South America, timed to coincide with a Japanese attack on Alaska and the Pacific Northwest.

There is no magic in a second front. The question is whether the Nazis and the Japanese empires can be kept in approximately their present boundaries and our main partners—Russia, the British Commonwealth and China—can be kept fighting until our own full strength can be projected against the enemy. The proposed second front is a method of achieving this end.

The Gallup Poll

33% of Adults Have Bought No War Bonds Or Stamps; Voluntary Purchases Favored

By Dr. George Gallup,

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., May 14.—Interviews with a cross-section of the American public from coast to coast reveal two salient facts concerning the sale of war bonds and stamps.

1. Two out of ever three employed persons in the country are either willing to have their employer deduct a regular part of their wages each payday to buy war bonds for them, or have already begun such an arrangement. The other one-third are not at present willing to accept a wage deduction plan.

2. Although war stamps can be bought for as little as 10 cents, one-third of all adults in the country have not yet bought a single war bond or stamp.

Of every 100 persons in the group earning less than $30 a week, fewer have purchased either stamps or bonds than in any other income level. Only half of this group have bought bonds or stamps. In the income group earning between $30 and $45 a week, 75 per cent have bought, and in the group earning more than $45 a week, 86 per cent.

In order to measure the public reaction to a payroll deduction plan, the Institute asked all employed persons:

"Would you be willing to have your employer take a regular part of your wages or salary each payday to buy war savings bonds or stamps for you?"

Twenty-five per cent of all employed persons say they are already covered by a plan in which the employer deducts part of their wages for bonds. Another 43 per cent say they would be willing to take part in such a program. The remaining 32 per cent expressed themselves unwilling at this time to accept the pay deduction scheme.

To shed light on the question of how much people in each income level believe they can afford to spend for war bonds or stamps, the Institute put this question to all employed persons interviewed:

"What is the largest amount out of each dollar of your salary or wages you would be able to put into war savings bonds or stamps?"

The average amounts indicated by people in various income brackets is shown below:

Amount of earnings	Amt. willing to have deducted
Less than $30 a week	8%
More than $30 a week	10

Students to Speak On Better Nutrition

Westminster, Md., May 14 (AP).—Western Maryland College nutrition students are aiding the Carroll County nutrition program as a national defense project.

Adeline Hoffman, county home demonstration agent, said today she had arranged for home economics department students to speak at various Parent-Teacher Association meetings throughout the country.

The students are instructed by Mrs. Wilson C. Raver, of the home economics department faculty.

Stock Poison

IF ANYONE, such as the Communists or old Upton Sinclair, would like to engage the services of a party who is sure poison to the corporation stocks of the capitalistic system, as a means of destroying same, a letter to the author of these dispatches is advised. Your correspondent's weight for age, so to speak, probably never has had an equal, as a destroyer of stock values. It is true that he never has produced a personal Black Friday, but up to now he has never really let himself go. All his operations have been more or less in fun, but the results prove that he has the Midas touch in reverse.

Regard, for example, what your correspondent did to A. T. & T. This stock was retailing at 176 when your correspondent first hit it a little lick to see what would happen. The deal involved only 10 shares, but within a week A. T. & T. was down to 167 and many millions of investors' money was rubbed out. Later there was another deal for 10 more and A. T. & T. went to 157 and another purchase of 5 shares drove it to 115. That was the last time your correspondent had the courage to look at A. T. & T., but, remember, he knocked off 61 points with three piker purchases amounting to only 25 shares. At the present time a purchase of a thousand shares by a party possessing the withering touch, meaning your correspondent, would just about drive A. T. & T. off the board.

THERE WAS another stock, representing a popular commodity which, to most Americans, is as necessary as cigarettes and which has a basis of sugar. Last summer your correspondent got 10 shares of that and when nothing happened immediately, began to wonder if something was wrong with the old touch. But there was nothing wrong with the wizardry. Because along came this sugar shortage and rationing and the stock operation has been a magnificent success in a peculiar way.

Back there in 1929 was when this gift was first discovered. All through the era of wonderful nonsense, when the office boys around the shop were forming $50 pools to buy stocks on margin and the hackmen kept their radios running so they could calculate their winnings, your author strictly refrained from all such, deeming these operations to be somehow unsound. Therefore, when the panic broke, he was glad to have saved a little each week during the boom years. Thus when the John D. Rockefellers, father and son, publicly allowed that the market had hit bottom and was about to bounce, your correspondent went down to a Wall Street broker's office and said: "I would like to buy $5000 worth of your best investment stocks."

"What kind?" the customers' man inquired.

"Assorted."

So, very much like a very much younger investor spending a nickel at a candy counter and choosing some of these and those and them, your correspondent bought a variety of securities and, according to the broker's instructions, put them away and forgot about them. That is, he forgot about them until they became so gamy that the department of health confiscated them as a menace to public hygiene and sent them off to the incinerator.

BACK in those boom years, when touring Florida with the ball players and fighters, who were our chief national interest, your correspondent was known to his colleagues as a great sucker for the one-armed bandits. He would be sitting in some place having a quiet sandwich and a housepaint julep and the first thing you knew he would be dancing up and down before a battery of those plum-and-lemon machines and, sometimes, would lose as much as $25 in a single evening.

One of the great market financiers of our time and one of the richest Americans said one night that it was a shame to see anyone throw away money that way. He said a man ought to invest in sound stocks, not squander his money on a device which was rigged against him.

Little did he know that he was speaking to a man with a magic way with stocks.

If the Communist Party would like to put up a stake of, say, $100,000, your correspondent, just for the fun of it, would undertake to attack U. S. Steel and General Motors and start something that would utterly destroy capitalism without loss of blood.

It must be a gift.

Two Mine Strikes Are Laid to New Federal Law

Washington, Pa., May 14 (A.P.).—A strike, which company officials said involved compliance with a new Federal act regulating use of explosives, halted operations today at two mines of the Republic Steel Corp.

The mines, employing 1500, are the Clyde No. 1 at Fredericktown, Washington County, and the Clyde No. 3 at Clarksville, Greene County. They produce approximately 6500 tons of coking coal daily for steel mills.

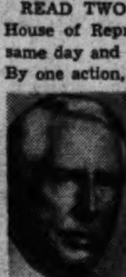
A company spokesman reported 45 shot firers at the two mines had objected to a company order requiring them to take full charge and accountability for powder used in blasting loose coal in the mines. In the past, he said, the miners had obtained the powder, carried it into the mines and turned it over to shot firers, who set off the blasts.

The company order, the spokesman said, was issued to comply with the new law regulating the manufacture, sale, distribution and use of explosives.

Budget Balancing

By Mark Sullivan

Increasing Taxes And Soldiers' Pay



SULLIVAN

READ TWO ACTIONS in the House of Representatives on the same day and grasp the meaning. By one action, the House adopted an increase of $20 a month in the pay of men in the armed services (bringing the total to $50).

Twenty dollars a month is $240 a year. Multiply that by the number in the armed services. How many there will be, ultimately, we can't know yet. But call it six million—five million in the Army, one million in the Navy. Six million times $240 is about $1,500,000,000 a year. This is just a raise in pay. It is but one item, a comparatively small item, in the total cost of the war.

On the same day, the House Ways and Means Committee adopted a plan for increasing the Government's income. It increased the taxes on small incomes. By this action, if it goes through Congress, married persons will be taxed on all their income above $1200. (At present their exemption is $1500.) Single persons will be taxed on all their income above $500. (At present, their exemption is $750.) The extra revenue the Government will get is estimated at about $1,200,000,000.

These two actions, it will be seen, more or less balance each other. A billion and a half new outlay—and a billion and a quarter new income. This is ideal management of the Government's fiscal affairs. It conforms to a rule for legislative bodies rather too ideal to be always practicable—every time you vote an appropriation, vote the added taxation to pay for it.

UNFORTUNATELY, this present conformance to the rule is exceptional. That the rule is not lived up to is not greatly the fault of Congress—it is much more the fault of the facts. This war is going to cost, the present year and as many future years as the war lasts, vastly more than can possibly be raised by taxation. For much of the outgo, we must depend on borrowing.

In another respect the action of the House, in taking more tax money from persons having relatively low incomes, is a frank recognition of reality. Congress wants new money. So Congress goes where most of the new money is—that is in the pockets of persons having relatively low incomes. To point this out may not be popular. For Congress to act upon it takes both courage and sense.

By the war, the Government is creating a vast quantity of new money, paying it out for munitions and other war expenditures. Of this new money, much goes to corporations and businessmen. It goes there, but won't stay there. For taxing this part of the new money, and taxing it heavily, Congress has already acted or is about to. Already the Ways and Means Committee, writing the new tax bill, has decided to take, in taxes, 94 per cent of the excess profits made by corporations and businessmen as a result of the war. Of such profits as remain, and may be paid out in dividends to individual stockholders, the new tax bill will take just as much as is practicable. This year, and as long as the war lasts, will be a period of decreased dividends, not larger ones.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, in his recent radio speech, said the tax law should be so written that no person will have an income of more than $25,000 a year after his taxes are paid. The new tax bill will not go that far but will go as near to it as is practicable. Actually, the number of such incomes has already been made small by the existing tax law. Estimates have been made of the amount of money the Government would get, additional to what it already gets, if the new tax law lived up, literally, to the standard Mr. Roosevelt proposed. The estimates vary, some saying the amount of money thus procured would pay the Government's expenses for four days, others say 12 days.

Of the new money created by the Government as an incident of war, a large part goes to wage earners having relatively small incomes. The amount of new money that will go to these, additional to what they receive in normal years, is estimated at from 5 to 15 billion dollars. Most of this is, for the tax collector, virgin soil. Hitherto, this new money could not be taxed—for the good reason that it did not exist. It is this new money that the Ways and Means Committee tapped the other day.

Yet many are reluctant, properly, to take a material amount from the new money in the hands of wage earners. Many would prefer they should have the opportunity to keep it—it is their chance to accumulate savings. From this consideration, among others, arises the suggestion of "compulsory savings." The proposal is that wage earners, with everybody else, be required to accept a portion of their remuneration—5 percent or 10 or whatever—in the form of war bonds. Thus the Government would get money to pay the cost of war—and the wage earners would accumulate savings. The war bonds would not be transferable, so they would be sure to remain in the hands of those who earn them, and be available when the war ends and their incomes be interrupted or reduced.

As an additional advantage, taking money from individuals by means of war bonds, would reduce excess purchasing power, hence help to avert inflation. And prevention of inflation is much in the minds of both the Administration and Congress.

Hershey Says Army Will Not Break Up Established Families

By the Associated Press

There is no present intention of breaking up any large number of "established families" by drafting their bread-winners into the Army, Selective Service Director Lewis B. Hershey said yesterday, but it may become necessary to shift some such men into essential war work.

Testifying before the House Military Committee in support of a pay allotment bill to aid dependents of service men, Hershey said there was a "genuine social reason" for preserving established families, and added that he would dislike to see legislation "that would make the public believe there is no question of dependency any more."

By an established family, the general indicated that he meant one not founded since the outbreak of the war and one in which there was a large degree of dependency.

He said that more single men who have been given occupational deferments, and more married men with working wives, soon may find themselves wearing Uncle Sam's khaki.

Shift Into Industry

As young men are moved from industry into the battle lines, he added, their places may be taken by women or by men deferred because of dependency or age. There is, he told the committee, no way of telling the industrial value of men over the fighting age limit who could be used in production work but there were great possibilities for them.

"We will be taking, probably," into the Army "some people who have a wife who may be working," he testified.

Payments under the Allotment Act, he said, should not be made so high that there might be created in the public mind a feeling that heads of families should be drafted because their dependents would be cared for by the Government. The amounts provided for in the bill, he said, were fair enough.

Must Allot $20

They provide that a service man of the lower grades must allot $20 monthly of his pay to his dependents, with the Government supplementing this at the rate of $20 for a wife, and $10 for each child, with lesser amounts for indirect dependents such as parents, brothers, sisters and grandchildren.

Along with representatives of the War and Navy Departments, Hershey indorsed the general provisions of the bill, hearing on which will be concluded tomorrow.

None of the agencies indorsed a title that would allow the Federal Security Administrator to make additional and unlimited payments in so-called hardship cases, and the War and Navy Departments objected to a proposal to set up a policy-making board to determine what constitutes dependency. That, they said, should be left to the services.

Hershey said there was an "immediate and pressing" need for the legislation and it would "make a great deal of difference" in morale.

Speaking for the Army, Maj. William S. Richards told the committee the legislation was "essential to the morale of a soldier." Although the Army did not "contemplate" taking many men with dependents, he indicated, the magnitude of the war program might require a change in plans.

Of 1,861,000 men taken into the Army between July, 1940, and January, 1942, Richards said, 160,933 have dependents. Based on an Army of 4,500,000 men, he said, the legislation would cost around 527 million dollars annually. That, he emphasized, was "a wild guess."

1942 Vacation Notes

Mr. and Mrs. Eb Newton will take a 4-gallon vacation soon, weather and the ration board permitting.

Effie Monks, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gale Monks, spent a weekend at home recently. She stood it fairly well.

Colonel and Mrs. Gil Hoffer had pretty good luck attempting to reach their country home last week. They got within 75 miles of it.

Mr. and Mrs. Whaples have not decided where to go for their two weeks' vacation and will take it up with their favorite gas station.

Luther Mosley, who has been a nervous wreck every summer for years, is in fine shape this season due to the fact his whole family knows it can't force him to drive them 100 miles and back every Sunday.

Carl Everts spent an entire weekend recently getting a rest.

Mr. and Mrs. Waddell Erp took a motor trip last Sunday. They were gone about 2 hours.

Jed Whippett is pretty happy over the gas rationing. He won't have to visit his wife's cousins up Cob Hollow way for the duration of the war and there's no chance of them motoring down to see him, either.

Binge Noggins says things are getting so tough he thinks maybe he will have to put up the big bike for the season.

Ned Packer and his wife had quite an argument one day last week. Mrs. Packer thinks they're entitled to a 6-gallon vacation trip and Ned thinks a 4-gallon rest plenty.

Jeptha Mercer got three pints more gasoline than he was entitled to yesterday. It seems he presented his sugar card by mistake and it wasn't noticed.

Mr. and Mrs. Hazen Potts have been summoned before a Federal board. They are charged with exceeding their vacation quota by 3 quarts.

Culby Darnell, our well-known local local gas station proprietor, has had a breakdown from arguing with customers over their quotas.

A lunacy commission put Zack Bisby away Tuesday. The allegation that Zack was cracked was clinched when two pumping station men testified that he came in recently and said "Fill her up."

Blossom Sigsbee must be going somewhere. She took a sponge downtown and had it filled with gas yesterday.

Prentice Dobbirt got quite a scare the other day. While in his garage he got into his car, stepped on the accelerator and the motor started!

Benton Boffle, who made a trip to his summer place and back by train last weekend, will deliver an illustrated lecture at the Town Hall next Wednesday night on the novel experience. Tickets $1.

Mrs. Addie Wharton, who never sold the old Rausch-Lang electric runabout, has hauled it out and is driving it around town to the envy of all the folks who thought she was nuts.

Federal agents are reported at Luke Willoughby's house. Luke got to Stony Creek and back, 4 miles out of town, recently by auto and an inquiry was requested by neighbors.

Living Off Capital

Hitler And The Next Six Months

NOVER

THE MILITARY equation in Europe today is too full of unknowns and imponderables to permit of anything like precise analysis. There has been a vast amount of more or less expert speculation as to the total number of effectives, the total number of planes and tanks and guns, that Hitler has on hand and can throw into the struggle this spring and summer. Speculation on this point has only been exceeded by speculation as to the direction in which the Wehrmacht will next move.

The actual facts, however, remain a carefully guarded secret. So are the facts regarding the forces and equipment which the United Nations are in a position to employ against the Reich at this time.

The broad outlines of the situation facing us and facing Hitler are nonetheless reasonably clear.

WE KNOW, for instance, that our own strength is growing.

We are building more planes and tanks and ships and guns than we have ever built before. It is no longer a secret that the President's breath-taking war production program for 1942 will not only be reached but in all probability exceeded.

We know, on the other hand, that Germany's resources are not unlimited. Hitler's frantic efforts to supplement the Reich's inadequate labor supply by forced requisitions of man power from occupied and satellite nations is but one of the many indications that suggest that Germany's productive capacity which has been at its peak threatens to taper off.

The two blades of the scissors thus draw closer. On the one hand our curve is rising rapidly. On the other hand Germany's curve, if it has not yet begun to decline, has certainly begun to level off.

The best guess today is that in certain vital categories, such as combat planes, American production alone is already well in excess of that in the Reich. And in addition to what is being turned out by our factories and mills there is the material being turned out by British, Russian and Canadian factories and mills.

TO BE SURE, the European front is but one front in a war of world dimensions.

We are under the imperious necessity of spreading out the products of our factories over a wide area. Our man power and materiel continue to flow in a steady stream to Australia, India, China, Egypt, the Middle East, Iceland, Alaska and elsewhere besides Great Britain. And the transportation problem we face, difficult at the outset, has become very serious as a result of U-boat activities off our coast and Japan's conquest of vital United Nations bases in the Southwest Pacific.

Despite these handicaps it may not be long before the United Nations will be able to employ against Germany a force in excess of the total force which Germany commands. Indeed, that day is fast approaching, particularly in the sphere of air warfare.

Soon, as Churchill has revealed, the British aerial offensive against German and German-held cities will be stepped up as American air power, based on Britain, supplements the effective job being done by the R. A. F. Already Hitler has been placed in the dangerous position where he cannot safely afford to ignore the possibility that this spring or summer will see the establishment of a second land front in Europe.

IN THE MEANTIME the revolt of the conquered peoples of Europe continues to spread despite the savage measures being taken by the Nazi authorities to suppress it.

Far from having been able to organize Europe, Hitler only succeeded in looting it. But he cannot go on doing that much longer unless he succeeds in conquering more territory. And in the months since the fall of France and particularly since the attack on Russia he has not only had to squander much of that loot but also to dig into the Reich's own reserves.

Germany today is a nation living off its capital. That process cannot go on indefinitely. If she does not replenish her resources she will collapse. But the realization that collapse is certain to occur necessarily means an inevitable and early attempt by Germany to replenish her resources while at the same time depriving her enemies of theirs. Only in that way can Germany remain on top.

IT IS FOR this reason that the next five or six months are likely to be the most critical of the war, putting into the shade all that has gone before.

We can be sure that Hitler will not hesitate to throw all the resources at Germany's command into the struggle that now impends. Nor must we underestimate the capital that Germany has to throw in. What will count will not be the planes and guns and tanks we produce tomorrow or even those we produce today, but only those we manage to get over to the actual theaters of war.

So if Hitler faces his supreme task so do we. If Russia holds out, Hitler's goose will be cooked. If, by the end of summer or at the latest by the beginning of winter, the Red Army remains the formidable fighting force it has proved to be, the stresses and strains within Germany and in satellite countries will rapidly increase.

But upon that "if" and the further question whether during the next months sufficient direct and indirect aid can be sent to Russia to enable her to smash the Wehrmacht the fate of the world may well depend.

Ethiopian Prisoners of War Freed—

The scramble above ensued when the British, returning 1700 Ethiopian prisoners of war to their homes for repatriation, distributed 13,000 cigarettes upon discharge of the native soldiers at Dessye. Officers and sergeants used walking sticks to restore order. Weston Haynes (right), Associated Press photographer, accompanied the British repatriation convoy from Asmara in the Sudan to Dessye, an 800-mile trek. The convoy, 5 miles long, was pictured (below) by Haynes as it writhed slowly through the hairpin turns in Alamota pass in the mountainous portion of the journey. Freeing of the Ethiopians was the first general release of prisoners in that sector of the war

2. TAKES AIM from a tower with wheels, operated by the pilot behind him. Bombardier Harry Wilkie gets set to release his "bomb load," a plummet (A) as Pilot Thomas Thomann takes after the target (B). In hangars throughout the country, bombardiers are sharpening their eyes to drop one . . .

Bombardiers Commissioned After 12 Weeks' Training

Already making their marks in this war on the fighting fronts of the world are graduates of the Bombardier School at the Air Corps Advanced Flying School, Albuquerque Air Base, N. Mex. The success of any bombing mission depends upon the skill of the man at the bomb sight. If the bombardier is not able to droo his "load" on the "spot," the entire mission is a failure and men and equipment have been risked to no avail.

The love of an Amercan boy for a gun, coupled with the high efficiency of the American bombsight, form the reasons why Americans have become so proficient in "aiming" the most lethal of all "guns"—heavy aerial bombs.

The Army Air Forces need many more of these trained air warriors and in Albuquerque is one of several schools now turning them out, ready and equipped for duty on our far-flung fronts. But they need new recruits, new volunteers who can pass the entrance requirements and who want to do their part in dropping deadly "eggs" on the Japs and Nazis wherever they can be found.

BOMBARDIER
Ready at His Post

Many of the young men, between the ages of 18 and 26, who are enlisting in the AAF as air cadets, hope that they will be lucky enough to be designated for bombardier training. Those completing the 12 weeks of intensive training, receive the coveted "wings" of the bombardier and a second lieutenant's commission in the Army Air Forces.

After proving his skill in bombing tactics and flight procedure in the B-18 bombers used for training, the bombardier, now a full-fledged second lieutenant, is ready for action and for his chance to smash the enemyy.

3. "RIGHT DOWN THE FUNNEL" like this. The plummet's tip squarely in the center of the circle gave Bombardier Wilkie credit for a direct hit. These electrically-driven towers and targets are used in Army Air Force bombardier schools and by pilots and bombardiers on patrol duty to keep in practice.

Abbott and Costello Score Wacky Hit at the Palace

Although "Rio Rita" in Name Only, New M-G-M Film Is Rousing and Tuneful Entertainment; Nostradamus Features the Supplementaries

"RIO RITA," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the famous musical comedy, adapted to the screen by Richard Connell and Gladys Lehman, with special material by John Grant, costarring Abbott and Costello, with Kathryn Grayson, John Carroll, Patricia Dane, Tom Conway, Peter Whitney, Barry Nelson, Arthur Space, Dick Rich, Eve Puig, Joan Valerie, Mitchell Lewis and Eros Volusia. Directed by S. Sylvan Simon. At Loew's Palace.

"RIO RITA," chief feature of the new bill at Loew's Palace Theater, was fashioned strictly for laughs and lilts. Aside from the title and two songs from the original score, any resemblance between the present flippancy and the famous musical comedy from which it purports to have been derived is purely nonexistent.

KATHRYN GRAYSON

This is not to say that the new business to which a popular old title has been attached is not a hilarious symposium of slapstick, interlarded with pleasant songs and dances. Merely a warning that those who attend the Palace expecting to encounter some suggestion of a musical piece they used to love, will discover something entirely else again up there on the screen.

What they will be watching will be the most pretentious starring vehicle in which Abbott and Costello have been seen since they crowned themselves the cinema's low-comedy kings in "Buck Privates." That was to have been expected of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in their first production for the lads who now are seemingly more firmly intrenched than ever at the top of the comedy heap.

But in surrounding their newly acquired stars with all that opulence and the most noteworthy supporting cast they ever have had, the producers still did not quite dare risk any deviation from the familiar formula of all the Abbott and Costello pictures. Their reticence was fully justified by the results and the cyclonic quality of audience response to them. It's amazing that one theater could hold so much diaphragmatic laughter.

Gettinga round eventually to a Nazi espionage plot and a disturbed romance between a beautiful young daughter of Vista Del Rio and an idol of the airwaves, who returns home for a visit only once every 10 years, the story called "Rio Rita" gets under way with Doc and Wishy—that would be Abbott and Costello—trying to get eating money by clerking in a pet shop. The confusion resulting from the necessity of Wishy's giving Mrs. Pike's peke an airing will give you a rough idea. Espying N. Y. tags on Ricardo Montero's car, Doc and Wishy pack themselves into the tire compartment—otherwise empty, perforce—supposedly Gotham bound. Senor Montero, of course, is boundf or Vista Del Rio, where the Nazis have their radio station, transmitting secret messages in code. What happens after that is principally a succession of typical Abbott and Costello "gag" sequences. Most of them are good. Especially the one involving the police dog that swallows a radio receiving set in the form of an apple and intermittently gives out with astonishing announcements! Then there are the "Rangers' Song" and "Rio Rita," sung by John Carroll in his rich and resonant baritone; the "Shadow Song" from "Dinorah," astonishingly well done by the youthful Kathryn Grayson, and a sinuous dance, with an exotic and undulant background of coryphees, by Eros Volusia. So there, altogether, you have fun, fury, intrigue, excitement, surprise, suspense, romance, music, rhythmic grace and A. & C. at the top of their form.

Cast Not Fooled Into "Acting"

The whole merry melange is played in a spirit of high frivolity by a cast that never takes itself or its play seriously. How could they, with Bud and Lou to sound the keynote? Kathryn Grayson and John Carroll, as Rita and Ricardo, may not be the perfectly matched romantic pair, but they are ideally suited to each other vocally and sing their numbers delightfully. Eros Volusia, of course, is deservedly renowned for the warmth of her Latin exuberance in the dance and Patricia Dane makes a nice "menace," who turns out to be a United States Secret Service operative. Tom Conway, Peter Whitney, Barry Nelson and numerous others are sufficiently effective as Nazi butts for the audacious enterprises of the delirious Doc and wacky Wishy. And that police dog is no negligible canine comic, either.

Easily foremost among the supplementary features on the new Palace bill is the Carey Wilson short subject, "Further Prophecies of Nostradamus," in which the seer of 400 years ago seems to have forecast with uncanny accuracy everything that is happening in the world today—even to the ultimate and inevitable Axis defeat and a long period of world peace. The Fitzpatrick Technicolor Traveltalk, "Minnesota, Land of Plenty" is informative and beautiful, and the newsreel especially diversified. Gary Cooper's appeal for Army-Navy Relief is the final item of a ridiculously roistering program.

A Good Football Bet!

Hollywood, Calif., May 14.

"The Smiths of Minnesota" has a new approach that sounds refreshing. It will star Bruce Smith, last year's all-American football star, but there won't be a single football scene in the film. Story concerns a producer who signs up the all-American star, then gets a high powered writer, who groans, "Ye gods!—Another of those 'Rah! Rah! Rah!—One-minute-to-go!' thrillers!" Writer goes to player's home town for background material, because so interested in boy's friends and daily life that he never gets around to football. Bruce plays himself, and the writer is the romantic lead. Columbia execs believe they have a real bet in Bruce Smith, who's a swell kid.

ROBERT MONTGOMERY

Lieut. Bob Montgomery won't give up producing stage plays, even though his latest with Elliott Nugent was a failure. Bob's money will back another one on Broadway this fall. He's also putting $300,000 into a new tungsten mine for the Government. He already has one going great guns in Bishop. This will be his second, and much larger.

Director Henry Koster, who made many Deanna Durbin successes, is one of our alien directors who has to remain indoors after 8 p. m. . . . Incidentally, Phil Carstein, Koster's associate producer, was formerly second assistant prop man on "King of Jazz" . . . Looks as though these hardy perennials, Bob Cummings and Bob Stack, will again pay court to Deanna Durbin in her Jean Renoir picture.

Hollywood's already begun speculating on another Victory Caravan. Jack Benny thinks the town is good for at least three this year, taking along the same number of stars, covering towns as yet untouched in the South and Middle West. Jack couldn't go on this one, but he'd like to m. c. the next and take along such stars as Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, Fred Astaire, Mary Martin. And might I ask—who wouldn't?!!

Another beauty contest winner who made good here is 20-year-old Loraine Miller, who arrived about eight months ago, was widely publicized as a nurse, discovered by Sam Goldwyn. She was given the title "Ball Of Fire Girl," and then he promptly forgot all about her.

So she did odd jobs in soda fountains, dime stores, and beauty parlors to keep going, but spent her evenings studying instead of becoming a playgirl. And now Paramount's put her under contract, and her first picture will be "Happy Go Lucky."

I don't know who some here are grousing about that Life story of Joan Fontaine and Olivia de Havilland. I thought it was sensational. And anyone getting that much space during war time should be shouting instead of gnashing their teeth.

MARLENE DIETRICH
in her fancy get-up as Cherry Malotte, in the new film version of Rex Beach's famous story of "The Spoilers," currently occupying the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater. Alvino Rey and King Sisters Top Screen Fare at Capitol

By Mary Harris

"A GENTLEMAN AFTER DARK," Edward Small's picturization for United Artists of "A Whiff of Heliotrope," by Richard Washburn Child, adapted to the screen by Patterson McNutt and George Bruce, costarring Brian Donlevy, Miriam Hopkins and Preston Foster, with Harold Huber, Philip Reed, Gloria Holden, Douglas Dumbrille, Sharon Douglas and Bill Henry. Directed by Edwin L. Marin. At Loew's Capitol Theater.

Does anyone want to see a star before she's become a star in her own right? Then perch yourself as far front in the Capitol Theater as you can get and watch the littlest King Sister solo "I Said No!"

Nothing so devastating has happened on the Capitol stage since Bonny Baker mopped up with "Oh, Johnny!" We know that the King Sisters are star vocalists, but the point is that the little blonde sister, unidentified in the billing, is a tremendous comedienne as well as a singer, can twist an audience around her little finger with the greatest of ease.

Alvino Rey's orchestra bowed off yesterday afternoon amid a storm of cheers and whistles from a big crowd of youngsters who seemed to have taken gas rationing leave from high school.

A sagacious and modest person is Maestro Alvino. As an electric guitarist he is topflight, but in building his band he has surrounded himself with sensationally brilliant swingsters; generously gives them plenty of prominence. The result is music rich in contrast and color, ranging from the subdued sweetness of "Song of the Islands," featuring the Rey guitar, to jive panics on the drums, clarinet, trumpet and saxaphone. This may not be what the doctor ordered for your nerves, but it's exactly the musical order of the younger generation.

The Rey act is as highly vitaminized in its accompanying vaudeville acts as in the orchestra's own right. Pat Henning, Broadway clown, thinks of the darndest things, all original but requiring some nerve to spring on an audience, we'd say. There's his impressions of the stars in a dog show—some of the flashes as incredible as they are funny. But there they are. Spencer and Foreman come out jitter-stepping, but soon prove they're more than rug-cutters, by going into a dialogue in dance that's rather upper-bracket.

Donlevy to the Rescue

It's a long stage show this week, but you'll never realize it any more than you realize you're traveling swiftly in a streamliner express.

The celluloid feature, "Gentleman After Dark," has a neatly tailored diversion quality. But only because of the sure-fire, if not original, thrills of the story and the superb life infused into their parts by Brian Donlevy and Harold Huber. In fact, a great and somnolent calm seems to fall upon the doings when Mr. Donlevy is absent. Miriam Hopkins is evidently unhappy in the role of a lady whom it would be flattery to call a trollop. Preston Foster hasn't a thing to do but look attentive as various people pour their woes into his ears. There's also Philip Reed, Donlevy's successful rival in love. There's nothing to say about his acting, except that the audience is lucky that he's murdered half-way through the picture.

If "Gentleman After Dark" means anything, it clinches the already known fact that Brian Donlevy is a great actor, can save any picture, and that Harold Huber is one of the few character performers who can do full justice to a malevolently funny role.

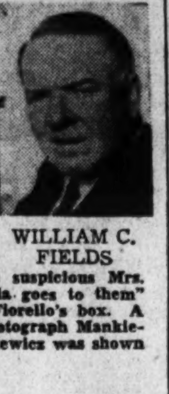
The picture is based on the Richard Washburn Child story, "A Whiff of Heliotrope," and we have only one guess why this intriguing title was not retained. But perhaps we'd better not talk about that. The yarn has a "Raffles" theme, is punctuated by one murder by violence, one murder by accident, one murder by suggestion. Other diverting incidents include a jail break, expert blackmail, a jewel robbery.

LEONARD LYONS

Broadway Glossary

New York, May 14.

WAR: John Barrymore, Gene Fowler and W. C. Fields registered together, at the Selective Service Board. The registrar recognized the trio and said: "Don't tell me, boys. The Japs sent you" . . . The venerable Fields, who is suffering from gout, raised his crutch in anger, and replied: "Here I am—prepared to give the best years of my life to my country."



WILLIAM C. FIELDS

PROOF: Herman Mankiewicz, who won an Academy Award for "Citzen Kane," is deserving of another prize, for something he accomplished last week. He shattered a woman's belief in her intuition . . . Friday afternoon Mankiewicz reluctantly was inveigled into attending the twilight ball game at Ebbets Field, where the Giants and Dodgers played for the Navy Relief Fund. He came home late, was duly apologetic, and explained that he had been to a ball game with Mayor LaGuardia . . . "In the first place, ball games are played earlier in the afternoon," the suspicious Mrs. Mankiewicz insisted, "and I don't think LaGuardia goes to them" . . . At the ball game, Herman had sat next to Fiorello's box. A newspaper friend arranged for a cameraman to photograph Mankiewicz with the Mayor . . . The next day Mrs. Mankiewicz was shown the irrefutable photo-proof.

RETURN: Last week the American warship "Marblehead," returned here for repairs, after being torpedoed in the Pacific. The amazing 11,000-mile trip home was made despite the loss of the rudder and steering gear . . . When the torpedo struck, it destroyed the ship's kitchen. The ship's commander revealed the novel eating-arrangements for the crew on the limping voyage home . . . At each meal time, the signal was given—and the sailors were let loose among the hundreds of canned goods, to open whichever they wanted and to eat whatever they preferred.

EQUALITY: At Hyde Park last weekend some of the visitors discussed the proposed $25,000 ceiling on incomes. "It'll be a true equalizer, if incomes are limited to that figure," said one of the visitors . . . "Think so?" asked the President . . . "Well," was the reply, "it will mean that for the first time, the President of the United States will make as much as the president of General Motors."

CHATTER: Within the next ten days one of the most important members of the board of trustees of the University of Chicago will resign—because of policy—difference with President Hutchins. . . . Buddy Rogers made his farewell to civilian life at Reuben's the other night. He's going into the Navy . . . Bob Hope vows that the newest of the "Road To" series—"The Road to Morocco"—will be his last. "From now on, no more Roads," says Hope, "Only Detours" . . . James Stewart, CBS' correspondent in Chungking, cabled his bosses to send him only expense money from now on, and buy war bonds with his salary.

ALARM: Ann Corio, the strip-teaser, has her fingerprints registered with the FBI. It happened in Philadelphia, when she was touring with Abbott & Costello. Ann received a threatening note, warning that she'd be kidnaped unless she paid $2000. She called the G-Men, who immediately took her to the FBI office and fingerprinted her . . . Abbott & Costello accompanied her. "Why are they fingerprinting me," Ann asked, "when I'm the one who received—not sent—the note?" . . . "That's because in case you're kidnaped," Abbott assured her, "this will help 'em locate you."

'The Spoilers,' at RKO-Keith's, Still a Thriller

"THE SPOILERS," Frank Lloyd's picturization for Universal of the Rex Beach novel, adapted to the screen by Lawrence Hazard and Tom Reed, costarring Marlene Dietrich, Randolph Scott and John Wayne, with Margaret Lindsay, Harry Carey, Richard Barthelmess, George Cleveland, Samuel S. Hinds, Russell Simpson, William Farnum, Marietta Canty, Jack Norton, Robert W. Service and others. Directed by Ray Enright. At RKO-Keith's.

If you're planning on catching the new bill at RKO-Keith's this week, better tote your "shootin' irons," podner, for a rougher and tougher group of citizens has never been seen in these parts.

Which is by way of saying that Frank Lloyd's "The Spoilers" is in town.

Laid in Alaska at the height of the gold rush, the action of the picture shuttles back and forth between hard-working prospectors, who are busy staking claims, and crooked officials, who are equally hard-working in their efforts to steal the valuable land away from them.

But do they get it? No, siree—not with stalwart John Wayne on the job, assisted by the highly decorative Marlene Dietrich.

The plot begins to thicken when the dishonest Gold Commissioner, played by Randolph Scott, brings in a corrupt judge to decide the disputed claims in a way that will enable him to get control of a lucrative mine owned jointly by Dextry and Glennister.

Wayne, who plays Glennister, is all for the law-and-order forces, even though his dislike for Scott is heightened by the latter's interest in Cherry Malotte, his light of love and owner of the local bar and gaming house. His partner, played by Harry Carey, is all for holding their mine by force, but is persuaded to let the court have its way, in the best interests of the community. Things happen rapidly from then on. First, the mine is taken from the two partners, and when they attempt to get back their money, which is held at the bank, a shooting takes place, for which Glennister is held.

In attempting to rid themselves of Wayne a fake jailbreak is planned, in which they try to shoot him down. But with the aid of Cherry he manages to make good his escape. He then admits to the error of his methods, joins his partner, and together they retake their mine.

The picture is highlighted by one of the best fist fights ever screened. Wayne and Scott, in settling their affairs, manage to wreck everything in sight, including each other. The rough-and-tumble affair starts in Cherry's room and works its way downstairs and finishes up in the street. It will keep you breathless on the edge of your seat.

William Farnum, the old-time favorite and star of the first silent version, is seen as one of the few honest lawyers in town, and Robert W. Service, who wrote the epic, "The Shooting of Dan McGrew," is seen as himself in the throes of composing his classic. Margaret Lindsay plays the judge's daughter, who manages to take John Wayne's mind off Cherry long enough to land in jail, and Samuel S. Hinds plays the judge in his usual competent way. Richard Barthelmess appears as Bronco, the gambler whose efforts to win Cherry are fruitless.

The entire cast performs well, aided by a script which makes the most of the bawdy, gaudy, gold-mad era.

The production seems to be authentic to the last detail and is chock-full of local color, from the hastily thrown-up shacks to the thick, oozy mud in the streets.

Director Ray Enright manages to keep the script moving along at a pace that is guaranteed to sustain interest. Whenever the action seems to be slowing up you can count on a gun fight or a little comedy to rivet attention. The usual shortreels round out a rugged bill.

ERNEST SCHIER.

Time Takes a Ride

St. Joseph, Mo., May 14 (AP).—Jay C. Riddle, a packing plant worker, lost his watch last January while he was working. He reported its loss.

Today his employer told him the timepiece was being returned.

It was found in a box of meat—in London.

A Good Teaching Job

Personnel officers last week signed up 16 Bladensburg (Md.) high school girls to take jobs in the Navy Department this summer at $1440 a year each.

The teachers who gave the girls their training, all of them college graduates, are getting only $1200.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

OPA May Expand To 100,000 Employes

Office of Price Administrator Leon Henderson is reported to have told a House committee in secret session that between 90,000 and 100,000 employes would be needed to carry out the far-flung activities of his agency. OPA is just a few months old, but it would be one of the largest Federal agencies if it gets around the 100,000 mark. Previous estimates had OPA with a maximum of 50,000 workers. Apparently the agency foresees the necessity of making its rationing boards full-time organizations. Civil service will do all the recruiting as the OPA law has a strict merit provision.

Seventy-five District policemen and the same number of postmen are being used as OPA guinea pigs. Soon the OPA will swear in Washington Boy Scouts to do their good turn for the country by being experimented on. The concrete-pounding police and postmen are wearing several different brands of reclaimed rubber heels. OPA is testing out the wearing qualities. The tests were started on April 17 and Russell Olson of OPA's consumer division estimated it'll be two more weeks before the results can be effectively measured. Olson examined the heels last night and reported all of them to be in good condition.

The postmen and policemen walk an average of 12 miles a day over sidewalks. They give rubber heels the toughest possible wear. That's why they were selected. In fact, they volunteered. Scientific tests also are being made on the heels at the Bureau of Standards. War Production Board has banned the use of new rubber in heels. Olson said his tests would show (1) a fair price for the reclaimed heels, (2) wearing qualities, and (3) whether reclaimed heels were a waste of rubber instead of conservation. The OPA official said he planned to use local Boy Scouts on future experiments. He'll test reclaimed rubber on overshoes and as shoe soles.

Office of Facts and Figures has banned reference to Hirohito, the Jap Emperor, in speeches by Government officials. It suggests the use of Japanese warlords . . . The move of the National Park Service, Fish and Wildlife Service and the Bureau of Indian Affairs to Chicago will be staggered. It'll begin around June 15 and it won't be completed before September 1. Tenants must be moved out of the Merchandise Mart before these agencies can all be moved in . . . Representative Rees of Kansas asked these questions of the House: "Why spend several thousand dollars for a United States Travel Bureau? Why have a travel bureau when people are being asked to stay at home?" . . . Comptroller General Lindsey Warren has ruled that war service appointees are entitled to sick leave.

Civil Service Commission is getting action on misplaced stenographers who are spending less than half of their time at stenographic work. Under an executive order, the commission has the authority to pull these people off their jobs and to place them in jobs where they will spend full time at stenography. . . . Jim Allen, former SEC and Justice press agent, has joined OFF. . . . WPB is losing the best people in its labor division while officials are trying to decide the future of the agency.

Mrs. Iveta Culp Hobby is odds-on favorite to head the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps. She's a former newspaper woman herself but despite that fact the women of the press are laying for her. Mrs. Hobby has the reputation of being one of the hardest persons to see in Washington. Much harder for the women reporters to see, in fact, than Mrs. Roosevelt. Mrs. Hobby is employed in the public relations office of the War Department . . . Office of Emergency Management insists that pay checks are no longer delayed at that agency and they haven't been for several weeks. Mrs. Roosevelt is investigating the delay in distributing pay checks at the new war agencies . . . The new Man Power Commission has twice discussed draft deferments of Government and private employes. A new policy may be forthcoming.

House Votes Boost In RFC Loan Funds

With little discussion, the House passed yesterday a measure increasing the lending authority of the Reconstruction Finance Corp. from $9,100,000,000 to $14,100,000,000.

The action came on a voice vote only a day after Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones told the House Banking Committee that the measure was essential because of the RFC's huge expenditures under the war industry.

Hats Are Again Only Straws In the Wind for a Season

A PANAMA AND A BAKU—Lynn Wagman, 1325 Fort Stevens Drive, wears one of the new panama's for women. Ralph Arnold (below) models a black baku to be worn with summer formals

That pain in the hat-check girl's back this morning came from carrying all those old felt hats home Wednesday night.

Straw Hat Day has arrived.

Thousands of straws are stocked in the stores now, hundreds appeared on the streets yesterday and some of them sporty enough to addle the brain, particularly the night-black Baku with a cream band designed to be worn in the cool of the evening with tuxedo and girl. General price: $7.50.

The straws came in through the winds of war, collecting themselves into hats entirely unregimented. Designers and salesmen exult: "A lightweight straw for every type of face and figure"

The trend is toward the breezier, lighter, brighter and medium tan tones this spring and summer. The Hanokis and the Kakus, popular in 1941, are scarce now because of their origin—the Far East. Dealers turned more than ever this year to the Mexican, West Indian and South American markets and have obtained "some interesting straws."

The open-weave Panama was called a favorite, this in both the regular open-weave and the twist mesh type—a strictly South American straw.

"Pressed by the growing demand for lighter, cooler, more porous men's straw hats, South American natives have for the first time in 2000 years of Panama hat weaving learned how to weave the famed Toquilla fiber into a porous but sturdy pattern that air-conditions each hat with a flow of breezes through innumerable open spaces between the fibers," the Hat Styles Council announced in New York.

The brims are still wider than those on felt hats, but no wider than of last summer. And the bands this year have no more inhibitions than a nudist camp.

"It is in trims that individualism runs rampant, with bands ranging from solid colors to gay splashy prints," the experts said. "The more conservative bands are favored for town wear, such as plain color puggrees and grosgrains stitched or woven in pleated effect and grograins in shaded stripes. The bright bands go well with country clothes and with sports effects in town."

"For wear with the slack and sport coat outfit, the trade has a supply of sport straw hats that fairly burst with style, color, comfort, variety . . ." but that's enough. We've taken that night-black No. 1 wears with the girl!

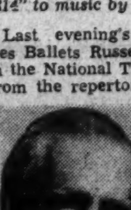
Ballet Russe Presents 2 New Offerings, Repeats a Favorite

S. Hurok presents Les Ballets Russes de Monte Carlo on Thursday night in the National Theater. Program: "Serenade" to music by Chaikovski, "Shahrazad" to music by Rimski-Korsakov, and "Vienna 1814" to music by Weber.



Brown

Last evening's performance by Les Ballets Russes de Monte Carlo in the National Theater brought out from the repertoire two works not previously placed on display this week: "Serenade" and "Vienna 1814." For the first George Balanchin has devised some choreography that shows an unusually keen perception of the rhythmic elements in the music employed, which is Chaikovski's Serenade in C major for string orchestra. The ballet was composed several years ago, and for some strange reason has come rather slowly into popularity. It has a vitality and an intimate relation with the music that marks it as a triumph of the choregrapher's art.

Three movements of the orchestral serenade are used: the piece in sonatina form, the waltz and the elegie, called "adagio" on the program. The sonatina is beautifully worked out in patterns, and the other two movements offer excellent unions of sentiment and formal designs. Natalia Krasovska was the brilliant ballerina soloist, and Igor Yuskevich danced the elegie with dignity of style and a masculine grace.

"Vienna 1814," which was seen here on the occasion of the company's last appearance in Constitution Hall, is the type of entertainment that combines a little history with several kinds of national dances. The pictorial framework is the ball given in the Austrial capital by Prince Metternich to celebrate the downfall of a dictator who had tried to subdue all Europe and Russia as well—a certain Bonaparte. Within this framework, designed to display the military uniforms and feminine fashions of that day, are set a number of divertissements: Saxon, Sicilian, Russian, Polish and Chinese dances. The best of the lot and the most spirited was the mazurka with Katya Geleznova and Casimir Kokich as the principal dancers.

"Shahrazad," repeated from Monday night, brought to the fore again the remarkable dancing of Frederic Franklin as the favorite slave. With his treatment of the role as that of a creature human in form and animalistic in nature, he was the animating force of the orgy scene. His intense vitality was so dominant that the corps de ballet seemed like puppets in comparison.

Betty Rogers and John Martin give a recital of music for piano and violoncello in Barker Hall on Thursday night. Program of composition by Handel, Debussy, Sowerby and Grieg.

A friendly audience assembled in Barker Hall last evening to hear the recital of Betty Rogers and John Martin, two young musicians making their first local appearance in a program of chamber music. Miss Rogers is a debutante pianist, and Mr. Rogers has a violoncello chair in the National Symphony Orchestra, of which he is the youngest member. Their playing in collaboration showed musical understanding and technical resourcefulness, although they were both inclined to be a little over-emphatic in tone.

They presented a Handel sonata and the A minor sonata of Grieg, and Miss Rogers contributed a solo group consisting of the prelude and "Clair de Lune" from the "Suite Bergamasque" and Lee Sowerby's "The Lonely Fiddle-Maker." Mr. Martin draws a resonant and firm tone, and has surety in his technical handling of attack and phrasing.

N.Y. Avenue Extension Is Approved

Planning Board Also Indorses Other Changes Necessitated By Wartime Growth

Street and highway changes necessitated by Washington's wartime growth were approved yesterday by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

Extension of New York Avenue eastward from Bladensburg Road to the Anacostia River, land transfers preparatory to the widening and improvement of Alabama Avenue Southeast and the first step toward elimination of a traffic "bottleneck" near Soldiers Home Cemetery—all moved forward by action of the planning body.

Opening a two-day monthly meeting in the Interior Building, the commission also:

Approved a condemnation award by which the Federal Government will expand Potomac Palisades Park from Canal Road to Prospect Street, west of Thirty-seventh Street.

Reported addition of another acre to the Watts Branch Parkway and flood control project in the vicinity of Fiftieth and Grant Streets Northeast.

Took favorable action on proposed sites for two Negro elementary schools, one in Anacostia and the other in the Central Northwest area. Exact locations were not divulged because some of the land involved is in private ownership.

Extension's Need Cited

Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, District highway director, explained that extension of New York Avenue Northeast is becoming an urgent need because of mounting traffic in that section. Also, the thoroughfare is slated to be a link in the proposed Baltimore-Washington Boulevard.

Similarly, improvement of Alabama Avenue and of Allison Street, where it skirts Soldiers Home Cemetery between Harewood Road and Rock Creek Church Road, were deemed necessary in recognition of their traffic uses.

Routine action taken by the commission, involving city streets, included approval of the closing of secondary streets and alleys in the five-block rectangle in Southwest Washington which is to be added to the Navy Yard and of minor land transfers at Scott Circle. The latter concerns only the District Commissioners and the Office of National Capital Parks.

Park Land Acquired

Norman C. Brown, associate land purchasing officer, announced that the Federal Government has acquired title to a two-acre tract at Nineteenthh Street and Columbia Road Northwest and the area should be available for use as a public park before the end of the summer.

Led by Chairman Frederic A. Delano, the planners made an afternoon field trip to inspect the new road system in Arlington County that will serve the new War Department Building. They also inspected sites chosen in West Potomac Park and in Arlington for war workers' dormitories, public building and housing projects in Southwest Washington and new construction at Washington National Airport.

The Commission's May meeting will be concluded today.

Details of New Bus Routing Plan Revealed

Possible means of rerouting buses on Pennsylvania Avenue, E and Thirteenth Streets, as requested by the Capital Transit Co. and approved in principle by the Public Utilities Commission several weeks ago, were announced yesterday.

The principal details of a plan worked out by P. U. C. Chief Engineer Fred A. Sager, are the establishment of a bus terminal in the Federal parking lot behind the old Southern Railroad building and of a bus loop around the old Postoffice Building, using Eleventh Street between C Street and Pennsylvania Avenue, and C Street between Eleventh and Twelfth.

By lopping off the long downtown loops that buses generally make from here, and by shifting hundreds of buses from the three main arteries to Ninth, Eleventh and Twelfth Streets, the rush hour loads can be lightened without waiting for the results of the comprehensive origin and destination survey now being undertaken by the P.U.C.

No definite action has yet been taken by the Commission on this proposal.

ADA Funds Reported Cut By Conferees

Would Bar Agency From Using Rents, Limit Operating Fund $12,000

A Senate slash in Alley Dwelling Authority funds for the coming fiscal year, which would deprive the agency of the use of its rent collections and unexpended balances, was reported to have been agreed upon yesterday by House and Senate conferees on the independent offices appropriation bill.

Adoption of the Senate economy measure will limit the ADA to an operating fund appropriation of $12,000 and cut it off from an estimated $55,000 in rent payments. Under the bill passed by the House, it had been authorized to use these collections as a revolving fund along with old balances—enabling the agency's slum clearance programs to operate on a self-paying basis.

Voted as Compromise

The grant of $12,000 was voted by the Senate Appropriations Committee as a compromise measure after it had struck the revolving fund authorization from the bill.

It was pointed out that without either a revolving fund or an operating appropriation, the ADA would have been unable to collect rents and pay upkeep on its projects.

As a result, the Senate voted the agency $5500 for personnel to manage the property, plus $6500 for maintenance.

Adjourned Until Monday

The conference, now seeking to settle differences between the House and Senate versions of the money bill, adjourned yesterday until Monday with a number of disagreements still unsettled.

Senator McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, reported however that Senate economies—which reduced the appropriation by about 13 million dollars—were being generally agreed upon.

Hearing Today To Study Change In Coroner Setup

A proposal to abolish the office of District coroner and substitute a streamlined post of medical examiner will be studied by a Senate District Subcommittee today in public hearings scheduled to begin at 10:30 a. m.

The bill up for consideration was introduced by Senator McCarran, head of the District of Columbia Committee, who described it as a step to "modernize" local methods of crime fighting.

The group which will conduct the hearing this morning is headed by Senator Burton (Republican), of Ohio, and includes McCarran and Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland.

Expected to testify are Walter Fowler, District budget officer; Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech, William C. Woodward, former District of Columbia health officer, and representatives of medical and citizen groups.

Fellowship House Postpones Program

The program marking the first anniversary of the service men's programs at Fellowship House, Massachusetts near Wisconsin Avenue Northwest, has been postponed from tomorrow night to May 23.

That announcement was made last night by Mrs. James Drysdale, chairman of the League for Men in Service of the Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, sponsors of the weekly programs at Fellowship House.

Motorist Hurt in Truck Crash; 2 Others Injured in Traffic

Traffic accidents involving trucks injured three persons, two of them seriously, yesterday.

In a spectacular crash between a sedan and a two-ton dump truck at 4915 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, the car driver, James W. Evans, 21, of Bethesda, Md., suffered minor cuts and bruises.

Evans was driving north on Massachusetts Avenue and struck the rear of a truck driven by William G. Savoy, Negro, 33, of 5005 Mead Street Southeast. The former was taken to Georgetown Hospital for first aid treatment. Savoy was uninjured.

John Alford, Negro, 63, of 42 Myrtle Street Northeast, suffered severe head injuries when he was knocked down by a bread truck which jumped the curb and ran over the sidewalk in front of his home.

He was taken to Casualty Hospital by police who said the truck was driven by Irving Dann, 41, of 5714 Third Place Northwest. Dann said he was forced to swerve out of the way to avoid striking another vehicle which was parked abreast.

Another pedestrian-truck accident at Fourteenth and Girard Streets Northwest sent Mrs. Lois Robinson, 62, of 1935 Biltmore Street Northwest, to Garfield Hospital with a broken leg and a dislocated shoulder.

She stepped from a loading platform, police stated, and was struck by a laundry truck traveling south on Fourteenth Street and operated by Hesea L. Williams, Negro, 29, of 1212 Fifteenth Street Northwest.

No arrests were made in any of the accidents though police said the cases will be presented to the corporation counsel's office for investigation at a later date.

No Buses, Census Puts Off Moving

Vehicles Expected In Time for Bureau To Transfer May 25 To Suitland Site

The long-delayed opening of the new Census Bureau Building at Suitland, Md., faced a fresh delay yesterday—there are no buses to transport employes.

"I don't know what's holding up delivery of the new buses," said L. L. Altmann, president and general manager of W. M. & A. Motor Lines.

"I'll believe they're here when I see them," wearily commented James C. Capt, director of the Census Bureau.

Eight of the 33-passenger carriers have been expected for weeks. They were positively to have been here this week to permit occupancy of the huge structure, which eventually will house 5000 workers. Now it is hoped that the buses will reach Washington from the Cleveland factory in time for a May 25 opening.

Census now occupies the new Federal Office Building at Second and D Streets Southwest which is to be the home of Office of Price Administration when Capt's bureau eventually is moved into suburban Maryland.

Besides the eight 33-passenger buses desired for immediate use, 40 43-passenger carriers are on order by the W. M. & A. line, which operates between Washington and southern Maryland. Service is to be maintained between Suitland and the terminal at Eleventh Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest.

Capt said files are being transferred daily to the new Suitland building.

Martial Law In Hawaii Stirs Debate

By Richard V. Haller

International News Service Staff Writer

Honolulu, T. H., May 14.—Arguments setting forth that the existing state of martial law in Hawaii is unconstitutional and that it cannot be continued lawfully have been advanced in an exhaustive review by J. Garner Anthony, prominent Honolulu attorney, in an article published today in the California Law Review.

Anthony's paper is the first published expression of an opinion held by many members of the Hawaii Bar Association that suspension of the writ of habeas corpus and denial of the right to trial by jury deprive civilians of their constitutional rights. In it he vigorously attacks the view that the proclamation of martial law on December 7 suspended all existing law as well as all provisions of the constitution.

Joseph B. Poindexter, civil governor of Hawaii, proclaimed martial law on the afternoon of December 7 and called upon Lieut. Gen. Walter S. Short, then in command of the army in Hawaii, to assume the duties of the military governor. This action was approved the same day by President Roosevelt. The territorial courts were closed the following day by order of the commanding general and the chief justice of the territorial supreme court signed an order announcing the closing.

"No statute authorizes the chief justice to close the courts," Anthony writes, "nor is there any authority in the organic act (of Hawaii for the complete delegation of power by the Governor and the appointment of a military governor."

The paper as published in the California Law Review is expected to set off widespread controversy in the legal profession. Manuscript copies were forwarded sometime ago to the Attorney General of the United States, and to Justice Roberts of the United States Supreme Court, chairman of the committee that investigated the Pearl Harbor attack. Justice Roberts made considerable study of the system of martial law prevailing while he was in Hawaii, and admitted that it presented many important legal problems.

Sentry Kills Rancher In Prohibited Area

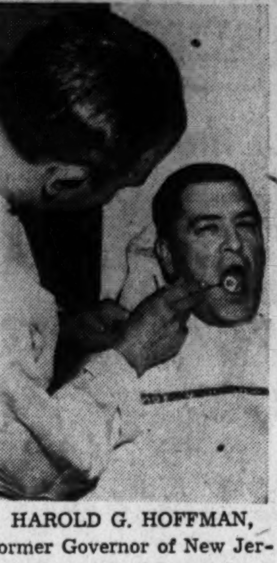
Quincy, Calif., May 14 (A.P.).—Vincent Ponci, 52, prominent Plumas County rancher, was shot and killed by an Army sentry in a prohibited area near a Western Pacific Railroad bridge yesterday.

The sentry, whose name was not disclosed, is being held under military guard pending investigation by Army and civilian authorities.

Sheriff L. A. Braden said preliminary investigation indicated the sentry fired after the rancher disregarded his order to halt and walked into the posted prohibited zone.

Ponci had lived in the locality all his life.

Ex-Governor Seeks War Duty



HAROLD G. HOFFMAN, former Governor of New Jersey, is examined by an Army dental officer at Fort Dix, N. J. Hoffman underwent a two-hour physical examination of his application for a commission as a major, a job averaging about $5000 a year compared to his present post paying $12,000 as executive director of the New Jersey Unemployment Commission. Hoffman, who rose from the ranks to a captaincy in World War I, has been a major in the Reserve Corps since 1925. He took off 36 pounds in one month after he was ruled overweight on an earlier application

Movie Biz a Lot of Headaches; Deer and Boys Both Grow Up

By Gladwin Hill

Hollywood, May 14 (Wide World).—The movie business isn't all the beer-and-skittles you might infer from concentrating on items about Starlet Betty Blotz's experiments with petunias.

Reviewing some of Hollywood's recent less-publicized headaches, for instance:

A year ago M. G. M. started filming the pulitzer prize winning novel "The Yearling," about a Florida backwoods boy and his pet deer, going on location all the way to Ocala, Fla. Various boys kept outgrowing various deer, and vice versa, and other difficulties led to shelving the project temporarily, and the picture isn't finished yet.

Ernest Hemingway's hit novel. "For Whom the Bell Tolls," also has been kicking around at Paramount for a year amid various difficulties, notably casting, and they are just beginning to make some progress on that.

M. G. M. had to haul back Garbo's last picture "Two-Faced Woman" for alterations after the Legion of Decency objected to the line, "Let's drink to what we're both thinking." . . . Then there was the cause celebre about Lew Ayres becoming a conscientious objector. . . . Now they're revamping "Panama Hattie," which didn't click when it was first screened.

M. G. M. is hoping the jinx may be moving over to Twentieth-Fox, which has been having a lot of cracker crumbs in its corporate bed lately. They spent a lot of money getting a W. C. Fields sequence into "Tales of Manhattan," only to decide it didn't fit.

After 12 days' shooting on "Orchestra Wife," the Glenn Miller picture—nearly a third of the schedule—they changed directors, substituted Ann Rutherford for Linda Darnell as Miller's wife, and started all over again, . . . Roddy MacDowell got the mumps, stalling "The Pied Piper," and Henry Fonda smashed his hand, delaying "The Magnificent Jerk"—then the Hayes office forbade using the word "jerk."

It ain't easy.

BANNER BOYS AT HI HAT. A spang new unit, the Banner Boys, said to be full of red pepper and molasses, will open at Hit Hat on Monday. The Banner Boys are headed by Jack Neal, singing pianist, whose Saturday eve musical pranks in the Ambassador Room, adjoining Hi Hat, have been a click hit. The Banner Boys include a singing guitarist who doubles on the Hawaiian steel guitar, a bassist and saxist-clarinetist. They'll live up to their name in attire as well as music by appearing in coats of red, white and blue!

There'll be cheers galore in the King Cole Room tomorrow night. All hands will be celebrating the fourth anniversary of Evelyn Knight, whose fans are as loyal to her as Brooklyn is to the Dodgers.

PICKED BY THE EXPERTS. Enric Madriguera, whose band is electrifying the Del Rio, is much taken with the new "Do the Dubonnet," vows that it's due to become a topflight hit . . . Organist Ida Clarke of the Lounge Riviera, is currently carried away by "Autumn Nocturne," says it's the loveliest melody she's heard for seasons . . . Maestro Carr van Sickler of the Madrillon, casts his vote for "All Through the Night," says it's the stuff that dreams are made of.

BUSY AND BEAUTEOUS GIRLS. Ina Ray Hutton, now queening it in the Victory Room, is doing her part for victory. She played for the Camp Meade boys this week, will journey out to Bolling Field with her band on Tuesday . . . Singer Arline Thomson, appearing at the Shoreham after one little week's absence, was greeted like a long-lost chee-ild . . . Violinist Evelyn Scott of Lee's Stables, is not just another girl violinist. She received her grounding in harmony and composition at Peabody Institute, plays with great charm and finesse . . . Julie Colt of the Pall Mall Room, can warble higher and lower than any other singer around town. For her voice has a 2½ octave range . . . Singer Carol James of Crossroads, was born to wear evening gowns. She's a dream in that girlish white pique with Irish crochet insets and a red rose at the shoulder.

Something's cooking at the Neptune Room. Out of the swirl of mystery we gather the idea that they're frying up a batch of "Specialty Nights" based on a new diversion idea. More on this later.

FLOOR SHOW WHIZBANGS. That colossally funny take-off, "My Sponsor and I," being done by Sheila Barrett, star of Troika's revue. Radio folks get a tremendous bang out of it . . . Paul Young has been acting as his own emcee this week. To think of all the time Paul's spent scouting for good emcees when all he had to do was look in the mirror! . . . Yourloff and Yoder of the Balalaika spin like a couple of Polish pinwheels in their brilliant mazurka . . . El Patio's patrons go into spasms when the Four Toppers produce their impression of Harry Richman contending with a Mickey Finn . . . Dawn and Russell at the Casino Royal top off their dance with a kiss that would make a movie censor shout "Stop!" ten times. Bob Coll, now at the Lotus, plays the violin a la Svengali while his partner, Eleanor, dances with hypnotized grace.

GLOAMING ROAMING. When the Brothers Heintze of Restaurant "823" play a brace of college songs there's always an answering vocal chorus from nearby tables. Customers at "823" are the singingest in town . . . Wise Glen Echo visitors enjoy dinner on its roof garden cafe as the park blossoms out in electric lights . . . The Acadia Society held a dance in the Gold Room of the Hamilton Hotel the other eve, with the dancers taking frequent recesses in the Rainbow Room . . . Leader Juan Velasquez of Copocabana's rhumba band says that our town is taking to boleros. In effect, the bolero is a slow rhumba . . . Novachordist Sid Willoughby of Burt's Trans-Lux tells us that many private citizens are buying novachords for their homes.

Mayfair's attractive new girl pianist is Penny Martin. Until a week ago she was playing in the Hotel Sir Walter at Raleigh, N. C.

DINING OUT. The New York following of Robert Gabriel, owner of La Salle du Bois, is always showing up in Washington. Which explains those Park Avenue gamour girls often seen in L. S. du B. . . . Dining on the Mexican porch at Olney Inn is a clever thing to do on a hot evening . . . The Burlington is patriotically saving sugar by serving desserts made with honey. You'll enjoy their honey rice pudding especially . . . Maxime's Restaurant Francais, serenely cozy spot on Connecticut Avenue, is attracting quantities of discriminating diners who know their French cuisine.

PAINTED LADIES. Most demure painted lady in town is certainly the one in petticoats and pantalettes on the north wall of the Metronome Room . . . But the most exotic and sinister painted ladies are those pale creatures executed by Artist Andre Duranceau for the Cafe Caprice.

Joe Jackson, 67, Veteran Actor, Leaves 'Em Smiling

By the Associated Press

New York, May 14.—While the audience still applauded his act, Joe Jackson, 67, famous for 40 years as a tramp bicycle rider on stages all over the United States, collapsed and died in the wings of the Roxy Theater today.

Jackson, whose home was at Greenwood Lakes, N. Y., had just finished his act on the stage of the theater.

He went into the wings and tapped Buck Wheeler, the stage manager, on the shoulder and said: "They're still applauding."

Then he collapsed. The resident doctor from the Taft Hotel was called and pronounced him dead.

The veteran comedian was known to thousands who watched his antics at the New York World's Fair in 1940.

Persian Brigands Hunted

New Delhi, India, May 14 (AP)—A small detachment of British troops has been sent from the Iranian port of Bushire, 90 miles farther up the Persian Gulf, to Bandar Dilam, where an armed band of the Boir Armedi Tribe is reported to have attacked the customs station.

Uncle Sam's Price Ceiling on Basic Foods Assures Homemaker That Full Market Basket, Good Nutrition Will Continue for Duration

WHEN YOU go to market and prices seem high, be consoled by the the fact that the full market basket continues to be one of the symbols of American democracy and freedom. If Price Administrator Leon Henderson, on March 28, had not imposed price ceilings on most foods, equal to the highest prices charged for the same items as of March, the homemaker might have had plenty of reason for brow-knitting. She might have eventually come to wonder what canned apricots, steak and oranges tasted like. She might have been saying to her family, "Do you remember that delightful pineapple up-side-down cake I made in the days when we could afford pineapple?"

Kidney Rolls served on tomato halves are distinctive, and a source of proteins and vitamins.

This Crown-O-Biscuit Meat Pie is a one-dish meal thriftily designed to make Americans strong.

But with the ceiling placed on about 100 food items, in President Roosevelt's program to block inflation, the homemaker, the cook and the breadwinner all were assured that the food budget would continue in much the same manner as that of March. When the homemaker goes to market next Monday, or thereafter, she will know that the maximum prices to be charged for the items listed under the order, cannot skyrocket to extreme and exorbitant prices. The retailer must display a list showing what the maximum prices are that can be charged for the foods embraced under the price administrator's order.

The prevailing war prices, are of course, higher than peace time ones. And even though the "ceiling" stopped them from bouncing sky-high, there is still many a corner to be cut in the budget so that taxes may be paid, bonds bought and other assistances given where most needed.

The homemaker, just like the general, has to plan as never before. If ingenuity didn't mean much previous to the war it certainly is a word constantly in play today. Today the homemaker must be a designing woman, planning her meals with one eye on cost, the other on nutrition. Even so, excellent, mouth-watering, nutritious meals can be served if planning, shopping and manipulating are given serious thought.

Today's "sermon" is not about fillet mignon, lamb chops and veal cutlets. It is about those "forgotten" meats in the low-cost bracket that can be made into such flavorsome nutritious dishes that even the designers of the National Nutrition Yardstick would approve.

I have shopped about and decided that the following thrifty meat cuts should be given their just dues. The suggestions are purely basic, but the ingenious cook can lift them to new heights.

Kidneys, rich in food value, especially in protein and riboflavin, one of the factors of the vitamin B complex, can be made into a dish that is different and distinctive. It can be the answer to a family supper dish or the main dish at a spring luncheon party. It is really an epicurean dish, although it is neither hard to prepare or costly. It consists of kidney rolls, with bread dressing, placed on tomato halves. Lamb, pork or beef kidneys are all good. The following were the prices for kidneys when I checked them yesterday:

Pork kidneys, 12 cents per pound; beef kidneys, 15 cents per pound; veal kidneys, 10 cents each, 4 to 5 to a pound; lamb kidneys, 5 cents each, 8 to 10 to a pound. Buy the ones you like best and then prepare them in this way:

Kidney Rolls on Tomatoes—Remove all fat from 1 pound kidneys. Split them in half and remove the hard white portion in the center. Cut the kidneys into 1-inch cubes. Wash carefully. Cover with water and simmer until tender. Pork and lamb kidneys will cook in about 30 minutes. Cubes of beef kidneys require about one hour. Drain. Cover kidneys with ¼-inch coating of bread dressing and wrap with a slice of bacon. Fasten each with a wooden pick and place on a tomato half. Place in a baking pan and bake in a moderate oven, 375 degrees, for 30 minutes until bacon is crisp and tomatoes are cooked.

Boneless chuck selling for around 23 cents a pound, or stewing beef at about 25 cents per pound, served up in meat pie form with a crown of tiny biscuits, can be a great morale lifter. The bright side of the dish for the family is its flavorful blending of meat, vegetables, biscuits and gravy. There's a bright side for the cook, too. Only one dish is needed, as the same dish does duty for cooking and serving. The biscuits are made with enriched flour, to do their all-out best by nutrition. The thrifty cuts of meat, the lima beans, peas and carrots all do their penny-saving duty by the food budget and their nutritional bit, too.

Salt pork is a standby of many years because of low-cost energy value and appetite appeal.

Crown-o-Biscuit Meat Pie—Brown 2 cups cooked, cubed meat with 2 tablespoons chopped onion in 2 tablespoons fat. Add 2 teaspoons salt and ½ teaspoon pepper. Add 2 cups peas and juice, ½ cup cooked, sliced carrots and ½ cup cooked lima beans. Blend 2 tablespoons flour with 2 tablespoons water to make a thick paste. Add to vegetable mixture and cook until thick. Pour into casserole. Sift 2 cups sifted flour with 3 teaspoons baking powder and 1 teaspoon salt. Cut or rub in 2 to 4 tablespoons shortening. Add 2-3 to ¾ cup milk to form soft dough. Turn out on lightly floured board and knead one-half minute. Roll dough ½ inch thick. Cut with 2-inch biscuit cutter. Place biscuits around edge on top of vegetable mixture. Bake in hot oven, 450 degrees, 10 to 12 minutes, or until biscuits are browned. Yield, 6 servings.

Old-Time Favorite

Salt pork, too, at 16 cents a pound for backs and 15 cents for butts, is not only an economical meat but, like bacon, is high in energy value. How long has it been since you have had that grand old-fashioned dinner combination—crispy brown slices of salt pork, milk gravy, new potatoes in jackets, coleslaw and deep-dish apple pie?

Salt pork can also be dipped in cornmeal and fried in fat until golden brown. Here are the directions:

Fried Salt Pork—Slice 1 pound salt pork ¼ inch thick. Pour boiling water over the meat and drain. Dip slices of pork in ½ cup cornmeal and fry in 2 tablespoons fat until a golden brown.

Liver, a rich source of iron and copper and also of Vitamin A, needed for good health, should be served at least once a week. This meat is especially valuable in the diet of children to counteract any tendency to nutritional anemia. They need iron-rich foods to build good blood.

One taste-tempting way to serve liver is in a loaf. Economical pork liver may be used or beef liver, for the grinding will make it tender. Liver loaf has all the advantages of any meat loaf—easy to prepare, can be served hot or cold and, if left over, can be made into sandwich filling.

Of All Sad Words For Housewives' Ken Saddest Are These: This Might Have Been

Uncle Sam prevented bewildered expressions, such as the one of the young food shopper above, when he announced his ceiling prices on many foods. An exorbitant amount for a handful of groceries would make any homemaker cringe when given her price statement. But with the ceiling safeguard going into effect next Monday, shopping fortunately will not be the headache it might have been

SHOPPING AS USUAL—With an enforced ceiling applied to food prices, the homemaker can shop for groceries in a much happier way than if prices had been allowed to take their wartime course

G-Man's Story Causes Stir at Mail List Trial

Reading of statements made by defendants concerning removal of Civil Service Commission records was suddenly halted yesterday by a lively dispute over the propriety of a G-man's testimony that one defendant admitted he was doing wrong but later refused to say so in his written statement.

John F. Hay, agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, testified that Walter A. C. Camp, Washington food merchant and one of five defendants, said he knew it was wrong to have the Civil Service personnel forms and did not wish to be "caught" with them.

When Camp's statement was later being typewritten, however, the defendant insisted that he merely said he did not want to carry any of the original information sheets "for the reason that I did not want any of the sheets to be seen in my possession," Hay testified.

Jury Excused

The ensuing dispute, which caused Justice James W. Morris to excuse the District Couort jury from the courtroom, came at the end of a day taken up by the Government in reading 11 of 12 statements made by defendants.

Rather than prolong the argument into late evening, Justice Morris suggested to contending counsel that they give him "the law" on the question and recessed the trial until Monday as meanwhile, he wounld be busy with sentencing of defendants in other cases before him.

Other statements read besides Camp's were those of Harlin G. Grandall, former employe of the Civil Service Commission; Werner J. Arbach, business associate of Camp, and Lawrence L. Haynes, employe of the Standard Business Service, where the Government alleges records were taken and transcribed for subsequent sale to mail business firms at from 1 to 2½ cents a name.

Theft Charges to Be Dropped

Earlier in the day, Assistant United States District Attorney Charles B. Murray announced that 7 of 14 counts against the defendants charging theft would be dropped by the Government and prosecution would be on remaining charges of illegal removal.

Crandall, in his statement, declared, "the total number of personnel information sheets which I took from the Civil Service Commission was approximately 20,000. Of these, I returned about 5000 to the Civil Service Commission. The remaining 15,000 were the ones in the office of the Standard Business Service and which Lawrence Haynes took to his home and said he turned over to two men on the night of January 25."

Orbach said in his statement that he and Camp questioned Crandall about the propriety of taking the sheets and were told that it was "perfectly all right;" that it was the sort of thing done a long time.

Haynes described how he obtained the forms with the aid of Crandall and how he subsequently interested another Washington mail list supply firm in buying Civil Service personnel information. For this he received an advance of $100 in four payments.

Haynes wrote that he decided to disclose the whole affair to Washington Times-Herald rather than to law authorities as he and his family would probably be given some consideration and benefit. He admitted receiving a half a ton of coal.

Shad Get Reprieve As Gas, Rubber Dearth Hits Bake

Gasoline rationing and the tire shortage hit one of Washington's oldest institutions yesterday when the Board of Trade called off its 1942 Shad Bake, the forty-eighth consecutive annual outing sponsored by that body.

L. P. McLachlin, president of the board, said that the affair had been cancelled in spite of indications from advance ticket sales that the attendance would have been one of the greatest in the long history of their shad bakes.

Refunds to ticket purchasers will be mailed out shortly, the executive committee announced.

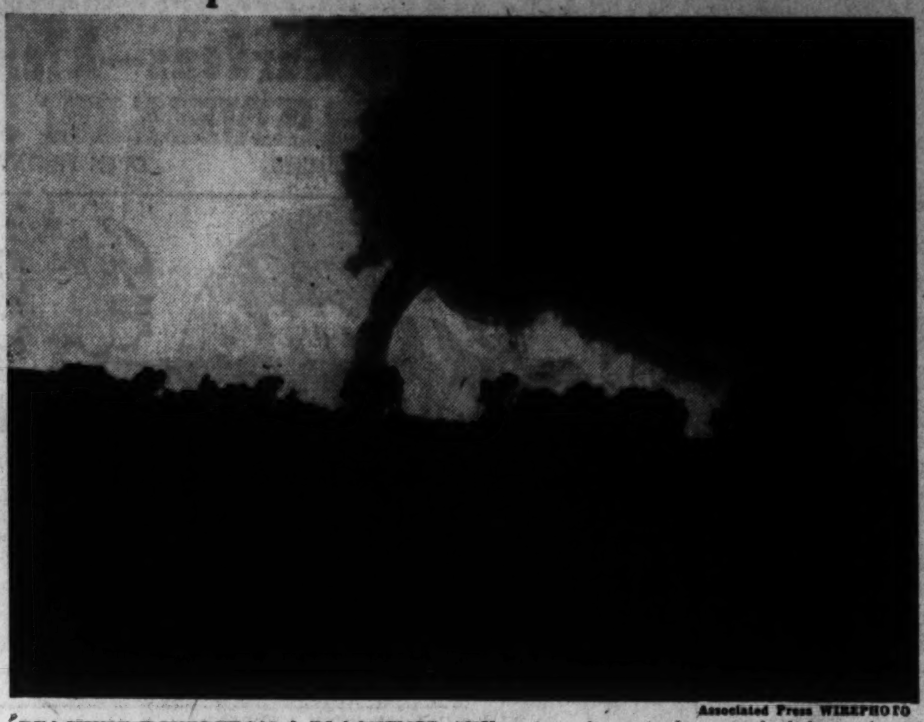
Tornado Spreads Destruction Over Farmlands



Associated Press WIREPHOTO

REACHING DOWN FROM A BLACKENED SKY, a tornado yesterday wrecked farms in a wide area near Anoka, Minn. The tornado's funnel, silhouetted against the sky, is shown as it traveled over the ground. Several farmers were injured, but none seriously

Italians Said To Hope War Ends by Fall

By the United Press

Lisbon, May 14.—Italian people hope that the war will be over by September and realize that only a United Nations' victory can save Italy from Nazi domination, an Allied official arriving with the third contingent of Western Hemisphere diplomatic and consular representatives from Rome said today.

He said the Italians always were very fond of Americans, "Now more than ever."

The diplomats, including 26 Americans, traveled from Rome by special train. Two other contingents of diplomats from Italy already have reached Lisbon, and a fourth is expected to arrive in time to sail for home aboard the Swedish liner Drottningholm, due here Saturday with Axis nationals from the United States and Latin-American countries.

The American party included Col. Norman Fiske, United States military attache in Rome, and Master Sergt. Cecil Gross, assistant to the air attache. Also aboard the train were the Panamanian and Ecuadorian ministers and the first secretary of the Bolivian legation.

A United States official said that the Americans were "very well treated" in Rome, could go to bars and were "kind of free." Colonel Fiske, who has been instructed by the War Department in Washington not to grant interviews, said merely: "We received fair treatment from the authorities and people."

The arrivals said that wealthy Italians could live very well from the black market, which sold foodstuffs at exorbitant prices. A pound of tomatoes in Rome, they said, cost $2.

Last Train of American Reaches Spanish Frontier

Aboard Diplomats' Train en Route from Rome to Lisbon (Friday), May 15 (AP).—The last of four trains carrying homeward bound United States and Latin-American diplomats and nationals from Rome under the exchange agreement with the Axis reached Port Bou on the Spanish side of the French frontier last night.

Sixty United States citizens aboard the train include the Rev. Hiram Gruber Wolff, pastor of the American Church of St. Paul in Rome and formerly of Boston; Col. Michael Buckley, United States Army observer, who was captured by the Italians in Libya before the United States entered the war, and Harold Denny, formerly of Des Moines, Iowa, New York Times correspondent also captured by the Italians in Libya.

Others were a New York debutante and singer, Louise (Paddy) Lynch, wife of Paul Getty, who was studying opera in Rome; United States Naval Attache L. N. McNair and Commercial Attache Charles A. Livengood.

George Wadsworth, charge d'affaires in Rome when war came, is in charge of the party.

His Wife in Service, Man, 51, Joins Army

Camp Lee, Va., May 14 (AP).—Not to be outdone by his wife, who is serving as an Army nurse, Robert J. O'Brien, 51, of Brooklyn, N. Y., a veteran of the last war, has reported to the medical replacement center here as a private.

He was a guard for the United States Customs before his enlistment and was a corporal in a Field Artillery unit in the last war.

Peace Objectives Stressed At Ascension Day Mass

Objectives of a just peace must be clear while the United Nations struggle for victory, declared the Most Rev. Joseph M. Corrigan, rector of Catholic University, yesterday at services commemorating the twenty-fifth anniversary of the consecration of Pope Pius XII to the episcopacy.

The rector preached at services in the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception, scene of one of the principal Catholic observances of Ascension Day.

America's vast natural resources can make us "armed so as to fear no enemy from without," said Bishop Corrigan in his message. "To the limit of these resources we must spend ourselves and be spent that victory may be ours.

"In the days or the years of that struggle we must, in grateful acknowledgment of God's bounty, recognize our responsibility for justice actuating victory when it is ours," said the prelate.

"We Catholic citizens, 26 million strong in these United States, happy in the bond of faith which unites us with our fellow Americans north and south in this Western Hemisphere, here before this Catholic altar, in the sacrifice of the body and blood of Christ, pledge our all to a victory which shall be the harbinger of a peace worthy of free men, worthy of a Christian order, worthy, therefore, to be pledged in patriotism to the President of the United States, worthy in Catholic hope . . ."

Earlier in his address, Bishop Corrigan traced the present Pope's earlier years in the church, described how his "kindly manner" has overawed rioters during a rebellion 25 years ago in Munich, and saved his life just a few months before his episcopal consecration.

"From Herod's day to Hitler's, God is not mocked," said Bishop Corrigan. "Herod's dagger did not reach the Infant Heart, nor has murder ever stayed those chosen by God to share His work. That young bishop of 25 years ago is today the first bishop of Christendom, the Roman pontiff, Pope Pius XII, whom today with all our hearts we acclaim on the silver anniversary of his entrance into the Christian episcopate."

Diplomatic, governmental and religious figures worshiped at the mass, celebrated by the Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, apostolic delegate to the United States.

Assisting clergy were the Right Rev. Monsignor Michael J. Ready, general secretary, National Catholic Welfare Conference, assistant priest; the Rev. Dr. Pasquale Parente, assistant professor of theology, and the Very Rev. Dr. Thomas Mitchell, dean of the School of Social Work, deacons of honor; the Rev. Joseph McCloskey, deacon; the Rev. Eugene Sullivan, subdeacon; the Rev. Dr. William J. Lallou, associate professor of liturgy, master of ceremonies, and the Rev. Walter Schmitz, S. S., lecturer in religious education, assistant master of ceremonies.

Special masses for the holy day were said in other Washington churches.

The Protestant celebration was commemorated with Holy Communion in Episcopal and Lutheran churches, among them the Washington Cathedral.

How British Bagged 13 Nazi Troop Planes

By the Associated Press

Cairo, Egypt, May 14.—German soldiers skimming the Mediterranean in 20 big Junkers troop-carrying planes fought back with their tommyguns when an R. A. F. fighter formation attacked them on May 12 but, one by one, 13 of the transports crashed into the sea, the remaining seven were badly damaged and two of the formation's Messerschmitt escort were lost.

The full story of this strange encounter could be told by the R. A. F. participants only today, after yesterday's concise announcement in the regular communique from the R. A. F.'s Middle East headquarters.

Returning from a sweep of the Mediterranean on Tuesday morning, the R. A. F fighters, led by an Australian wing commander who wears the distinguished flying cross, sighted the large formation off the North African coast.

The score of Junkers 52s were strung out, only 50 feet above the sea, presumably en route to reinforce the battle lines of Marshal Erwin Rommel's African corps in Libya.

Eluding the hovering Messerschmitt-110s, and downing two of them, the R. A. F. fighters dove in to attack the troop carriers.

The occupants thrust tommy guns out the windows of the Junkers in vain attempts to beat off the British fighters.

"One after the other, at half-mile intervals, the Junkers crashed into the sea," one pilot said. In 15 minutes 13 were destroyed and it was probable that some others never reached their bases.

Columns of black smoke rising out of the sea marked the spot where each of the German carriers crashed.

Only one of the attackers was lost.

Cairo, Egypt, May 14 (AP).—British forces operating on the central sector of the narrow Libyan front have dispersed a detachment of 15 Axis tanks in a sharp encounter, it was announced officially today.

Georgetown U. Gives Diplomas To 20 Nurses

A class of 20 young nurses, most of them already signed up for duty with the armed forces, was graduated yesterday afternoon from the Georgetown University School of Nursing.

The exercises, held in Gaston Hall, were witnessed by more than 100 relatives and friends.

Edward M. Curran, United States Attorney for the District of Columbia, told the graduating nurses: "When this great crisis has passed, and America has tasted the fruits of victory, our Commander in Chief may well include the nurses of this country when he says: 'Well done, my good and faithful people.'

"In these tragic times," he added, "I ask you to do all that is possible, striving from day to day, from youth to age, even unto the end, leaving the issue with Almighty God and His master workman, Time."

Two Washington girls among the graduates are Wanda R. Bartocci of 3011 Ordway Street Northwest, and Nancy L. Whittaker of 4908 Fourth Street Northwest. Miss Bartocci is planning to enter service with the Navy as soon as she completes a course in X-ray technique. Miss Whittaker is going into nursing service with the Army.

The Very Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, president of the university, conferred the diplomas after presentation of the graduates by Sister M. Joanilla, director of the School of Nursing.

First prize of $15 in the Sister Euphrasia Award went to Marie A. Polcari of Portsmouth, Va. Marie L. Stuart of Pennsylvania won second prize of $10.

The other graduates are: Irene A. Asenjo of Florida, Mary B. Carlin of 7004 Hampden Lane, Bethesda, Md.; Anna M. Droter, Grace L. Dumm, Gertrude R. Neff and Valerie T. O'Toole, all of Pennsylvania; Rita E. Pelletier and Loraine M. Poirer, both of Maine; Dorothy A. Rhodes also of Portsmouth, Va.; Mariam K. Rasch of Alabama, Simone I. Sirois of Maine, Nina R. Stanley of North Carolina, Marie H. Van Son of Florida, Bernice V. Wasilewski of Pennsylvania, Marian R. Whelan of Westernport, Md., and Hilda M. Woodburn of Leonardtown, Md.

Churchill Opponents Unite in New Party

London, May 14 (A.P.).—Several members of Parliament today announced formation of a new political party called "The People."

While its announced policy is to abolish "inefficiency" in politics, the identity of the members suggested it was largely opposed to Prime Minister Churchill.

The party is headed by W. G. Brown, Independent, who recently defeated the government candidate in Rugby; Capt. Alec Stratford Cunningham-Reid, Conservative, and Edgar Louis Granville, Liberal National.

Danes Hope for Allied Victory, Refugee Says

London, May 14 (AP).—J. Christmas Moeller, formerly Danish minister of commerce, who escaped from Copenhagen "a few days ago," declared today that "98 per cent of the Danish population is hoping for a United Nations victory."

Moeller, who was forced out of office by the Germans, October 3, 1940, praised the Danish Minister to Washington for agreeing to American occupation of Iceland and Greenland, in defiance of German threats.

He said the Germans now had an army of between 20,000 and 40,000 in Denmark, and that the food situation was growing steadily worse.

Life at Army Field In India Described

By William McGaffin
Associated Press Staff Writer

At an Advanced U. S. Airdrome in Northern India—(Delayed)—Several hours by air from New Delhi, across parched earth, rivers and jungles, lies one of the most important airdromes of the United States Army Ferry Command.

Now that Burma bases have been taken by the Japanese, it is a key airdrome for ferrying supplies to the American Volunteer Group in Free China and to the Chinese Army, and for bringing refugees out of Burma.

The first thing that impresses you is the airdrome's minute size. It is so small you do not see it until you are right over it. Then you make out the narrow tarvac runway cutting through the tiny green field. The next minute you are on the ground and being greeted by American accents fresh from California, Georgia and a good many othet States.

One ubiquitous American jeep stacks up and the major driving it invites you to pile in your luggage and come meet the colonel. You drive up to the front door of a little thatched administration office through mud a foot deep. They have had several inches of rain here in four days, and the monsoon has not yet really begun.

You look about at a few other thatched huts and a few tents and ask the colonel:

"Where's the town?"

He laughs and replies: "This is it."

It has a name, but it is a secret. No matter, you couldn't find it anyway, not even on a map.

The Japanese, however, have found it. Reconnaissance planes have been over, and the day before I arrived, several Japanese bombers flew over.

"They didn't drop anything," said the colonel. "The ceiling was too low to suit them."

Then the colonel tells about the precautions which the Americans have taken which are pretty certain to prevent the Japanese from hitting anything on the day they do let fly.

Big freight planes are on the field, just arrived from Calcutta, Karachi and New Delhi. Others have come back from dropping food to refugees coming out of Burma, or from supply trips to China over the dangerous mountain and over Japanese-occupied country.

There is also one group of passenger planes manned by Chinese pilots. The field is a stopping point for China-bound passenger plane service of the China National Airways.

The American major says it is "the best damned airline in the world. For four years its planes have been slipping in, behind and over the enemy lines. They fly only at night and in stinko weather."

The United States establishment of officers and men, number secret, is well organized, considering it has only been here for five weeks.

American mechanics in overalls and ski caps work on the planes as nonchalantly as if it were Mitchel Field.

The men eat and sleep on a tea plantation about 10 miles from the field and go back and forth in jeeps. On the tea plantation a two-story cottage has been converted into a dormitory, equipped with double-tiered bunks, mosquito nets, electric lights and running water.

The men eat well. They drink American coffee and the fine locally grown tea, which costs $10 a pound in the United States. For breakfast there is American breakfast food, bacon and eggs, white bread and butter and marmalade; for lunch we had vegetable soup, baked beans, meat loaf, potatoes and chocolate pudding. Soon there will be iced beer, for we flew in an electric refrigerator.

Like any important airport there is a constant rush of traffic coming and going. The flow of refugees alone amounted to hundreds daily until it died down a few days ago. New Army and Pan-American pilots are arriving frequently from halfway around the world.

The other day one of them brought a portable phonograph and a stack of Bing Crosby records.

Famous Scientist Writes Cook Book About Edible Weeds

By Bem Price
Wide World Staff Correspondent

Tuskegee, Ala.—The venerable old man of the laboratories, Dr. George Washington Carver, has written a cook book—and it's one no housewife would ever recognize.

For it deals with preparation of certain weeds and wild flowers for eating purposes.

The pamphlet was published by Tuskegee Institute, famed Negro college.

Dr. Carver, director of agricultural research and the experiment station at the institute, begins with the dandelion. He advises use of the leaves only and suggests they be prepared in exactly the same manner as turnip or collard greens, or spinach with hard-boiled eggs.

On the subject of rabbit tobacco (antennaria plantaginifolia) Dr. Carver observes that "the young leaves are delicious cooked like turnip greens, or mixed with other greens." The same goes for the ox-eye daisy.

As for the field or sheep sorrel, Dr. Carver says: "This one is especially prized for salads, making cooling drinks and pies similar to oxalis. Use only when the stems are about two-thirds grown.

"I have eaten in one way or another, nearly all of the 21 varieties and found them delicious and appetizing."

Now for the members of the goosefeet family, the master of science says, "These vegetables must be eaten and their effects on the system noted to be appreciated The name, lamb's quarters, indicates something of the esteem in which they were held centuries ago."

This particular item is best "boiled with meat, the same as mustard, collards or turnip greens."

To spinach lovers, Dr. Carver says the "leaves and stems of the poke weed when taken very young and prepared like spinach can hardly be detected from it."

Now for a soup: Take sour grass leaves and tender stems. "Thoroughly clean and wash about 2 quarts of the leaves, boil slowly until tender; rub through a sieve, add your favorite seasoning and three cups of soup stock; thicken with a tablespoon of butter and one of flour and stir this into a teacupful of boiling hot milk. Add to the soup stirring it vigorously to prevent curdling. Let boil up and serve at once."

In conclusion, Dr. Carver says, "We hope that everyone will get acquainted with the wonderful food and medicinal values of these wild vegetables and make them a permanent part of the diet. . ."

West Point Appointive Powers Are Widened

The House voted Wednesday to give each Senator and Representative another appointment to the military academy at West Point, but turned down another provision of the bill authorizing the Secretary of War to fill vacancies remaining for any reason at the beginning of the academic year.

The bill, which goes to the Senate, would increase the present authorized strength of 1960 by 536.

House of Commons War Debate Scheduled

London, May 14 (AP).—Sir Stafford Cripps told the House of Commons today that a war debate would be held the first and second days of the next series of sittings.

Whether Prime Minister Churchill takes part in the discussion, the lord privy seal said, "will depend on the war and on the prime minister."

When the next series of sittings will open was not announced.

Nazis Using 6000-Ton U-Boats As Supply Ships, Diary Implies

By the Associated Press

New York, May 14.—Germany may be using huge submarines, three times the size of her Deutschland of World War I, to supply her U-boats nests along the Atlantic Coast.

One line from the diary of a German soldier in Africa, received here tonight, contained an offhand reference which opens up a whole field of speculation.

Picked up by the British on a Libyan battlefield, the diary contained an entry referring to the work of traitors and spies in tipping the British to German minefield locations and the like. And there was this phrase, dated September 5, 1941:

"The same thing happened in Bardia harbor. As soon as the 6000-ton supply-carrying U-boat came in, the Tommies bombarded the harbor."

Closely-Guarded Secret

The diary was signed by Sergeant Mechanic Ball of the Twentieth Engineering Battalion of the German Afrika Korps. If Sergeant Ball knew what he was talking about, and if the German figures he used actually translate into 6000 tons, then he has given away a secret which the Germans had protected from everything except speculation.

There has been talk for years of great cargo-carrying submarines under construction in the Reich, but no definite information.

If Germany has such vessels and is prepared to use them in any number she may introduce a new and important factor into the war.

For months last year it was not clear how Germany, even with her known aerial transport and surface ship activity, could equip and enlarge her Libyan army at the rate she was moving. Sergeant Ball's submarine, and many others like them, could be the answer.

And now, with her 1000 and 1500-ton undersea warcraft operating in packs outside America's harbors, such mother craft carrying oil ammunition and supplies would give her a tremendous increase in striking power. The largest known undersea warcraft was the 2700-ton French Surcouf, recently sunk. The smallest are Japan's two-men boats, such as were used at Pearl Harbor.

Crew Relief a Problem

Instead of spending two-thirds of their time going and coming from bases in Germany and occupied France, the time of a U-boat's operation would be limited only by the necessity of rest for its crew.

This problem of crew relief is one of the greatest worries of a submarine fleet commander. Transport submersibles might solve that, also, by providing constant rotation.

The World War I transatlantic cruises of the 2000-ton Deutschland, which took 16 days each way, were starting in the United States at the time. On her first voyage she brought a 750-ton cargo. Vessels three times her size, half as large as battle cruisers, might keep a submarine fleet operating far from home bases almost indefinitely.

Junior Board's Backing Asked On War Fund

The support of the Junior Board of Commerce in next fall's Community War Fund drive was enlisted yesterday by L. P. McLachlen, president of the Washington Board of Trade, who expressed confidence that the junior group would cooperate "in the same fine fashion" that has marked its participation in Community Chest drives.

"Your past record of achievement in Community Chest campaigns," he told the group at its meeting in the Annapolis Hotel, "makes it very important to have your support in this new and enlarged drive."

McLachlen reported the decision of both the Community Chest and the United Service Organizations to join in the combined campaign with "many other acceptable organizations which are making a war appeal."

During the meeting it was announced that the Junior Board will present a saber at 9:30 a. m. today to William Brandenburg, captain of Western High's Company H which won top honors in Wednesday's competitive drill. The presentation, an annual award, will be made at the school by Geoffrey Creyke, jr., president of the board and one-time captain of a Western High company which won the drill in 1928.

The attention of members also was called to two forthcoming, board-sponsored boat rides, one on Friday afternoon, May 22, for 400 crippled children, and the other on Wednesday night, May 27, proceeds of which will go to the board's youth welfare fund. The affair for the children is an annual event, and the night cruise, to be made aboard the S. S. Potomac, will be the eighth moonlight affair of this sort to enjoy the group's sponsorship.

President Given Scroll in Tribute To His Mother

A scroll paying tribute to the memory of his mother, Sara Delano Roosevelt, was presented at the White House to President Roosevelt yesterday by the Jewish Section of the Interfaith Committee for Aid to the Democracies which has established "somewhere in England" a Sara Delano Roosevelt Children's Nursing Home for air raid victims.

The Chief Executive received a delegation which was headed by Dr. Israel Goldstein of New York. Scores of organizations and hundreds of individuals are signatories to the scroll in which the memory of Sara Delano Roosevelt is exulted as "A shining inspiration to American women for generations to come." Each signature in the scroll represents a substantial contribution toward the Sara Delano Roosevelt Children's Nursing Home.

Shuttle Buses From Virginia Are Proposed

A shuttle system of express buses to and from central parking areas was proposed yesterday by Capt. Edward McDermott of Virginia State police for the Alexandria area, to eliminate traffic congestion and promote compliance with gas and tire restrictions.

McDermott suggested the parking areas be in northern Virginia away from District congestion where auto owners could leave their cars all day. Buses would operate between the parking areas and District terminals without intermediate stops.

The Virginia police official said the plan would relieve bridge congestion and traffic on all highways. Owners also would be able to make their tires last longer and have less demand upon their gas ration.

Sordid "Glamour"

Hysteria Has A Heyday at Murder Trial

Weeps at Trial

New York, May 14.—Emotional fireworks shattered court routine today at the murder trial of Madeline Webb, the small-town glamour girl who didn't make good in the big city.

"It's a lie!" . . . "Don't you holler at me!" . . . And a sobbed-out "I'm only trying to tell the truth," were typical of the courtroom outbursts.

Eli Shonbrun, the model's alleged lover and one of the two men on trial with her for strangling Mrs. Susan Flora Reich, wealthy Polish refugee, was a silent poker-faced spectator during the first three days of the trial.

But today he jumped up, pounded the table and shouted, "It's a vicious lie!" in response to a comparatively unimportant bit of testimony.

Maid Assails Attorney

Miss Webb, pale and attractive in a slim black dress, broke into sobs as a chambermaid identified her and Shonbrun as the "Mr. and Mrs. Leopold" who occupied the Sutton Hotel room where Mrs. Reich's body was discovered March 5.

But the chambermaid herself, timid-appearing Betty O'Sullivan, made the biggest dent in courtroom decorum when she turned on her cross-examiner, Defense Counsel Jacques Buitenkant, and stormed:

'Don't you holler at me, mister, please. You'd think I was guilty of something, the way you holler."

The entire courtroom, judge and jury included, broke into laughter.

Buitenkant apologized, Judge Jonas J. Goldstein murmured, "Now, now," while Miss O'Sullivan went on, "Well, gee, it's tough to be hollered at."

"I agree," said the judge, and explained that the lawyer had to ask a few questions.

Trying to Tell Truth

"Is he a lawyer?" asked Miss O'Sullivan, "I don't know is he a lawyer or what." Earlier, Miss O'Sullivan was so nervous she had sobbed out a pathetic "I'm only trying to tell the truth."

Despite divertisements, the State continued throughout the day to build its case with testimony linking Miss Webb, Shonbrun and John D. Cullen, the third defendant, to the crime scene.

Shonbrun's outburst occurred after Chambermaid O'Sullivan identified Murray Hirschl, Shonbrun's uncle who is also a defendant but will be tried separately, as a man she had seen at the Hotel Sutton "only once," shortly before the slaying.

"It's a vicious lie," Shonbrun shouted, "she saw him every day for two weeks."

Attendants forced Shonbrun to sit down, and he appeared shaken and upset during the rest of the session.

Upon adjournment, Shonbrun left the courtroom ahead of the other defendants. Miss Webb rushed after him, caught up with him in the anteroom, clasped him in her arms—and kissed him.

James J. Springer, the lawyer who came here from Madeline Webb's home town, Stillwater, Okla., to aid in her defense, left the courtroom shaking his head.

"In Oklahoma we don't have theatrics like this in our courtrooms," he said, "it's all new to me."

Howard Crowns May Queen Today

Miss Aurelia Johnson, senior student who was elected May Queen by the student body at Howard University, will be crowned at the sixteenth annual May festival on the campus today at 4:30 p. m. Miss Johnson won the election over Miss June McMechen, who recently represented the university on Fred Allen's radio program as Howard's most talented student, by 18 votes.

The queen, who served as Howard's gridiron queen in the fall of 1941, will be crowned by a distinguished woman alumnus who has been selected by the Howard Women's Alumnae Club to serve as "Alma Mater" at the festival. Other Howard coeds who competed for the honor were Misses Ada E. Bough, Edwinna Harris, Constance Rhetta, Catherine Swanson, Floretta Walker and Doris West.

Coal Rationing Switch Is Laid To Tory Revolt

By Joseph S. Evans, Jr.
Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, May 13.—The sharp change in the British government's tactics, evidenced by the postponement of the fuel rationing plan, has been caused by a Tory revolt, the Manchester Guardian declared in its leading editorial this morning.

"In some respects," the editorial asserted, "it is the most nakedly political squeeze that the Churchill government has been subjected to in its two years in office."

The government decided to ration fuel and brought forth the Beveridge coupon scheme generally supported by Labor, Liberals and some Conservatives, the paper pointed out. But the 1922 committee "an unofficial body of Conservative members which acts as a sort of debating society for nonmembers of the government" opposed the scheme. One group in this body, although feeling that people could be asked to economize and production stepped up, were prepared to support rationing without "coupons or points" the Guardian said.

Bother to Public Cited

Another committee group, the editorial continued, reflected the feeling that "because the public does not like to be bothered its prejudices must be indulged." "Here, it was thought, was opposition that would be popular and in any case did not affect any Conservative minister, but only a Labor president of the Board of Trade (Hugh Dalton), a Labor secretary for mines (D. R. Grenfell) and a Liberal economist (Sir William Beveridge)."

The committee chairman, explaining the opposition, declared that despite what the leaders of the house had said, the nation neither needed nor desired a points rationing scheme.

Since this looked rather like an outside threat, the Daily Telegraph, mouthpiece of the government, "hastened to make things clear," declaring that the 1922 committee's activities were a safeguard against members having to vote as their leaders tell them, the Guardian went on.

"Apparently the keeping of the conscience of the Conservative Party resides during this period of coalition not with its leader, the Prime Minister, or his official colleagues, but with the back-benchers' committees upstairs. If they do not like a thing they will tell the government so, and if it does not obey them they will be prepared to vote against it.

"Natural to Party Mind"

"It is natural enough to the party mind—none of us like coalitions—but rather a poor commentary on our national unity and capacity for give-and-take."

When the Government again brings forward its fuel rationing plan "after some previous weeks delay" it will be combined with proposals covering production, consumption and organization of the coal industry as a whole, the editorial pointed out.

"When it acts it must be severe and insistent. The 1922 committee may find that it has miscalculated after all. It will not be pleasant for it if the price it has to pay for its aggressiveness is not only rationing but acquiescence in a scheme for the national control of the coal industry.

"But however the episode ends it has thrown a significant light on the conservative party. Some of its members take a light view of the war; in face of the facts of the fuel shortage many of their speeches were frivolous."

Mrs. Kinney's Funeral Rites Set for Today

Last rites will be held at 3 p.m. today at the Zurhorst Funeral Home, 301 East Capitol Street, for Mrs. Anna Helen Brustgren Kinney, 69, who died Tuesday at the Marine Hospital in Baltimore.

Retired editorial clerk in the division of cereal crops and diseases, Bureau of Plant Industry, Mrs. Kinney had been a Washington resident since 1901 and an Agriculture Department employe from 1902 until an injury suffered in October, 1940, forced her retirement.

She was a veteran member of the Woman's City Club and a former chairman of its French section. Surviving Mrs. Kinney is a sister, Mrs. Fredrica B. Davis of Honolulu.

G. W. Sets Speaking Contest for Tonight

D. C. Curley Club Presents Scholarship Check to Prelate

Archbishop Accepts Gift at Founding Party in Capital

The Curley Club of Washington last night presented the Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, archbishop of Baltimore and Washington, with a $1000 check to be used for scholarships for deserving children.

The presentation took place at the twentieth anniversary fete of the club featuring a reception for the archbishop, at the Continental Hotel.

Archbishop Curley, who was welcomed by Miss Mary L. McGee, founder of the club, in a brief message praised the club's program and stressed the members' responsibility in reaching the newcomers of their faith in Washington.

The principal objective of the club is to raise funds for scholarships for deserving Catholic children who would not otherwise receive a higher education. It also aims to promote wholesome association of Catholic young men and women.

Meetings are held on second and fourth Thursdays at the Continental Hotel, with bridge and dancing following.

Miss Kathryn Bowers, club president, and the Rev. E. Robert Arthur, new club chaplain, also spoke at the reception. The club choral group sang under Professor Harry X. Walsh's direction. Mrs. Fabiola O'Connell was in charge of arrangements for the function.

Speakers Guild Elects Harrison Combs

Harrison Combs, local lawyer, was elected president of the Speakers' Guild of Washington at its dinner meeting last night at the Continental Hotel.

Others named were Robert E. Howe of the legal department of the United Mine Workers, vice president; R. V. Gordon, treasurer, and Mrs. Henriette Verkouteren, secretary.

Army Set to Quell Any Axis-Inspired Disorder in U. S.

Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

The Army stands ready to aid the Nation's civil population in event of Axis-inspired disturbances, the War Department announced yesterday.

Military police battalions of the Zone of the Interior have been established and trained for service in case of fires, floods and other emergencies, the Army said. There are now 57 of these battalions which are stationed in or near vital spots throughout the country. The Army did not disclose the specific locations.

The battalion has a strength of about 650 men selected for their physical ability to do the work assigned to military police. The perconnel is trained at Fort Riley, Kans., and the officers at Fort Myer.

60 Are Killed In Earthquake At Guayaquil

By the United Press

Guayaquil, Ecuador, May 14.—The death toll of an earthquake which threw this city of 96,000 persons into panic last night reached 60 today as rescue workers searched debris for more victims.

Among those killed when three concrete buildings in the midtown section collapsed were United States Vice Consul John M. Slaughter and his wife, of South Bend, Ind., and a couple identified as Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Temby, also believed Americans. Temby was representative here of the South American Development Co., an American mining enterprise.

[In Washington, Secretary of State Hull said:

["This is another instance of a foreign service family who have given their lives in the service of their country in as true a sense as if they had been killed upon the battlefield."]

The minute long series of shocks began about midnight and threw this important port city into turmoil. Communications and electric services were disrupted, and many fires broke out.

Thousands of persons thronged the streets after the quake, and many carried mattresses into parks and plazas where they spent remainder of the night, fearful of more temblors.

Relatives of families missing in wreckage of the ruined buildings waited for hours as near the sites as the police would let them approach.

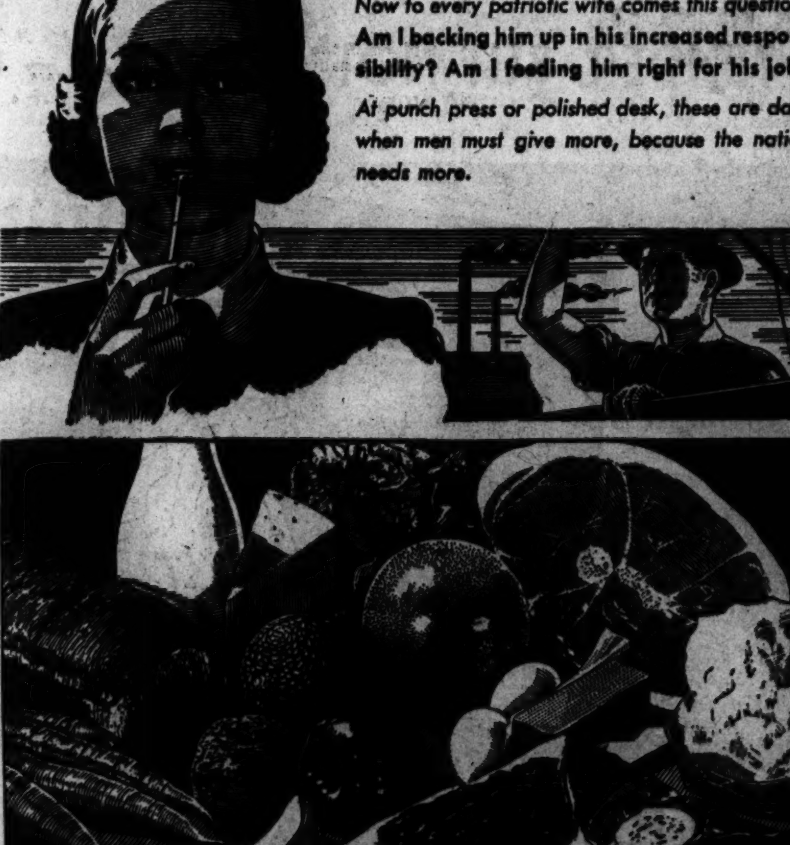
Reports from cities in the interior of Ecuador indicated that shocks felt there were of true earthquake intensity, and scattered reports told of a number of deaths outside Guayaquil.

Because of disrupted telegraphic communications, extent of loss of life and damage outside the city was not fully known.

Earthquakes occur with relative frequency on the west coast of South America.

How to plan "FIGHTING MEALS" For the Man on the Job

Now to every patriotic wife comes this question: Am I backing him up in his increased responsibility? Am I feeding him right for his job? At punch press or polished desk, these are days when men must give more, because the nation needs more.



FIGHTING FOODS . . . The government's new nutritional program of health-for-victory calls for these foods every day: Meat, poultry or fish—one or more servings . . . Vegetables—green, leafy and yellow . . . Milk—at least a pint (more for children) . . . Oranges, tomatoes or grapefruit . . . Potatoes, apples or bananas—or other fruits or vegetables . . . Enriched bread, enriched flour or cereal . . . Eggs—at least 3 or 4 a week . . . Fats, sweets—as you like them.

Never have a meal table and lunch pail meant more to this nation.

When you plan your meals this summer—when you go to the store to shop—remember you can't provide good nutrition without all the foods essential to good nutrition.

These include meat, vegetables, fruits, dairy products and cereal foods.

Men at work appreciate meat. The wives who stand behind them know the benefits of meat served regularly, for meat contributes complete, high quality proteins, B vitamins and minerals (iron, copper, phosphorus)—needed for good nutrition in summer as in winter.

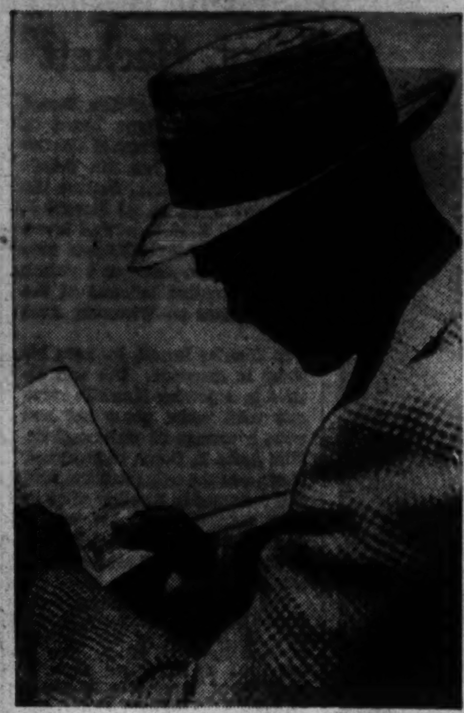
Straw Hats, Light, Cool and Colorful With 'Good Neighbor' Background

Straw-hat days are officially here. This week initiates the opening of the season, with more emphasis on the naturals and medium tan tones. Brims are still wider than those of felt hats, but are no wider than they were last summer. Some are a bit narrower. It is in the trim, however, that individualism runs rampant, with bands ranging from solid colors to gay, splashy prints. More conservative bands are favored for town wear, with bright bands being featured for country clothes. Straws are coming from all over this season—Nassau, Panama, Ecuador, Mexico, the West Indies and South American markets. A great favorite is the open-weave Panama worn by the man below. It is extremely light and cool—strictly a South American straw. The band is a brown puggree.



Soft, pliable Nassau palm (left), in a new airy lightweight weave in a golden tone with band of rust-colored shantung

Newest of the straws is the open-weave two-toned Toquilla fiber, a product of Ecuador. It is shown, at left, with a green puggree band. This hat is right for town, also cool looking and comfortable for wear on hot days. Also an emblem of South American good will

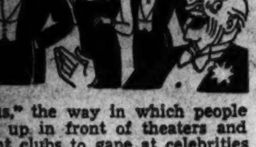
Today's Social Notes

(From The Truthtown Torch)

Most of Truthtown's leading celebrities will be exhibited at a Pageant of Public Personages to be presented a week from Tuesday night at the Horseshow Arena.

Mrs. Montclair St. Vitus, pageant expert, is the originator of the idea for the exhibit, which will be a benefit for some worthy cause yet to be decided upon.

"I observed," said Mrs. St. Vitus," the way in which people line up in front of theaters and night clubs to gape at celebrities and I thought, 'Why not make it possible for these people to pay to see our noted hostesses, divorcees, clothes horses, and other achievers?' "



The celebrities will parade up and down a platform in the arena as they are introduced and their achievements outlined by Col. Zachary Spiel, noted society auctioneer. Among the celebrities who will be presented are:

Philander Z. Plunkette, who holds the Truthtown divorce record with a total of eight divorces to date.

Mrs. Wynkoop Bigwigger, who holds top rank in board membership, being on 17—and who to date has served 457 times as a benefit sponsor, 338 as a patroness and 115 times as a member of an honorary committee.

Buzzie Bellwether, son of ace dowager, Mrs. Badminton Bellwether, who is credited with being the best cocktail shaker in town.

Mrs. Featherton Dabbler, ranking career woman, who is just opening her twenty-seventh business venture—an advisory surrealist decoration service for air raid shelters.

Hollingsworth Ramble, most versatile man about town, prominent as a club man, bon vivant, boulevardier, gourmet, turf enthusiast, spectator sportsman, champion ping pong player, diner out and collector of Egyptian mummies.

Others who have tentatively agreed to appear are: Count Amour refuge international lover; Daphne Dizzard, glamour deb who had the longest glamour bob and the most night club dates of any deb of last season; Senator Fossil, noted orator, jitterbug and extra man, and Mrs. Thornbeery Flitt who by actual count of her speedometer has "rushed madly" to and from more places in the last year than any other socialite.

Continued Story

(The Torch today concludes its account of the ancestry of Miss Gwendolyn Amoratta Waffle and Mr. Fairweather Zinnia 5th, whose engagement was announced several weeks ago.)

Mr. Zinnia on his mother's side is related to virtually all the successful members of the Fandazzle and Randazzle families of Virginia, Maryland, Massachusetts and both the Carolinas. He also traces back through his mother's family to many famous personages of the past including Madame Du Barry, Madame Pompadour, Lady Hamilton, Cleopatra, Mata Hari, Napoleon, Alexander the Great, Julius Caesar, Marc Antony, William the Conqueror, Genghis Khan, Erik the Red, and others. Mr. Zinnia at present is employed as director of office boys at the Glacier National Bank.

DECISION(?)

I've been a good Samaritan
About as long as I can.
I'm tired of wearing shoddy shoes
That give my spirit a case of blues.
The time has come the walrus said.
If I must I'll go unfed
But I am through with sort of middling
This and that which keep me riddling
Over the undecided fate
Of one good shoe with a half-good mate.
Shades of Hamlet help me out!
Come referee this constant bout
Between war-time economy
And woman's all-time vanity.
They spin before me on a reel . . .
A diabolical roulette-wheel,
One time stopping on a no
(Conscience a useless dynamo)
One time slowing up at yes.
Will-power is a wilderness.
Nine lives have things we throw away.
Well, . . . maybe I'll wear these one more day.

Double Chins Look Real Cute, But Only on Babies

By Ida Jean Kain

ONLY a baby looks cute with a double chin. Once a girl is out of kindergarten, it doesn't help her to win any blue ribbons. In the sunny teens and 20's, about all it takes to keep the chinline lovely is an erect head carriage. But by the time a woman reaches the interesting age of 30—in fact, not fiction—it takes a bit more to ward off chin trouble.

To get a slant on what goes on under your chin, put your hand mirror flat on the dressing table and look at your chin from underneath. You should do this on a day when your morale is high. It's apt to be a jolt! In any case, you will want to get busy.

Discourage Wrinkles

What your chinline needs is: Cream to lubricate the skin and discourage the wrinkles; massage to stimulate the circulation and help the blood stream to nourish the skin and muscles; exercise to tone the muscles so that they will fully support the skin. This routine may sound like a bother, but it only takes about five minutes a day.

First, wash your neck. Use hot water and a fairly rough cloth. Then massage cream in. Start with the dimple at the base of the throat and work upward, separating your hands just under the chin and continuing outward along the jawline. Leave the cream on while you do your exercises.

The secret of good chin exercise is to keep the muscles of the throat firmly tensed while doing the exercise. Take your exercise slowly and you won't get dizzy. Slow circling is excellent. Tense your throat muscles and turn your head slowly until you can look back over one shoulder. Keep the chin level—don't tip it down. Now describe a half circle with the tip of the chin, lowering your head backward and bringing the point of the chin around level with the other shoulder. Circle back again. Three circles will be plenty.

Tip your head back and chew. Open your mouth, oval shaped, then resist strongly with your lower jaw muscles as you close your lips. Repeat three times. Slowly relax your throat muscles. Finish by tipping your head back and blowing—fill your cheeks with air and blow as if you were inflating a toy balloon. If you have a toy balloon handy, blow it up. It's good chin exercise.

Chin Exercise

After you have done your exercises, remove the cream and dash cold water over the throat. This doesn't mean the cream shouldn't be left on overnight. That's always a beauty aid, if you can stand it. After the cold water application, apply a small amount of cream and leave it on.

All this must be backed up by an erect head carriage. Otherwise, the good effects are being constantly counteracted.

Actress Gives Tips on Buying

Hollywood, Calif.—"Good quality should be foremost in the mind of today's shopper." That is the sound advice advanced by Alexis Smith, movie star.

"Will it last?" is a question she always puts to herself when making a new purchase, be it a pair of shoes, a pair of gloves, a suit, a coat or even a hat. In other words, she says, "Make your pennies count."

By that she wouldn't for the world suggest that you hoard. That is being uneconomic—and foolish. Shortages make for changes in fashions, regardless of attention to freeze the "existing silhouette." So by next season you would be caught with your hoardings down.

Nor would she have you pinch pennies. That's something American women have never been used to, and this is no time to try out such ability. A teapot was made for tea, not a bunch of coins you've taken out of your lunch money. "Just carry out that good American trait of being ingenious," she says.

"Buy that pair of shoes of the best leather. By a "lasting quality" I mean that it should be chosen to go with several dresses or suits.

"Buy that new hat, but be sure that you can wear it with a few outfits. Don't buy a hat that strikes only your fancy and you find you have to go out and buy an outfit to go with it!

"Buy a coat of lasting material, but be certain that it is a harmonizing topper for different costumes. Choose one of good line and color. It will always look new and smart."

Mary Haworth's Mail

Man, 30, Has Never Met a Girl With an Interesting Mind; Says Few Women Have the Mental Capacity To Be Good Companions; Cites a Case in Point

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a young man of 30 and,—barring the difference in gender,—answer to the same description which "Wishful," your young lady correspondent of last Saturday, gave of herself. In short, I am fairly well educated, well dressed, own a small car, have a good position and possess a sociable disposition. This lady and I have something more in common. She complains that she has never been able to find the kind of (opposite sex) companionship she would like. She is looking for a man, between the ages of 30-odd and 45, who likes to ride horseback, play golf, go fishing, boating and hiking; discuss good books, see good plays, hear good music and participate generally in a clean brand of companionship.

I should like to say, for her benefit and the benefit of other women nursing the same complaint, that in all my 30 years, I have never met a girl who was interesting enough, intellectually, to sustain a good comradeship with a man. No matter how well schooled or widely read a woman may be, she just cannot carry on a logical conversation with a man. It is beyond me how women can expect men to cultivate them as "good companions," when any male bum on the street would be a more satisfying conversationalist. To make it the more preposterous, these companion-seeking women,—with no mental fare to offer,—expect a man to pay the freight when they go out together on trial flights of friendship.

I repeat, I have never yet met a girl who had anything to give,—except lovemaking in one form or another,—in return for my time and money. If you try to discuss war, politics or social problems with a woman, she will jump quickly to one conclusion and hold it,—ignoring even the most indisputable evidence you may bring to bear, in support of another conclusion. Or, if she fancies herself "open minded," she will lead you through a dizzy maze of chatter and end up by agreeing; but still stoutly insisting that you said something else to start with,—if you get what I mean.

As an example, take the following conversation which I very foolishly launched, some weeks ago, with a woman in my office. It happened the day the news broke about General MacArthur's escape from the Philippines. It went something like this:

ME: You know, I was just telling a friend last week that I thought MacArthur was going to leave the Philippines soon and go to Australia or England.

SHE: Why?

ME: He has been getting so much publicity that I figured the Government was grooming him for a bigger assignment.

SHE: Why do you say he has been getting a lot of publicity?

ME: He has been getting a terrific play with the newspapers, magazines and radio. All of them have been carrying life stories and news items extolling his virtues as a general and great leader.

SHE: I don't see how you figure that.

ME: Haven't you been reading and hearing about him?

SHE: Sure.

ME: Well?

SHE: He didn't need publicity to put him over.

ME: Favorable publicity is important in the promotion of any person or organization.

SHE: But MacArthur is a great man.

ME: Certainly he's a great man. He's got the stuff. But a man who is making good in a tough job has to have publicity if the people are to know about him. How did you know he was a great man? How did you know he was in the Philippines?

SHE: I read it in the papers, of course, like everybody else.

ME (Triumphantly): See! That's what I mean. Everyone in the country knows about him because he has been getting such extensive publicity. In the last few months, he has had more publicity than any man in the country, except the President himself.

SHE: He doesn't need publicity. He is a great man. You just don't like him. You are a Nazi and a Communist.

ME: I'm for MacArthur 100 per cent. And I am neither a Nazi nor a Communist. But as for communism—don't forget Russia is on our side now.

SHE: Russia? What's Russia got to do with it?

ME: You called me a Communist; and Russia is the cradle of communism.

SHE: The idea! Russia is a good country. Communists are men who start riots and blow up buildings.

ME: I see what you mean.

Now I ask you, Miss Haworth, how can a man be expected to seek out a person like that for companionship? I know there are a few interesting women scattered about the world. Witness yourself. But the lady whose views are quoted above stands for the kind of woman that the majority of men know. In fact, I have never known any other kind; and I know plenty who are college graduates. Sincerely.

TARHEEL.

Grace of Mind Rare in Both Sexes

DEAR TARHEEL: Breadth, depth and grace of understanding, combined with clarity of expression, seem to be the exception rather than the rule with either sex. However, it has not been my experience that women in general have such low-grade mentalities as that exhibited by your conversational vis-a-vis in the instance cited. In fact, almost any child of my acquaintance would have given you a far more searching and satisfying discussion of the same topic.

I am not prepared to say how many women of moron mind are at large in the business world, nor how they "get by," since I have met so few of them there; but I second your unhappy distaste for that brand of cerebrating. Nor can I account for the fact,—if it be true, as you contend,—that the majority of men know only bird-brain women, and tolerate them for lack of choice.

Could it be, do you suppose, that the average man (secretly unsure of himself) instinctively fights shy of intelligently articulate women,—on the unconscious assumption that companionship with them would entail a continuous battle of wits, necessary for defending his hereditary title as mental heavyweight of the species?—and a form of exertion incompatible with leisure-time relaxation? And could this be because they seem disturbingly reminiscent of what his first school teachers may have appeared to him to be—namely, Solomon in skirts, constantly goading him to a more acceptable display of exact knowledge?

I don't profess to know the answer; but I do suggest that any person of socially self-governing age should look within himself for the remediable cause, if he finds himself enmeshed in an endless chain of mediocre associations—against which his better judgment rebels.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Unique Snood

Hollywood, Calif.—Leah Barnes, Warner Bros. milliner, has designed a unique snood for Mary Astor, co-starred with Humphrey Bogart in "Across the Pacific." To the back of a draped turban of white jersey she fastens a loosely knitted snood. Because it is set back so far, it loses that baggy look. Instead it lays flat and gives a clean contour.

Recipe Contest

THEME—Fresh Fruit Desserts. Fruit, both raw and cooked, makes delicious desserts. How do you use fresh fruit to make a dessert lovely to look at, delicious to eat? Consideration should be given to the amount of sugar contained in recipe.

QUALIFICATION—Recipe must not be taken from service cookbooks. All recipes must be kitchen-tested, practical, carefully written, exact and level measurements and number of servings given. Only one entry may be submitted by a person.

PRIZES—First, $3; second, $2; ten $1 prizes.

CLOSING DATE—Noon Saturday, May 18.

Mail entries to Martha Ellyn, The Post Food Editor.

Dry Facts

Take a tip from the Army when preparing dehydrated vegetables. With little extra effort, these "dry" vegetables can be made as tasty as the canned varieties. Army food experts suggest that dehydrated beets, carrots and parsnips require more butter than is ordinarily used on the garden-fresh product. They also recommend the addition of ham.

"Glamour" Magazine Gets a Straw Vote From America's Career-Girls on Their Favorite Summer Hat

"Glamour" magazine selected a large group of girls from key cities throughout the United States (paying special attention to Washington, of course) and asked what makes a summer hat "click"? Here's what the largest percentage reported, in each case—and they're fashion-right:

33% SAY "STRAW FOR SUMMER"

It's cooler, "air-conditioned" and less likely to disarrange limp curls on sultry days!

64% LOVE A HALO-BRIM

Because a bonnet-type frames a face more prettily, and goes with all costumes!

30% PREFER A BROWN TINT

Since brown-tones are universally flattering . . . be you brunette, blonde or Titian-haired!

43% LIKE TO PAY 5.95

Because 5.95 is a price that insures good quality and fashion . . . yet avoids extravagance!

Sketched above is a hat that meets all these requirements, as Lansburgh's habitually meets the requirements of smart career-girls! Other favorites—1.99 to $20.

New Zealand Minister and Mrs. Nash Are Hosts At Festive Garden Party in New Legation Uniforms Glitter At Diplomatic Fete Of New Envoy

By Patricia Grady

Late afternoon sunshine . . . a gaily colored canopy . . . a riotous wall of roses . . . several hundred spring-dressed guests—these were a few of the ingredients that went to make up one of the most successful parties of this or any other season when the Minister of New Zealand and Mrs. Walter Nash entertained at a festive garden party yesterday afternoon.

First in many ways was this first party at which the first New Zealand Minister to the United States and his gracious wife were hosts during the 5:30 to 7:30 cocktail hours yesterday in the spacious legation on Observatory Circle which in pre-New-Zealand-Legation days was known as the James Clement Dunn house. The jovial Minister and Mrs. Nash, whose tawny print dress was set off with a natural straw sailor hat, received their guests in the living room of the high-ceilinged house, but soon joined their guests in the garden and towards the end of the party stood on the terrace to warmly thank each guest for coming.

Much a center of attention was stunning Mrs. Patrick Hurley, who chose a chair under a shady tree to hold her court. "What have you heard from your husband?" was the question most often asked her as she replied concerning the "last word" she had received from Brig. Gen. Hurley, our Minister to New Zealand. The Russian Ambassador Maxim Litvinoff, crossed the length of the lawn to greet the Minister of South Africa and Mrs. Ralph William Close and Mme. Litvinoff soon joined the group to talk summer air conditioning with the wife of the South African envoy.

Gas Rationing Popular Topic

Anyone at the party could have seen the tall form of British Ambassador Lord Halifax towering above the gathering as he and Lady Halifax discussed this and that with Mrs. Cordell Hull. Beautiful Mme. Loudon, in chic navy blue, caused heads to turn as she strolled through the garden with Mrs. Thomas Burke. Mme. Loudon and her husband, the Dutch Ambassador, will leave today for the Middle West, where he will deliver a series of speeches. "No, speaking doesn't tire him," Mme. Loudon answered a questioner. "He knows how to rest between one-night stands."

Gas rationing shared honors with the garden as the most popular subject of conversation, as was evidenced when the Minister of Czecho-Slovakia, Vladimar Hurban, asked a late arrival "Have you heard the latest greeting?" The newcomer admitted he hadn't. "Are you an X?" demanded the Czech Minister.

Diplomats were here, there and everywhere . . . under the canopy that shaded the bar . . . sitting at small tables scattered about the lawns . . . strolling beneath the trees in the extensive garden. Mme. Espil, wife of the Argentine Ambassador, chatted with Mrs. Dean Acheson, wife of the Assistant Secretary of State,' while the wife of another Assistant Secretary of State, Mrs. Adolf A. Berle, jr., stood in a group nearby.

Cabinet Wives Arrive Early

Mrs. Henry L. Stimson was one of the early arrivals and another from the Cabinet-wife contingent was Mrs. Henry Morgenthau. Secretary of Labor, Miss Frances Perkins, made one of her rare appearances at an afternoon party and high-ranking officials could be seen in every direction. Robert Stewart of the State Department introduced his bride of a few months to Mrs. Leighton McCarthy, wife of the Canadian Minister.

British army uniforms were in abundance with Field Marshal Sir John Dill boasting the most decorations in sight. Maj. Gen. Dewing, who left his post as Chief of the British Army Staff of Singapore shortly before the siege, due to illness, was constantly surrounded by a group of military men. The Greek Minister, Cimon Diamantopoulos, talked earnestly to Lord Halifax and the popular Colombian Ambassador, Gabriel Turbay was greeted on all sides, as were the Ecuadorean Ambassador and Mme. Alfaro.

The Egyptian Minister Mahmoud Hassan Bey formed a receiving line of his own on the terrace while his pretty wife mingled with the throng on the lawn below. Mrs. Jesse Jones was one of the first to arrive, and one of the first to leave, and Mr. and Mrs. James Clement Dunn strolled about in the garden that was once their own. Recognizing more than a few of the wearers of the trim white naval uniforms that dotted the party was Mrs. James V. Forrestal, wife of the Undersecretary of the Navy.

Many Notables Among Guests

Among the "everybody" who were at the pleasant party were Senator Claude Pepper, the Portuguese Minister and Mme. de Bianchi, Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, Mrs. Stanley K. Hornbeck, the Postmaster General and Mrs. Frank Walker, the Philippine High Commissioner and Mrs. Francis Sayre, Herbert Feis, Mrs. George Pettengill, whose chic chapeau matched her American beauty shade frock, and the Minister of Honduras and Mme. de Caceres.

Also there were the Danish Minister and Mme. de Kauffmann, Edgar Ansel Mowrer, Col. Bob Garfurth, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Livesay, who were going on to an early dinner, Mrs. Wallace McClure, Mrs. Eldon King, the Minister of the Dominican Republic and Senora de Troncoso, the Ambassador of Uruguay, Dr. Juan Carlos Blanco, George Abell, Mr. and Mrs. Bulkley Griffin and literally dozens of others.

Mrs. E. M. Watson Plans Party at Dumbarton Oaks

Mrs. Edwin M. Watson has issued invitations to a tea on Tuesday, May 19, at Dumbarton Oaks Gardens where, on June 2, the first in the third annual summer series of concerts presented by the Chamber Music Guild will be held.

Some sixty or seventy guests, including the directors, sponsors and members of the guild committee have been invited by Mrs. Watson, who is herself one of the five directors. Others are Mrs. Stanley Woodward, Mrs. Foster Adams, Mrs. Marcel Ancher and Marcel Ancher, founder of the Chamber Music Guild.

The guild has a distinguished list of sponsors including members of the diplomatic corps and many prominent Washingtonians.

Guest artists at the opening concert on June 2 will include Sylvia Meyer, harpist; Kenton Terry, flautist, and Paul Garrett, clarinetist, who will be heard along with members of the Guild String Quartet.

Son Born to the J. R. Kirklands

Mr. and Mrs. James R. Kirkland announce the birth of a boy yesterday in the morning at Columbia Hospital. The child has been named William Elliott Kirkland, after his two grandfathers, William J. Kirkland of the United States Marshal's office and the late Dr. Stephen Elliott Kramer, former assistant superintendent of Washington public schools.

Mrs. Kirkland is the former Miss Katherine L. Kramer. This is Mr. and Mrs. Kirkland's second child, their first being a girl, Margaret K. Kirkland, now 4 years old. Mr. Kirkland is now in private law practice and teaches criminal law at George Washington University.

Mrs. Harriman Takes Summer Home Near Rye, N. Y.

Changing her plans for a Washington summer, Mrs. J. Borden Harriman has rented her Foxhall Road home, Uplands, and will leave this weekend for New York.

June 1 she'll move into the house she has taken for the torrid months on Manursing Island Drive, near Rye, N. Y. Her daughter, Mrs. Harriman Russell, will be with her there and she is expecting her granddaughter, Mrs. John Harley Lewis, and her great-granddaughter, "Daisy," to spend the summer at the Long Island Sound house.

Mrs. Harriman has rented Uplands to Maj. Richard Mellon of Pittsburgh, nephew of the late Andrew W. Mellon, and Mrs. Mellon, who before her marriage in 1936, was Miss Constance Prosser.

Miss Caperton Now Guest Of Capt., Mrs. Moran

Miss Marguerite Caperton, who with Miss Carolyn Trippe has been visiting Clarence Hewes, is now the guest of Capt. and Mrs. Thomas Moran at their home, 2320 Bancroft Place. Miss Caperton plans to extend her Washington stay for several days before returning to her home in Newport.

Miss Trippe, who has spent most of the winter in Palm Beach, left yesterday to return to her home in New York.

Eileen Erwin To Be Feted

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Parsons Erwin will entertain at a tea Saturday afternoon in honor of their daughter, Miss Eileen Erwin. If the weather permits, the fete will be held in the garden.

Miss Erwin, who is at Bryn Mawr for her freshman year, made her debut in December at a large dance given by her parents at their home Arbremont. The June party is planned in order for her to meet the older friends of the family. She will end her studies and return to Washington late this month, but her summer plans and those of her parents are still indefinite with the future of civilian travel an unknown quantity.

Nancy Iselin To Be Honored At Dance Tonight

Preparations for the wedding of Miss Nancy Iselin and Charles Morgan, Saturday, are well under way at Wolver Hill, the Virginia home of Miss Iselin's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. Oliver Iselin of New York and Middleburg.

Already arrived to be the house guests of the Iselins for the wedding are Mrs. Joseph Dilworth, aunt of the bride-elect, and Mr. Dilworth of Pittsburgh, Pa., and Mrs. Henry Graham Brown, Miss Iselin's grandmother, also of Pittsburgh.

Final fete, among the many which have honored the bride-to-be and her fiance, will be a dinner dance tonight at which Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rumsey will be hosts to the wedding party and other guests at their home. Mrs. Amory Perkins entertained earlier in the week at a luncheon honoring Miss Iselin.

Laura Benoit Is Bride of Lieut. Hackett

In the rectory of the Sacred Heart yesterday Miss Laura O. Benoit, daughter of Mrs. H. Charles Benoit and the late Mr. Benoit of Fall River, Mass., became the bride of Lieut. (j. g.) Donald J. Hackett, U. S. N. R., of Fall River.

The Rev. Donald Fannon performed the ceremony at 4 o'clock and a reception followed at the bride's home on Wisconsin Avenue.

H. Charles Benoit, jr., gave his sister in marriage. She was attired in a powder blue silk crepe suit with white pique hat and wore a corsage of white orchids. Miss Anita R. Doran of Somerset, Mass., was the only attendant, and was costumed in a yellow silk suit with natural straw hat and a green orchid corsage. Maj. Hooton G. Squire of South Swansea, Mass., was best man.

The bride is a graduate of Mount St. Mary Seminary, Hooksett, N. H., and of the College of New Rochelle, N. Y. She is employed as legislative clerk in the office of House Minority Leader Joseph W. Martin, jr.

Noted Editor From Mexico Is Honored

Dr. Gabriel Mendez Plancarte, noted editor from Mexico City, was the guest in whose honor Charles Thomson, chief of the Division of Cultural Relations of the Department of States, was host yesterday at luncheon at the Mayflower Hotel.

Dr. Mendez Plancarte, who is visiting this country at the invitation of the State Department, is editor of the Mexican literary revies, "Abside," and an ardent exponent of the solidarity of the United Nations. His itinerary includes New York, Boston, New Orleans, Notre Dame and Austin, Tex.

Guests yesterday included Dr. Luis Quintanilla, Counselor of the Mexican Embassy Dr. Pedro de Alba, Assistant Director of the Pan American Union; Dr. Lewis Hanke and Father David Rubio; of the Hispanic Foundation of the Library of Congress, Harry Frantz of the office of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, George Finch of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, Dr. Martin McGuire and Father Francis Steck of the Catholic University, Dean Henry Gratton Doyle of George Washington University, Dr. Raymond McGowan of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, William G. Murphy and William G. McLean, Richard Pattee and Arturo Morales of the Department of State.

Archduke Otto Honored at Luncheon

Archduke Otto of Austria was the guest in whose honor Princess Boncompagni entertained at luncheon yesterday.

The party took place at the 1925 F Street Club. Covers were laid for 28.

Philippine President Feted At White House Luncheon

A Presidential host and a Presidential honor guest have become a social commonplace for the Capital recently. Yesterday, President and Mrs. Roosevelt entertained at a luncheon in honor of the newly arrived President of the Philippine Commonwealth, Manuel Quezon, and Mrs. Quezon.

If a joint Cabinet meeting of the Philippine and United States Governments had been called at the fete, there would have been 100 per cent attendance. For around the table, centered in bouquets of red roses, carnations and maidenhair fern, were from the Philippine contingent, Vice President Sergie Osmena, the Resident Commissioner, Joaquin M. Elizalde, who also holds the title of Secretary of State, and Mrs. Elizalde; Maj. Gen. Basilio J. Valdes, Secretary of National Defense, and Lieut. Col. Andres Soriano, Secretary of Finance, and Mrs. Soriano, and from the United States were the Vice President and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, the Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull, the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, the Secretary of War and Mrs. Henry Stimson, the Attorney General, Francis Biddle, the Postmaster-General and Mrs. Frank Walker, the Secretary of the Navy, Frank Knox, the Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Harold Ickes, the Secretary of Agriculture, Claude Wickard, the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Jesse Jones, and the Secretary of Labor Miss Frances Perkins.

Sharing honors at the luncheon were the children of President and Mrs. Quezon, Miss Maria Aurera Quezon, Miss Maria Zeneida Quezon and Manuel Quezon, jr., Miss Maria Osmena accompanied her father, the Vice President of the Commonwealth, and others in the Philippine group were the Auditor General of the Philippines and Mrs. Jaime Hernandez, Col. Manuel Nieto, senior aide to Mr. Quezon, and Lieut. Col. Jaime C. Velasques, junior aide to the President.

At the party were Justice Frank Murphy, former Governor General of the Philippines; Gen. and Mrs. George C. Marshall, Admiral and Mrs. Ernest J. King, Lieut. Gen. and Mrs. Thomas Holcomb, Admiral and Mrs. Thomas C. Hart, the Philippine High Commissioner and Mrs. Francis B. Sayre, Mr. and Mrs. Dwight F. Davis, Capt. John L. McCrea, Col. O. R. Stillinger, United States Military Aide to President Quezon; Comdr. C. L. Tyler, United States Naval Aide to President Quezon and Mrs. Dwight H. Owen of Providence, R. I.

Immediately after the luncheon, the Quezon family, who were guests at the White House Wednesday night after their arrival in Washington that afternoon, moved to temporary headquarters at the Shoreham. Though plans for the setting up of the Philippine Government-in-exile have not been completed yet, President Quezon will hold a press conference this morning at 11:45 at the Resident Commissioner's office.

Ensign Rait and Wife to Live In St. Louis

Ensign Donald Myron Rait, U. S. N. R., and the former Miss Christine Barbara Tribble, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Shelby I. Tribble of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., who were married here recently, will make their home in St. Louis. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald McKinnon Rait of Washington.

Their marriage took place on May 9 at the home of the bridegroom's parents. The Rev. Peter Marshall of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church officiated before an improvised altar.

Mr. Tribble gave his daughter in marriage. Her costume was a suit of navy and white, worn with a corsage of gardenias. Miss Margaret Tribble was her sister's only attendant. She was attired in a rose suit with white accessories. James McKinnon Rait of New York was his brother's best man. A reception immediately followed the ceremony.

The bride attended Florida State College for Women at Tallahassee and was graduated from the University of Tennessee. Recently she has been secretary to the Chief of Production Requirements Branch of the War Production Board. Ensign Rait attended the University of Arizona and was graduated from George Washington University.

She is the former Miss Marion Adelle Williams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard E. Williams, sr. and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Long.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was gowned in white chantilly lace and carried a bouquet of white roses. The maid of honor, Miss Catherine Mae McDonald, wore blue marquisette over taffeta and the bridesmaids, Miss Evelyn L. Schell and Phyllis K. Wayne, wore similar frocks of yellow and carried yellow roses.

The bridegroom's brother, R. Guy Long, was best man and ushers were Ernest R. Schaeffer and Andrew McGrow.

New British Minister Is Expected Soon

Time was when the title Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary was held only by heads of legations, but when Harold Butler arrives from London to head the British Ministry of Information, he will be one of four ministers of the British Embassy.

Mr. Butler, formerly director of the International Labor Office at Geneva, will replace Sir Gerald Campbell, who is expected to retain his Embassy connections and continue his addresses on behalf of the British war effort.

Expected to arrive in Washington shortly, Mr. Butler will not be making his first visit to the Capital. He attended the World Textile Conference here, to which he was secretary general, in 1937, and in 1919 served a term here as secretary general of the International Labor Office. He resigned his directorship of the I. L. O. to become first warden of the new Nuffield College at Oxford, where he has been directing political and economic research in relation to modern industry and government. He is retaining this position.

The author of a number of books, including the recently published "The Lost Peace," Mr. Butler spent much of his time on drafting the international labor code when he was affiliated with the I. L. O.

Arlington Hall Team to Take Part In Horse Show

In full troop regalia, the Arlington Hall Lance Drill Team of 24 girls will lend color to the Washington Horse Show tomorrow.

Performing an intricate precise drill, the girls, carrying the flags of the South American republics and Canada, will salute hemisphere solidarity.

Miss Susan Rinehart is captain of one squad which comprises the Misses Marion Messer, Betty Baxter, Gaverne Gibson, Betty McGuire, Marjon Loucks, Joey Suffrin, Margielou Meinig, Alice Pelich, Kendrick Brown, Bliss Brown and Dorothy Colclough.

Leading the second squad of trimly uniformed girls is Miss Elbe Lanahan. Her squad includes the Misses Harriet Lackey, Ellie Loper, Peggy Lazenby, Sally Puryear, Bettye Byrd, Betsy Mueller, Joanne Moorehouse, Priscilla Watson, Barbara Blunt and Margaret Beckwith.

Spectators wary of using tires and gasoline will be taken direct to the showgrounds by buses running on East-West Highway betweeen Bethesda and Silver Spring.

Mrs. L. F. Nordine Has 'Open House'

Mrs. L. F. Nordine held open house last evening at her home in Silver Spring, Md., at an "after 8 o'clock" party in honor of her son, John Nordine, and his bride, the former Miss Patricia Connaughton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Connaughton of Washington. The event also honored the hostess' daughter, Miss Florence Nordine of Oak Park, Ill., who is visiting here.

Mr. and Mrs. John Nordine were married on March 15 at Key Field, Meridian, Fla., and are now on leave from that station.

Assisting the hostess during the evening were Mrs. Ronald D. Magee, Mrs. K. H. Moore, Mrs. Owen Conn and Mrs. Thomas Nallery.

Jean Deloris Feaga Is Bride-Elect

Mr. and Mrs. Walter P. Feaga of Frederick, Md. announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Jean Deloris Feaga, to John Alfred Baden, U. S. N. R., son of Mrs. John A. Baden of Prince Georges County and Washington and the late Mr. Baden.

Miss Feaga was graduated from Hood College, Frederick, Md., and for the past two years has been on the faculty of the Walkersville High School, Walkersville, Md.

Mr. Baden was graduated from University of Maryland and Law School. At present he is stationed at the United States Navy Recruiting Station, Bristol, Va.

The wedding will take place sometime this summer.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

Senora de Michels, wife of the Chilean Ambassador, who was scheduled to leave today for her homeland where she will spend the summer months, will not leave the Capital until the middle of next week because of the postponed sailing time of her ship.

Representative Henry Jackson and Norwegian Counselor Francis Irgens will be speakers when the Norwegian Society of Washington celebrates Norwegian Independence Day at a buffet supper and dance at the Shoreham Hotel tomorrow night. The country's independence day actually falls on Sunday, but the fete in its honor will take place on the evening before.

Col. and Mrs. Leigh Wade will be guests of honor when Mrs. Irene Williams entertains at an "after 5:30 party" tomorrow afternoon at the Wardman Park Hotel. On Tuesday of next week Mrs. Wade will share honors with Senora de Pastoriza at a luncheon to be given by Mrs. Clarence Grosner in the Pan American room of the Mayflower. Senora de Pastoriza is wife of the former Minister of the Dominican Republic to the United States.

Mrs. Randall Hagner will entertain at dinner tomorrow evening.

Mrs. Charles S. Whitman, of New York, is the guest of Mrs. J. Fred Essary.

Edward Van Devanter has moved to 2101 Connecticut Avenue, where he will occupy the apartment of Mrs. Goodloe Edgar for the summer. Mrs. Edgar has opened her country place, Still House, Springfield Farm, at Williamsport, Md.

Joseph E. Davies, former Ambassador to Russia and Belgium, is in New York where he spoke yesterday at the Hotel Plaza at the Palestine Lighthouse spring luncheon.

Lieut. Col. Harrison G. Reynolds and Mrs. Reynolds are spending several days in New York at the Berkshire.

Women's Porch of Washington Cathedral Is Dedicated; Mary E. Johnston Speaks

A BIT of architecture into which have gone the sacrifices, gifts and prayers of 3000 women was dedicated yesterday afternoon. It was the North Porch of the Washington Cathedral.

The first permanent entrance to the Cathedral it was built with funds raised by the Women's Committee, and will be known as the Women's Porch. The first stone in the structure was laid in 1931 by Mrs. Herbert Hoover.

Presenting the gift on behalf of the more than 3000 women who contributed to the fund, Miss Mary E. Johnston of Glendale, Ohio, National chairman of the Women's Committee, said: "Most of these gifts were sent in loving tribute to women—to those still living as well as to those who are now in the nearer presence of God. Many were in thanksgiving for special events: the birth of a child, a golden wedding, a recovery from illness. All represent love, honor, thanksgiving—spiritual qualities.

"It is fitting that this portion of the cathedral be dedicated at this time in our country's history when so many are called upon for courage and sacrifice; when the things of the spirit should be exalted, when supreme love is demanded. All of these qualities are exemplified in the lives of the women in whose honor this porch is built." The Bishop of Washington, the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, accepted the gift on behalf of the cathedral.

The dedication services opened the program of activities of the Women's Committee of the National Cathedral Association which met here yesterday in annual conference.

At the business meeting following the porch dedication, Mrs. Allan Forbes of Boston was appointed by Bishop Freeman to succeed Miss Johnston as national chairman.

Reports on the work of the Women's Committee were made by 14 State regents and 10 local chairmen. Mrs. Schuyler L. Black of Syracuse, chairman of the fund being raised for the restoration of St. Paul's Cathedral, London, reported that more than $1000 had been raised.

Among those attending the conference were the following State regents: Mrs. Irenee du Pont, Delaware; Mrs. Charles Warren, District of Columbia; Mrs. Allan Forbes, Massachusetts; Mrs. Arthur McGraw, Michigan; Mrs. Ernest Adee, New York; Mrs. William Horsfall, Oregon; Mrs. Maurice Condon, Rhode Island; Mrs. Walter C. White, Northern Ohio; Miss Johnston, Southern Ohio.

Mrs. Black of Syracuse, N. Y.; Mrs. Shaun Kelly of Richmond, Mass.; Mrs. C. Stanley Tompson of New York City and Miss Catherine Morrison of Cincinnati were among the local chairmen present.

N. M. Club Party

"LOST MEMBERS" of the New Mexico Club are expected to swell the attendance at the club's party tonight at the American Legion Club, 2417 Fifteenth Street Northwest, to record proportions.

Among those expected is Bruce Cabot, movie actor, native of Carlsbad, N. Mex. He, together with several hundred other residents of New Mexico, read of the lost membership list of the club and wrote to the club president, Marcia Hertzmark, 2032 Belmont Road. About 100 soldiers from New Mexico, now located in the District and surrounding camps, called Miss Hertzmark saying they would attend the party. Other New Mexicans wrote and phoned in such numbers that cards were sent to more than 500 prospective party guests.

Women Democrats Will Discuss U. S. and the War

A panel discussion on "America and Total War," held at the Woman's National Democratic Club yesterday produced agreement on three major points from the participants. They were:

Winning the war will be no easy task.

The United States can never again expect to be isolated, politically or economically.

It is important that this country consider now its responsibility for a "wise and just peace" that will not sow the germs of another war.

The discussion was arranged by the Woman's National Democratic Club in conjunction with the women's division of the Democratic National Committee. Speakers were Mrs. Raymond Clapper, Mrs. Wayne Coy, Judge Marion Harron, Mrs. Hale T. Shenefield and Mrs. Charles W. Tillett, with Miss Josephine Schain presiding.

Increased communications with faster plane travel have resulted in widening the radius of wartime operations so that the points the United States will have to defend have become far flung, Mrs. Shenefield, a member of the faculty of the American University School of Public Affairs, pointed out.

Mrs. Clapper, wife of the newspaper columnist, presented a picture of Europe which described the people of Germany as "gray" with fatigue and temper short," based on information she said had come from a "neutral country." She praised the resistance of the Russian army as "the only army that can come to grips with the Germans."

"It is pretty cheap and stupid," she commented, "if we for a moment question the integrity and courage of our Russian allies."

She stressed her belief in the need for international cooperation following the war and during the war. Applause followed her suggestion that:

"When a Senator says, 'Bring our supplies back to these shores,' the American people will have to say, 'No.'"

But while Mrs. Clapper emphasized the German menace to this country, Mrs. Wayne Coy, wife of the Office of Emergency Management official, objected:

"The aggressions of the Japanese are more ruthless, more vicious than those of the Germans, because the Japanese embark not on conquest, but on crusade. It's a religion with the Japanese."

She predicted that if India is conquered: "Our chance then of winning the war will be infinitely less."

Mrs. Coy, who has herself spent some time in the Far East, said she considered freedom for India difficult for other nations to accomplish in view of differences between the Hindus and Moslems. While she called it "not impossible" for Australia to be conquered by the Japanese, she, like other speakers on the panel, predicted ultimate victory for the United States.

Judge Harron of the Board of Tax Appeals followed by speaking on the "economic aspects" of the war. "War is never cheap, but it's a thousand times cheaper to win than to lose," she said.

"In order to maintain the political freedom we cherish, each of the nations of the world will have to give up some of that rugged economic freedom we have." It may be necessary, she added, to have "international Leon Hendersons" and "a world Jesse Jones." That is, she explained, price fixing and controlled distribution of goods and money may be necessary on a world scale.

Mrs. Tillett, assistant chairman of the Democratic National Committee, concluded the talks with the warning: "We cannot win a peace based on outworn isolationist policy."

100 FAT LADIES LOSE 20 LBS. EACH

In a clinical test just completed under the direction of Dr. C. E. Von Hoover, 100 over-weight persons lost an average of 20 pounds each in the thirty days between January 2nd and February 2nd 1942. One registered Nurse lost 29 pounds, and a Dietitian 30 pounds in the thirty days. All of these people used the new Ayds vitamin candy reducing plan, which costs only $2.25 for a thirty-day supply, and is guaranteed to be absolutely pure and to contain no laxatives or drugs and to require no exercise. Constitutional Crisis Looms In Argentina

By Charles H. Guptill

Buenos Aires (Wide World).—Many Argentines are wondering whether the failure of Acting President Ramon S. Castillo to convoke Congress on the legally prescribed date may prove the forerunner of a constitutional crisis.

They are speculating on the possibility that the federal executive, finding justification in the political debates which have impaired congressional efficiency the last two years, may decide to suspend the legislative branch altogether.

The Argentine constitution prescribes that Congress shall convene May 1 and conclude its sessions September 30 of each year. It also provides that the President shall open Congress. Consequently, it has been the legislators' practice to await a presidential convocation before beginning their labors.

No Basis in Law

This congressional courtesy, time honored but devoid of legal basis, occasionally has been used by the executive power to circumscribe the work of the legislative branch. In 1930 President Hipolito Irigoyen delayed convoking Congress until less than one month of its legal life remained.

While Dr. Castillo has indicated his intention of summoning Congress in due course, he has refrained from suggesting a specific date. Some observers are convinced, therefore, that he will follow the precedent set by Irigoyen. Others predict he will convoke Congress but suspend it before the constitutional closing date if it attempts to obstruct his policies.

The composition of Congress, as it emerged from the national elections last March, indicates it will prove less tractable than Dr. Castillo might wish. The conservative coalition, which supports the acting President, controls the Senate but failed to win a majority in the chamber of deputies.

In the lower house, where no party has a majority in its own right, the Radicals, with 65 seats, constitute the largest group. When the Socialists swing their 17 votes into line with the Radicals, the result is an antiadministration majority of two.

Three Issues Paramount

If the government supporters should adopt a policy of leaving the chamber whenever they find the proceedings disagreeable, they probably could force a suspension of business for lack of a quorum.

With Congress hamstrung in this manner, observers believe Castillo would find a ready-made reason, if he sought one, to give the legislators a permanent vacation.

Opposition deputies have signified their intention of challenging the seats of various government supporters on the grounds they were elected in corrupt voting.

The state of siege, degreed by Dr. Castillo last December 15 when Congress was in recess, will come up automatically for a decision on its continuance.

Dr. Castillo's cherished neutrality policy may touch off the most spectacular verbal fireworks of all. Forbidden by the state of siege to discuss foreign policy heretofore, many a pro-Democrat deputy is aching to vent his criticism in the chamber.

Science Finds Some Humans Have Owl Eyes

By Howard W. Blakeslee

Wide World Science Editor

Rochester, Minn., May 14.—Owl eyes have been discovered in human beings—eyes which by a freak of nature are structurally like an owl's, blinded by light but able to see in the dark.

There may be military possibilities, such as spotting planes or submarines, for the human owl eyes can see a black cat at night in 10 to 20 times less light than the very best normal eyes.

The discovery is reported to the American Physiological Society by Dr. Charles Sheard and Dr. H. L. Bair of the Mayo Foundation and the Mayo Clinic.

The peculiar human eyes lack the type of nerve endings of sight which see bright lights and colors. They possess only the nerve mechanisms which see dim light. In that respect they are almost the same as owl's eyes. To them everything is black or gray, and clear only when the light is dim.

Sensitive "Rods"

The bright light and color-seeing nerve organs are called cones; the dim-seeing ones rods. The owl-eyed humans have rods which are just as sensitive as the owl's rods.

A normal person at night is using his rods when he glimpses out of the corner of his eye things which vanish when he looks directly at them. The owl-eyed persons have this ability, too, and in higher degree. But their great superiority comes in a different use of the night-seeing rods, a use which normal eyes cannot imitate.

The human owls can look directly at the object which the rest of us can glimpse only from the corner of an eye. They can study this object directly, until they even discern some of its details. And when they do this they can see the object many times better than the best of other human eyes.

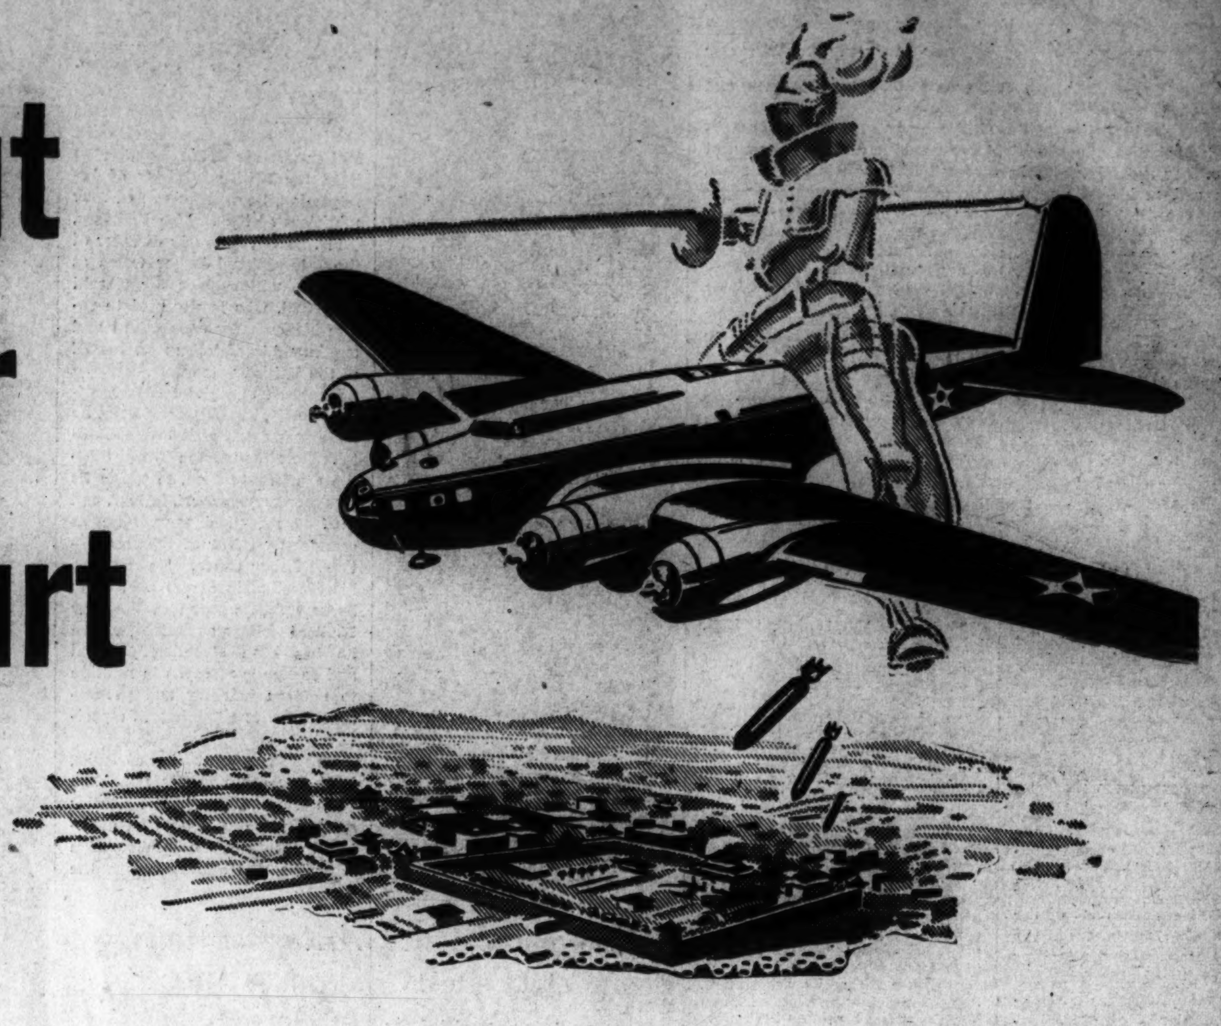
The sight of two of these persons has been measured at the Mayo Foundation. One saw objects 10 times dimmer than could be seen by the best aviator's eye, and the other 16 times dimmer. It is believed that this night-seeing superiority may go as high as 30-fold.

Known as Achromatopsia

The pecular eye condition is known as achromatopsia, or total inability to see colors. There are two causes—one, heredity which omits the retinal nerve mechanisms of color; the other degeneration of those nerves (the cones) early in life.

These people, to see in daytime, wear dark glasses or stay in shaded places. The trouble tends to run in families, and if possessors of owl eyes can serve in military work, it is possible that many may be found.

A Connecticut Yankee Over Hirohito's Court



Do you remember the Will Rogers movie "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court?"

In it there was a striking parable on today's task of putting planes over Tokio, or otherwise war-converting American industry.

The scoffing theorist was there, in the form of old Merlin, the magician.

▶ The reactionary was there, in the form of artisans who clung to old methods of producing war materials and knights who held on to established military concepts.

The breathless speed in teaching new methods of mechanical production was there too . : . That movie should be revived. It would be a glorious chance to see our problems and achievements in humorous perspective.

: : : But, dear reader, this isn't an advertisement for a half-forgotten movie. We wish to point a moral:

When Will Rogers was transposed by the magic of the scenario writer to the Court of King Arthur, he had the good fortune to carry along a book.

With native Yankee skill, plus a "How-to-do-it" book, he rapidly transformed and later defended, the Arthurian mode of life.

▶ For fifty years, American industry has been transforming a mode of life. Now, it is engaged in the task of overcoming the ogre Schicklgruber and a slant-eyed Morgan le Fay who threaten that mode of living.

Whether the industry in which you work built automobiles or pink panties in peacetime. Whether it now makes hub caps for Jeeps, or entire planes for the plumed-knights of our day. Whether you are an executive, designer, or production man, you have beside you a helper that is very similar to the "how-to-do-it" volume of the Rogers film.

Will Rogers had just one book to help him work his transformation of Arthurian industry . : : : you have hundreds of such books.

There, you've guessed it! We are talking about the Industrial Press, or "trade papers" . . . those publications-in-overalls which implement the amazing performance of the American industrialist.

Business and government officials cannot find time to read all of the technical magazines, of course. But they depend upon them, whether they know it or not.

▶ The men who call production conferences know that their memos always summon two men—the man who actually attends and the editor of the Industrial Magazine which specializes in helping that man do his job.

For instance: Take a typical executive of a company making anything from automobiles to lipstick holders:

Word comes from the "table-round" to get busy converting his plant to turn out its share of 185,000 planes.

From buzzer to conference, to plan, to schedule, to blueprint, to purchase, supply and actual production the mighty job rushes with (what later seems) miraculous speed.

But in the process every executive in the plant, from president to foreman, has bumped into brand-new problems.

Does each man hold up the parade while he figures out the answer? Not if someone else has faced a similar problem and found out how to lick it.

Does each man catch a plane or train and hunt through hundreds of factories for the one technique that may give the solution to his problem?

You know he doesn't. Each man turns to his old friend, the industrial editor in his particular field. If the problem has been solved, he will find in his McGraw-Hill, or other industrial magazine, a "how-to-do-it" article or advertisement . . . dry as dust to everyone but the man who is frantically looking for the specific information it contains.

If the problem is the difference between the ductility of aviation metals, as compared to the sheets with which a production engineer has worked in his automotive days, the engineer turns to the industrial editor, or the industrial advertiser.

If the problem is to hold tolerances to ten-thousandths in a plant that has always worked in thousandths, the executive merely says it must be done. The man in the shop must find out how to do it without slowing production to a walk—and find out fast.

If the problem is where to get extra steam when new boilers are unobtainable, the man with the responsibility reads a certain Industrial Publication as avidly as any Superman fan ever read the comics.

▶ If the problem is putting up roof and sidewalls faster than machinery can be installed, the editors and advertisers of construction engineering magazines have studied the problem and wait with answers at the flick of a plant manager's thumb.

So it goes. War necessity says here is a job that must be done. Production men combine their own knowledge with the experience of others (via the Industrial Press) and go to work : : :

: : . a few months pass and headlines scream "TOKIO BOMBED."

The Industrial Press doesn't put those bombers over Tokio but it does help disseminate the industrial "know-how" which contributes to the planes and equipment.

In recognition of the miracle of war production—accomplished through the cooperation of American management and labor with the W. P. B. : : : this advertisement is published by the McGraw-Hill Network of Industrial Communication.

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

Cleveland, May 14.—Out here in Cleveland, they're beginning to feel the repercussions of Bill Conn's impromptu little mayhem affair with his father-in-law. When pop-in-law popped Billy up in Pittsburgh the other night and put him in an Army hospital, Cleveland began to horn into the heavyweight title-fight picture.

POVICH

Conn was supposed to fight Joe Louis, you know, in June, but that's out what with sweet William sadly contemplating the hand he cracked against his father-in-law's skull and asking himself if it was worth it. The Army will pay Conn's hospital expenses because for some reason the Army came to the conclusion that Conn, on leave during the family fracas, was "defending himself in the line of duty." But the Army won't make restitution of the $125,000 purse Conn would have netted from a Louis fight.

And where does Cleveland come in? Ah, that's to be told presently. Promoter Mike Jacobs is insistent that Joe Louis fight somebody in June, somewhere. Looking over the field, he has discovered that Bob Pastor and Cleveland would fit into the picture rather nicely, or at least better than any other angle he could promote at this time.

Why Pastor, and why Cleveland? Well, Pastor is something of a hero out here. In other towns where he has loused up the fight business, Pastor is something less than a hero, but in Cleveland they go for him. He has never fought a bad fight here, and in fact he has fought a couple of beauts, and the Cleveland people would pay to see a Louis-Pastor fight with more alacrity than any other community, particularly New York where the odors of Pastor's first fight with Louis have not yet been completely dislodged from the corners of Madison Square Garden.

Cleveland has been undergoing a strange sort of boom as a fight town, and Pastor has been one of the reasons. During the past year before big Cleveland crowds, Pastor put the slug on Lem Franklin and Jimmy Bivins, who were supposed to be working their way up to shots at Louis. Pastor licked them both, very convincingly and Cleveland sort of adopted the expatriate New Yorker.

Just before slapping down Franklin and Bivins, Pastor walked into Chicago one night and knocked out Booker Beckwith, another Negro lad who was being hailed as a second Louis. Pastor now has mopped up the Midwest, hasn't lost a fight in about 18 months, and he's the only important heavyweight that Louis hasn't knocked out lately.

Pastor has been in there twice before with Louis, but apparently Louis doesn't win permanent possession of him until he licks him for the third time and retires Pastor as a championship trophy. Their first fight, in New York, was a notable one, because Pastor was the first man to remain upright against Louis in a long spell. He lasted the full ten rounds by shoving himself into reverse and keeping out of harm's way. It wasn't much of a fight, but it interrupted Louis' string of knockouts.

A couple of years later after Louis had denuded the heavyweight division of all other challengers, he took on Pastor again, in an attempt to wipe out the stigma of his failure to stop Pastor the first time. This time they were matched in Detroit and Louis knocked him out in 11 rounds but, paradoxically Pastor won more acclaim in his knockout defeat than he did when he stayed the ten rounds with Louis in the Garden.

In that Detroit bout, as we remember it, the customers were about to call it an evening in the second round when Louis smashed Pastor to the floor a couple of times. But Pastor got up, staggered through a couple of more knockdowns, and then put up a whale of a battle. It ended in the eleventh, but Pastor had given the customers a nice money's worth, and had showed, this time, a positive zest for slugging it out with Louis.

In fact, after that second Pastor fight, Louis, a nice guy, always had something nice to say about everybody he licked, but he often repeated his expression of respect for Pastor. Whenever interviewers asked Louis about the tough men he had fought, he would always mention Pastor's name. "That Pastor tough fighter," Louis would say, "He not bad fighter. He made me work harder than any other fighter. He tough."

It was never any attempt by Louis to build up another Pastor fight for himself. A third Pastor match seemed too remote. Besides, there were guys like Tony Galento, Lou Nova, Buddy Baer and Billy Conn around to occupy Louis. What he said about Pastor was gratuitous and sincere. When they step into the ring next month, probably in Cleveland, one guy who won't be underrating Pastor, is the fellow who'll be fighting him.

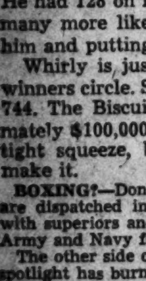
What Interests You?

New York, May 14.

RACING?—Ben Jones told us the other day that Whirlaway is certain to run the remainder of the year, but if the long-tailed beauty breaks Seabiscuit's record by the end of the year he'll go into stud. If he's still short of the Biscuit's mark of $437,730, he'll probably run enough next year to top it.



CONSIDINE

Whirly is eligible for every big race of 1942, involving horses of his age. From now on it will be a battle between Calumet and the handicappers. That was a superb bit of handicapping at Pimlico when Whirly, with top weight, got home just in front of Attention, Mioland and Challedon. But, inevitably, the weight will be put on him. They gave him 130 pounds in the Saranac Handicap and Travers Stakes at Saratoga last year. He had 128 on him for the Dixie last week. And if he turns in many more like that one, they'll be taking Eddie Arcaro off him and putting on Jockey Smith . . . yeah, Kate.

Whirly is just $5,000 short of second place in the all-time winners circle. Sun Beau holds that runner-up spot, with $376,744. The Biscuit is $66,000 beyond him. Whirly has approximately $100,000 in purses to shoot at this season. It will be a tight squeeze, but barring crushing imposts, we think he'll make it.

BOXING?—Don't be surprised if two or three boxers now in uniform are dispatched into combat service. They have been having trouble with superiors and have been demanding a few too many favors. The Army and Navy feel that it's time for them to stop taking bows.

The other side of the story, as usual, is the case of Private Louis. The spotlight has burned more brightly on him since he went into uniform than when his lone profession was heavyweight champion of the world. He has handled himself well in a field that is wholly strange to him—that of public speaker and morale helper. While at Fort Dix he was often pressed into service as a pacifier, by officers and non-coms who were having trouble with a recalcitrant or rule-breaking rookie. Joe would talk to the boy in his humble way . . . about baseball, camp-life and boxing . . . and almost without fail the rookie became a better soldier.

The secret of Louis' success in the Army is that he never asks for anything; never expects a favor. He's just a buck private and proud of it. He has done such a wonderful job that we're beginning to understand why Col. H. Clay Supplee kept mumbling happily, "We've got Joe Louis. We've got Joe Louis," the day Joe walked in an paraphrased Hank Gowdy's immortal, "how do you go about joining this man's Army?"

BASEBALL?—Red Ruffing's long-held title—best hitting pitcher—seems to be about to go by the boards. Jim Tobin of the Braves hit three home runs Wednesday, after belting one as a pinch-hitter the day before. He's the first pitcher ever to hit three in one game, and he thus joins a tight little clique of sluggers which does not include, for instance, Ducky Medwick, Arky Vaughan or Ted Williams. Only four men have ever hit four in one game—Bob Lowe (1894), Ed Delehanty (1898), Lou Gehrig (1932) and Chuck Klein (1936). Gehrig's four came on successive turns at bat.

Wes Ferrell holds the home run records for pitchers with nine, though Babe Ruth hit 11 in 1918 when he was a pitcher-pinch hitter-outfielder. Tobin looks like a cinch to beat both marks with his five to date. Certainly he'll top the National League mark for six—held by Hal Schumacher.

GOLF?—Something we forgot to mention in a recent boost for the work that golfers are doing for war charities: The pros often pay their full expenses to such matches. This means in addition that they give up what amounts to their wages that day, or those days, because they are away from their club and can give no lessons.

Leonard Buys Griff Dinner Ducat

Emil (Dutch) Leonard, the Washington Club's veteran pitcher, hobbled down a flight of stairs on crutches and into Navy Relief Headquarters at 1721 I Street Northwest, yesterday afternoon to proudly claim two tickets for the Clark C. Griffith testimonial luncheon to be sponsored jointly by the local Army Emergency and Navy Relief Societies at the Mayflower Hotel on Wednesday afternoon at 12:30 o'clock.

Leonard, the Nationals' knuckleball ace, who fractured his left leg while sliding into first base during a recent game at Griffith Stadium, had just returned from a visit to Doctors Hospital, from which he was released last Saturday.

"I'll never have another friend like Mr. Griffith," Leonard said as he purchased his tickets, "and that goes for lots of other ball players. I've had my salary arguments with the boss, but he's the fairest, squarest man I've ever known."

Tickets for the Clark C. Griffith testimonial luncheon are on sale at Navy Relief Headquarters, 1721 I Street Northwest, and reservations may be made through Campaign Director Fred G. Spaulding of the Washington (D. C.) Citizens Committee for Navy Relief at EXecutive 0040.

Navy to Allow Fans At Home Grid Play

Special Arrangements Made for Georgia Tech, William and Mary and Virginia Games

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., May 14.—Sport fans, prohibited from witnessing Navy's mid-winter and spring sports because of a war-time regulation barring the general public from the Naval Academy, will be permitted to witness the Middies' three home football games this fall.

Commander L. S. Perry, Academy graduate manager of athletics, said today special arrangements have been made so that civilians can see Navy play William and Mary September 26, Virginia October 3 and Georgia Tech October 24 here in Thompson Stadium.

Civilians will enter the academy gate adjacent to the stadium and will go directly to the stadium, Commander Perry said. They will be required to leave via the same gate immediately after the contests, he added.

Baltimore authorities recently offered Academy authorities the use of the Baltimore Municipal Stadium for all of Navy's home games, but Academy officials pointed out it would be a problem to transport the midshipman regiment to Baltimore for each game.

Commander Perry said, however, the Navy-Columbia game, November 14, and the Navy-Yale contest, October 17, both would be held in the Baltimore Stadium. Originally, the Columbia tilt had been scheduled here.

The athletic official also announced that the Navy-Notre Dame game, October 31, probably would be held at Cleveland, Ohio, instead of South Bend, Ind. He explained that Notre Dame, host to Navy this fall, had too many games already scheduled for South Bend.

The other Middie contests are Princeton, at Princeton, N. J., October 10; Pennsylvania, at Philadelphia, November 7, and Army, at Philadelphia, November 28.

Angott, Stolz Meet in Title Scrap Tonight

By the United Press

New York, May 14.—Sammy Angott, the windmill walloper from Washington, Pa., makes his first and possibly last defense of the lightweight crown tomorrow night when he tangles with speedy Allie Stolz at Madison Square Garden.

Angott is favored at 11-5 to retain the title he won from Stolz' stablemate, Lew Jenkins, in December. If Slamin' Sammy turns the trick he plans to put his 135-pound diadem on the shelf and campaign for the welterweight championship.

Thus tomorrow night's brawl is ultra-important to the busy Pennsylvania Italian because he is tentatively matched for an over-the-weight scrap with welterweight Ray Robinson at the Garden, June 11 or 18, as a gangplank to a title shot with Freddie Cochrane, the 147-pound king.

Angott is favored over young Stolz, of Newark, N. J., because of his ruggedness, stamina, experience and unorthodox style. The bull-shouldered champion's unusual combination of a blistering pace and wrestling tactics is expected to wear down the somewhat fragile Allie, attempting the 15-round route for the first time.

However, brown-haired, trim-built Stolz has considerable backing because of his youth, speed, boxing skill and punch. Allie, whose avocation is cartooning, is only 23—4 years younger than the champion. He is a sharp, accurate puncher who will try for a kayo within eight rounds—although no one ever stopped Angott during his career of more than 100 professional battles.

Promoter Mike Jacobs expects a crowd of more than 15,000 and a gate of about $50,000.

Nats Sell Galle To Toledo; Price Not Revealed

Special Dispatch to The Post

Cleveland, Ohio, May 14.—The sale of Third Baseman Stan Galle to the Toledo club of the American Association was announced tonight by the Nats, an admission that another infield experiment had failed.

Galle, 5-foot-5-inch infielder, was bought from Milwaukee last fall at the $7500 draft price but the sum received for him from Toledo was not disclosed.

"We probably took a bit of a loss on Galle," said one official of the Washington club, indicating that the Nats did not regain their $7500 investment in the player.

Galle's departure brings the Washington roster to the required 25-player limit which goes into effect on May 25.

The little third baseman had been used chiefly as a pinch hitter by the Nats this season after failing to impress Manager Bucky Harris with his fielding ability in the South. He started only one game at third base.

Giants Score 10 in Eighth To Sink Reds

By the Associated Press

New York, May 14.—The New York Giants gave the Cincinnati Reds a dose of their own medicine today as they battered across ten runs in the eighth inning—more than enough to give Mel Ott's men a 12-to-6 decision.

The Reds scored 12 runs in one inning against the Giants on the New Yorkers' recent Western tour. Today the Reds were sailing along with a 6-to-2 lead, built up in the first three innings on the strength of home runs by Linus Frey and Ray Lamanno.

Then came the explosion. Babe Young, batting for Harry Feldman, who had checked the Reds since Fiddler McGee had left the game in the fourth for a pinch hitter, led off with a double. With one out Billy Jurges walked and Ott parked his third homer of the year in the right-field stands.

Two more hits sent Joe Beggs, who had replaced Elmer Riddle in the fifth, to the showers in favor of Bucky Walters. But Bucky could not get anybody out and Clyde Shoun came in to finally squelch the attack after being hampered hard himself. Young's bat also spoke loud the second time he came up as the sub first baseman connected with a triple. The other big wallop was Harry Danning's double off Walters which drove in the tying and winning runs.

Harris Begs Griffith For New Infield Talent

Vernon at First Only Major Leaguer; Repass Goes to 3d; 'Esty' Replaces Campbell

By Shirley Povich

A Staff Correspondent

Cleveland, May 14.—Bucky Harris is only one-fourth satisfied with his Washington infield and is petitioning Owner Clark Griffith to buy him some talent, quick. The alternative, Harris points out, is a hopeless second-division club.

The dissatisfaction of the Nats' manager embraces the three infield positions Micky Vernon doesn't hold down with the Nats. Vernon takes care of his first base job adequately enough, but at second base, shortstop and third, the Nats are sadly deficient.

At second base, little Jose Gomez fields rather competently, but can't hit. Jimmy Pofahl at shortstop does moderately well defensively, but like Gomez, doesn't hit. At third base, Bobby Estalella, hits but can't field. Summed up, it isn't much of an infield.

"We could have used Babe Dahlgren," said Harris referring to the trade of yesterday which sent Dahlgren from the Cubs to the Browns. "I'd have played him at third base. But he went out of the National League on waivers and the Browns had first shot at him because they were lower in the league's standings.

"Judge Landis has given the clubs until May 25 to get down to the 25-player limit, and when time starts to run out, maybe somebody will have to unload some infielders. I won't be too particular, if we get a chance to make a trade."

As a temporary measure Harris has announced one change in his infield makeup. Bob Repass, a dismal failure at shortstop, will be moved to third gase. Bobby Esta-

Chisox Beat Athletics, 9-4, For 3d in Row

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 14.—Led by Outfielder Myril Hoag, who drove in four runs with three singles, the cellar Chicago White Sox went on a spree today and ended the Philadelphia Athletics' five-game victory string, 9 to 4. It was the third straight victory for the Chicagoans, who until yesterday hadn't won more than one game in a row.

The Sox pounded an old mate, Jack Knott, for seven of their nine hits to take advantage of four Philadelphia errors and eight passes. They topped it off with a perfect squeeze play when Bob Kennedy crowded the plate from third in the seventh just as Pitcher Bill Dietrich bunted.

It was Dietrich's third victory against as many defeats. He shut out the A's on two hits for six innings and then was touched for all four runs on five blows in the seventh.

Cece Travis Joins Dean's All-Stars For Exhibition

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 14.—Cecil Travis, Washington's great infielder, and Zeke Bonura, colorful former major leaguer, have accepted invitations to play with the Dizzy Dean All-Stars against Satchel Paige and the Kansas City Monarchs at Wrigley Field May 24.

Ken Sylvestri, a member of the New York Yankees last year, has agreed to catch Dean's offerings in his exhibition duel with Paige.

Travis is at Camp Wheeler, Ga.; Bonura at Camp Shelby, Miss., and Sylvestri at Camp Custer, Mich. All have arranged for necessary furloughs.

Brooklyn's Lead Moved To 3½ Games

Both Opening Hurlers Sent to Showers; Wasdell and Phelps Hit for Pittsburgh

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, May 14.—The Brooklyn Dodgers and Pittsburgh Pirates, the two leaders of the National League, collided violently today in the first instalment of their important three-game series and the Dodgers hammered their way to a 7 to 4 triumph.

This increased the 1941 champions' first place margin to 3½ games and averted any possibility of the Pirates wresting the league leadership from Brooklyn during the series.

Eight of the game's 11 runs were packed into the first three innings as both Kirby Higbe of the Dodgers and Lefty Aldon Wilkie of the Buccaneers were driven to shelter to the accompaniment of cheers and hoots from the big weekday crowd of 17,251 paying customers.

Higbe Errors

The Pirates raided Higbe for a run in the first inning on successive doubles by two Brooklyn "outcasts," Jim Wasdell and Babe Phelps, and they finished "Higlebie" with two more tallies in the third. John Barrett beat out an infield hit and when Wasdell grounded out, Dolph Camilli to Higbe, Barrett raced all the way home as Higbe overthrew third base trying for a double play. Phelps followed with his third homer of the year and Bob Elliott collected his fourth round tripper of the season off Hugh Casey in the ninth.

The Dodgers made an even more thunderous start with three runs in the first inning when Arky Vaughan doubled, John Rizzo walked and Joe Medwick sent his second homer of the season crashing into the left field stands.

Reiser Hits Single

In the third, Bill Herman singled, Arky Vaughan doubled and Pete Reiser brought them both home with a single, to rout Wilkie with none out. After Lloyd Dietz went to the mound the Dodgers loaded the bases and were kept from scoring only by Barrett's spectacular catch of Pee Wee Reese's 350-foot fly.

Brooklyn collected its final two runs in the eighth off Ken Jungels on a walk, a double by Reese and a single by Herman.

Larry French, who received Higbe in the third, received credit for the victory, his third without a defeat this season, but he had to leave the game in the sixth because of a charley horse. During his 3 1-3 innings French allowed no hits and fanned five.

Georgetown Nine Collects 17 Hits to Trounce Loyola, 13-4

Ben Bulvin Stars at Bat, Gets 5 Hits

Sophomore Murphy Limits Baltimoreans To 8 Singles, Strikes Out 7 Batsmen

One of its heaviest barrages of the season, netting a total of 17 hits, accounted for Georgetown University's 13-4 triumph over Loyola nine of Baltimore yesterday at the Hilltop diamond.

Paced by Benny Bulvin, converted gridman who smashed safeties in each of his five official times at the plate, the Hoyas scored in every other inning to win as they pleased. They overcame a 2-0 Loyola lead in the last half of the first inning with a 4-run splurge of their own, then added two tallies in the third, three in the fifth and four more in the seventh.

Danny Murphy, junior southpaw, meanwhile limited the invaders to eight singles and struck out seven. To his own cause he contributed a double and two singles in four times at the plate.

Pitcher Fick, despite the fact he was banged for 16 of Georgetown's blows, stayed in until the ninth inning when Kane relieved him. The duo's biggest help was Bill Schoeberlein, second baseman, who slugged four hits in five trips.

The triumph brought Georgetown's record for the season to eight won and two lost. Next outing for the team will be at home Saturday against Catholic U.

Plummer Wins Over Lewis In Mat Match

By Oscar Elder

Apprentice Seaman Louis Francis Plummer, U. S. Coast Guard, scored a direct hit and sunk a hulk last night when he disposed of Ed "Strangler" Lewis, former world's champ, in the feature wrestling match at Riverside Stadium. It required the sailor just 11 minutes and a punishing leglock to scuttle Lewis.

Plummer, who enlisted in the Coast Guard two weeks ago, donated his purse to that organization's welfare fund, and stated that he would continue to do this while he was in the service.

Lewis, weighing a mere 285, came out remarkably fast for a big man and immediately tried his famous headlock. Plummer ducked the first few attempts without even mussing his G. I. haircut, and retaliated with some choice slugs to the teeth.

Presently he caught Plummer with a headlock and followed with three more in rapid succession. Coming out of the fourth one, Plummer grabbed a sturdy leg which happened to belong to Lewis and upset the big fellow with a tremendous thud. Then he jumped aboard with his leglock and the show was over.

Maurice La Chappelle and Ace Freeman retained their two-man team championship of the Potomac River area when they took two out of three falls from a combine of Coast Guardsman Dick Lever and one Rudy La Ditzi. This was a hilarious affair, what with the customers brandishing shoes, chairs, etc., at the villainous losers.

La Ditzi scored the first fall for his team when he pinned Ace Freeman with a body press after a rough 13 minutes. He lost the second fall when he committed the faux pas of batting Referee Curly Brown in the puss, getting disqualified therewith.

The penalty irked La Ditzi no end, whereupon he forgot the intermission period between falls and began poking at all within range.

Tommy O'Toole came from behind to best Lee Henning with a series of flying tackles and a body press in 26½ minutes, and Max Krauser defeated Jim Austeri with an airplane spin and press after 17 minutes of the opener.

Savold Slated to Drill Today at K. of C. Gym

Lee Savold, 26-year-old Des Moines, Iowa heavyweight, will be the first principal of the Navy Relief boxing show to open local training when he holds a workout this afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Knights of Columbus gym, 900 block Tenth Street Northwest. The Navy card is scheduled next Thursday night at Griffith Stadium.

Lou Nova, who meets Savold in the ten-round main event, will arrive tomorrow and work at Uline Arena at 2 p. m. It is believed that Georgie Abrams, Frank Poreda and Sammy Magro, the Navy fighters on the card, will also arrive tomorrow.

Savold, winner of 17 straight fights, 15 by knockouts, will be no stranger to District boxing fans. It was his fine exhibition against Claudio Villar on the Eddie Blunt-Bill Poland card which saved that ill-fated show from being a complete washout.

In that fight Savold, rocked with Villar's Sunday punches, came back to score a T. K. O. victory in the fourth round. That fight was called one of the most sensational scraps ever seen here. Since then Savold beat Neville Beech here.

In the last 2½ years, the Des Moines fighter has lost only three times, twice to Harry Bobo and once to Billy Conn, a 12-round decision. Although Lee is but 26 years old, he has been campaigning for 10 years. A managerial mixup forced him to retire from the ring in 1937, but since then Savold has been a busy fighter.

Last year saw Savold lick some fair heavyweights including Lou Brooks and Solly Krieger. He also knocked out Buddy Knox in two heats and tough Teddy Wint in nine.

Savold is managed now by Hymie Wiseman and Billy Daly, the latter is also the pilot of Wild Bill McDowell and Heavyweight Pat Comiskey.

Tuesday Night Set As Deadline for Fund

The service man's ticket fund has shown a nice increase the past two days and indications point to a good turnout of soldiers, sailors and marines at the Navy Relief fight next Thursday at the ball park.

The fund, started by a $200 donation, is purchasing tickets to be distributed at nearby camps. The campaign will be closed Tuesday night and the final block of seats will be bought the next day and alloted to service men.

If any reader desires to help, early contributions will be appreciated. Send them to The Post boxing writer, in care of the sports department. Here's a chance to enable a service man to see the Navy fight show.

Last night's donation of $10 from Lightweight Billy Banks and his trainer Billy Edwards swelled the fund to $314. Banks is scheduled to fight on the Navy card with his opponent to be announced later.

Browns Beat Red Sox, 6-3, For Niggeling

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, May 14.—The up-and-down St. Louis Browns pulled out of a tailspin today to defeat the fourth-place Boston Red Sox, 6 to 3, behind the six-hit pitching of Johnny Niggeling.

Three of the six blows off the veteran knuckle-baller were by Bobby Doerr, the leading hitter in the American League, and accounted for two of the Boston runs.

The Browns, who had lost four out of their last five games to the lowly Chicago White Sox and the Athletics, popped right out with two runs in the first inning and drove Herber Newsome, the starting Sox hurler, to the showers before any were out in the third. He was replaced by Mace Brown, who yielded only two hits before going out for a pinch batter in the sixth. Dominic Ryba gave up three hits and one run in the last three frames.

Home runs by Roy Cullenbine, his first of the season with one on in the first inning, and Chet Laabs, gave the Brownies their margin of victory. It was Laabs' fourth circuit blow of the year, coming on the first pitch off Ryba in the sixth.

Rick Ferrell got three of the Brownie hits but failed to register in the scoring or runs-batted-in columns.

The Browns lost a chance for another score in the third when Glenn McQuillen was called out for failing to touch second base. With McQuillen on first, Laabs hit to the shortstop, John Pesky, who threw wild to second trying to force McQuillen who continued to third. But Pesky called for the ball, touched second, and Umpire Cal Hubbard ruled the runner out.

National Trainers Whip Blair, 16-10

National Training School outslugged the baseball forces of Montgomery Blair High yesterday to register a 16-10 victory on the Bladensburg Road field. It was the winners' sixth triumph in 13 games.

Jim Bottomley went the distance for N.T.S., was touched for 13 hits but tightened up sufficiently in the pinches. The losers registered seven of their runs in the last four innings after Bottomley's mates had spotted him a 10-3 margin.

C. U. Trackmen Score Over La Salle Team

Coach Dorsey Griffith's Catholic University track team added an unbeaten dual meet season to its Mason Dixon Conference championship yesterday by defeating LaSalle College of Philadelphia, 69 to 57, in the final meet of the season in the Brookland Stadium.

Cleve Stauffer, a senior trackman making his final appearance on the Cardinal team, made his last leap a good one by winning the broad jump with a new meet record leap of 21 feet 7¼ inches.

John Weschler was high scorer for the Cardinals, winning the 440 and discus and finishing second to John Pierce, also a two-time winner, in the 100-yard dash, Pierce winning by less than a foot.

LaSalle produced the day's high scorer in Hunt who posted an individual 16 point total with two firsts and two seconds.

A high wind hampered the runners and made good times in the running events out of the question.

C. U. lost only one meet, a three-way affair to Navy and Villanova when it stepped out of its class.

Hess' Single Wins, 4 to 3, For Cameo

A single by Lambert Hess with the bases loaded in the ninth inning gave Cameo Furniture diamonders a 4-3 decision over the Heurich Brewers yesterday in The Washington Post-Industrial League.

Until Hess' winning hit the game, involving last year's arch rivals in the circuit, rocked along evenly. Heurich, the defending champion, grabbed a 2-0 lead in the first five innings, but saw the count deadlocked in the seventh.

In the eighth Gregerich spotted the Brewers another lead with a home run, but Cameo came right back with the same trick, Stadtler hitting for four bases.

Each team collected 10 hits, as Ed Colliflower worked for the Beerman and Earl Jennings for Cameo.

Tech Nine Engages Central High Today

Eastern Plays Roosevelt, Anacostia Invades Coolidge in Other Interhigh Skirmishes

Barring a sudden decision to put off play until some other time, three games will be played in the public high school baseball series today, the headliner sending Tech against Central at Mount Pleasant. Starting time will be 4 p. m., the same time as Eastern will invade Roosevelt and Anacostia will invade Coolidge.

Going into the big game, Tech has proved itself one of two real "surprise" teams in the series. The other is Woodrow Wilson. Latest effort of the Tech forces was an extra-inning triumph over Western, the supposedly invincible defending champion and leader.

The favorite will probably be Central, but by no large margin. The foes are deadlocked in third place in the standings and any result can hardly be astonishing.

Sam West, who hurled the Trainers to their triumph over Western, may get the starting assignment again today. He will be opposed by either Aaron Weisenberg, who was knocked out of the box by Wilson Monday, or Harry Wolfe, who did an excellent relief job in the same game.

Of the four other clubs involved in today's interhigh action, only Roosevelt appears to have even a vague chance for one of the two championship playoff berths available. It will send Billy Garner against Eastern's ineffective mound corps with little worry.

TODAY'S SCHEDULE
Tech at Central, 4 p. m.
Eastern at Roosevelt, 4 p. m.
Anacostia at Coolidge, 4 p. m.
Wash.-Lee at Bethesda, 3:30 p. m.
Gonzaga at Devitt, 3:30 p. m.

Last Midget Races Tonight At Lanham

Motorized activity will fade out for the duration of the gasoline rationing period at the West Lanham (Md.) Speedway tonight at 8:30 o'clock when an all-star seven event midget automobile racing program featuring a 25-lap "V-For-Victory Derby" is offered by Co-Promoters S. F. (Red) Crise and Jack Kochman at 8:30 o'clock.

For the second consecutive week Racing Director Tom Lane, through special arrangement, is bringing back the ranking No. 1 and 2 drivers of the United States in George Fonder and Charley Miller respectively. Fonder was the 1941 national midget champion and Miller one of the big money winners of last year, and the 1940 titlist.

Shorty McAndrews, the fiery, little Philadelphian who captured last week's 25-lap feature and one of the semifinals, also will be a strong bidder for top honors, and will be pushed by his 5-foot, 126-pound rival, mighty midget Johnny Ritter. McAndrews and Ritter smashed through to one of the greatest finishes ever seen at Lanham in one of the qualifying preliminaries last week.

Two dark horses capable of upsetting the field are Jim Forte of Philadelphia and Johnny Pierson, the baby-faced pilot from Long Island. Pierson has been a big winner on other tracks all season, while Forte grabbed off two of the events at West Lanham last Friday.

Jeep Colkitt, Johnny Jars, Roscoe Hough, Charley Brealin, Elmer Sefcik, Ralph Sheeler and Hawley Kight are other big-name drivers who will be included in the "V-for-Victory" field.

"We are all determined to give the fans such a grand run for their money that they will all be back when we reopen after the gasoline rationing," Lane said last night. "I'm convinced that last week's card was the greatest midget automobile racing program ever offered fans of this area, but we will top that one tomorrow."

Advance sale is in progress at the Rite-Way Auto Top Co., 607-09 K Street Northwest, and reservations may be made until 5 p. m. today through Metropolitan 6070.

Harris Petitions For Infielders

lella will replace Bruce Campbell in the outfield. Harris wants to keep Estalella's bat in the line-up, and with Campbell in a horrible hitting slump, he is risking nothing.

Early Wynn, who was to have faced the Indians today, will be held over for tomorrow's engagement. The Indians, trying to take advantage of the Nat's top-heavy line-up of left-handed hitters, will pitch Southpaw Al Smith tomorrow.

After postponement of the game, Buck Newsom entertained the Nats in the dressing room with a half-hour monologue that was a side-splitting take-off on Manager Del Baker's pep meetings when Newsom was with the Tigers. Bruce Campbell, who was a teammate of Newsom at Detroit, declared that Buck's mimicry of Baker was perfect . . . Newsom will do a recording of it, he says, and mail the record to Baker, whom he doesn't like . . . Stan Spence is maintaining his batting average over .400, but he isn't swinging with the same vigor, on account of a lame back, and thus the absence of extra base hits. The Nats have played only two days in the last eight, but have managed to pick up a three-game losing streak which cost them fifth place.

Landon Rallies In 6th to Beat G. U. Prep, 10-9

A thrilling finish yesterday gave Landon School nine its second victory of the year over Georgetown Prep, 10 to 9, in a seven-inning encounter at Garrett Park.

Jack Beatty, first baseman, proved the hero when he came to bat in the sixth inning with his Landon mates trailing, 9 to 7, and two runners on base. His home run deep to center gave the invaders a margin they never lost.

Beatty's circuit blow was his third straight hit of the game. His slugging title was threatened by Ed Miller, of Prep, who collected a four-run homer and a triple, and the loser's Crowley, who had a homer and a single in three trips.

Sager started on the mound for Landon, but ran into difficulties in each of the first two innings and was relieved by Cady. The latter hurled three-hit ball for the last five innings, while his mates were collecting ten safeties off Prep's Ferry.

Bill Lee Wins Fifth of Season For Chicago

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, May 14.—Bill Lee racked up his fifth victory in six tries by pitching the Chicago Cubs to a 5-to-3 run triumph over the Phils today. Lee held the Quakers to seven hits, five of them in the last three innings.

Nicking Frank Melton for a run in the opening stanza, Chicago went out in front by scoring three runs and driving Melto out of the box in the fourth by dint of outwaiting him and drawing free tickets to first. An error and a balk also helped the Cubs in this inning.

The Phils rallied for two runs in the sixth and another in the eighth, but Bill Nicholson's single to right, scoring Len Merullo, clinched the decision for the Bruins in the ninth.

Initial War Relief Golf Day Is May 24

The first of the District Golf Association's War Relief Days falls on Sunday, May 24, when every golfer who leaves the first tee of a member club will be asked to contribute 25 cents to a war relief fund. It will be the only contribution of the year asked by the association.

It is planned to make the fourth Sunday of each month from May to September, inclusive, a war relief day and all money taken in will be divided between Army and Navy Relief Societies, with no commissions or expenses deducted.

Only Mouth of Chesapeake Bay Is Restricted to Fishermen

James River Not Barred To Anglers

Boats Not Allowed Within 300 Yards Of Shipyards, Other Defense Projects

By the Associated Press

Norfolk, Va., May 14.—Capt. R. R. Hall, of the Coast Guard, issued a statement as captain of the port today announcing there were no restrictions on fishing in Chesapeake Bay north of a line from Fort Monroe to Cape Charles lighthouse on Smith Island.

The statement, clarifying wartime restrictions on fishing and bathing in the First Naval District, defined as forbidden area the waters south of the Fort Monroe-Smith Island line and east of a line from Fort Monroe to Willoughby spit. Fishing also is forbidden in Willoughby Bay.

Captain Hall said there were no restrictions on fishing in the James River and Hampton Roads, except no boat would be permitted to fish within 300 yards of a shipyard, marine terminal, oil terminal or other defense project. No pleasure boats will be permitted within one-half mile of any naval vessel, ammunition storing dump or vessel loading or discharging ammunition.

"Surf casting," he said, "will be permitted at present along the shore line within the Fifth Naval District, except in the above restricted area, subject to such local restrictions as may be invoked by the Army and Navy."

Those desiring to surf cast, however, must apply to the captain of the port for permission and state the location, the time and the number in the party.

Likewise, off-shore fishing by party boats or private individuals will be permitted only by license from the captain of the port. Violators, Captain Hall said, would be subject to severe penalties.

"The captain of the Port of Norfolk," he added, "has no interest in fishing operations in lakes and neither does he have any interest as to where persons may or may not swim in ocean waters."

Naiman Loses To Lunchmen, 7-5

Held to five safeties by Pitcher Sisk, Naiman Photo nine came out on the short end of a 7-5 game with the Ninth and New York Avenue Lunch team yesterday in the Departmental Baseball League.

Outfielder Rados' three-run homer in the final inning for Naiman fell just short of tying the count.

Bill Werber Sent To Hospital by Giants

New York, May 14 (AP).—The New York Giants announced today that Third Baseman Bill Werber had been sent to a hospital last night for treatment of a possible sciatic condition in his right side. Werber, bought from the Cincinnati Reds last winter, has been out of the Giants' line-up since May 7.

Stratton Quits the Bus League Circuit

Monty Stratton, 28-year-old former pitcher with the Chicago White Sox whose major league career was ended when he lost his leg in a hunting accident, has resigned as manager of the Lubbock team in the West Texas-Mexico Class D League. Stratton said he lost 12 pounds since the season started and he was taking a physical beating. His team had won five and lost ten. Stratton was one of the American League's most promising hurlers before the accident in 1938

Mass Cancellation Marks Local College Golf Card

According to the preseason schedules of the District college golf teams, all four schools were booked for action today but as it turns out a succession of events forced the cancellation of all four events and now Georgetown's match with Navy next Saturday is the only remaining college links match.

The Hoyas' schedule lists the Eastern Intercollegiate League playoffs today and tomorrow but Georgetown was eliminated last week and Penn State and Holy Cross will battle for the title at Stamford, Conn.

The Maryland State G. A. Intercollegiates are listed at Bonnie View today and tomorrow but the University of Maryland dropped golf early in March and no other District area schools are eligible.

Catholic University golfers were scheduled for a two-day invasion of Philadelphia to meet St. Joseph's today and tomorrow but due to gas rationing and loss of players C. U. was forced to call the trip off.

George Washington and Western Maryland were booked for a match today at Kenwood but the match will not be played.

The schoolboys have a few scattered matches listed, including four today, but both titles are in the bag, Roosevelt repeating as the public high champion while Bethesda is the newly crowned metropolitan section champion. The Barons beat Georgetown Prep's defending titlists for the cup last Tuesday, winning four of five extra hole matches.

Today's matches are: Blair vs. Devitt at Manor; Central vs. Wilson at Woodmont; Roosevelt vs. Western at Washington and Anacostia vs. Tech at Army and Navy.

The schoolboy individual championship for The Washington Post trophy will be played Friday through Sunday of next weekend, March 22-23-24, gas permitting. About 50 youngsters are expected to turn up for the qualifying rounds Friday at Manor with first and second round matches in the championship flight of 16 scheduled at Kenwood on Saturday with semi-finals and finals at Congressional Sunday. Alton Willett, of Bethesda, is defending champion.

Twilight Game Pits Clowns, House of David

Probably the oddest game of baseball Washington fans will see this season will take place at Griffith Stadium this evening when a team bearing the banner of the "original" House of David tangles with the Ethiopian Clowns, an aggregation of colored stars, in a twilight game at 6:30 p. m.

The oddity of the meeting will not be in the type of ball played, but in the antics and appearance of the opponents. The Clowns, Cincinnati's representative in the Negro Major League, are just what their name implies despite the strength of their club.

With their long beards, their shadow ball and pepper game acts, the House of David players have made a name for themselves in appearances all over the country.

Billy Conn Transferred To Fort Jay Hospital

New York, May 14 (AP).—Private Billy Conn, who broke his left hand and suffered other injuries in a fight with his father-in-law at Pittsburgh Sunday, has been transferred from Fort Wadsworth on Staten Island to the Fort Jay hospital on Governors Island.

"I don't know how long he will be here," said Maj. Joseph Quittmer, Fort Jay publicity officer.

Fishing with JACK BELL

Where can we find fishing nearby? That is the question uppermost in every angler's mind at this time. Something must be done for these thousands of anglers, for without their fishing / their recreation is gone, and that they should be encouraged will be admitted by every-one who gives the matter a moment's reflection.

JACK BELL

Why not try for white shad? They have finally reached the pools below Little Falls, which is within walking distance of Washington. A number of anglers who love their trout fishing have already found this—sport fishing—beyond their expectations.

This sport is the nearest approach to salmon fishing to be found outside of the few salmon rivers in Maine. Besides these white "taylor" shad, there are hordes of hickory shad that take the artificial lure as well. However, they don't put up the fight that the larger fish do. And if you don't care for these fish for the table, the roe is excellent, and you won't have any trouble of disposing of the fish to anglers within calling distance. Also, there are times when a good run of stripers show up, and they take the same lure.

This fishing, however, cannot last very long—only as long as the run of spawning fish remain in these waters. All of which means that it won't be long before elbow room will be in demand to take advantage of the "free fishing" below Little Falls.

The greater number of fishermen who frequent these waters are the anglers who fish for such coarse fish as channel catfish and carp, some snagging herring.

With conditions as they are, brought about by the restricted use of gasoline, there is bound to be a substantial reduction in the number of fishermen making up-State trout and bass or bay fishing jaunts. It is now only a matter of time when we all shall have to seek and find our fishing near home.

Of special interest to the salt-water fisherman and the occasional bay angler is the announcement by the W., M. & A. Motor Lines that beginning Saturday, May 16, there will be regular scheduled "fishermen's special" bus service between Washington and Seaside Park, Chesapeake Beach and North Beach. Coaches will leave from the terminal at 403 Eleventh Street Northwest, Saturday at 1:30 and 5:15 p. m., returning that night, leaving Seaside Park at 10 o'clock.

Also Sunday morning buses will leave at 8:10 and 12, returning leaving the beach at 6, 8 and 10 p. m. For further information, phone W., M. & A. Motor Lines, FRanklin 3300.

In spite of the difficulties involved in going fishing this year, it is hardly necessary for us to review in detail the tremendous importance this service is to Washington fishermen at this time.

Chesapeake Beach-North Beach is making a bid for a place on the fishing map as a "fishermen's paradise." The "twin beaches" for many years have enjoyed a fine reputation as a bay fishing resort, but interest in the quaint little beach towns has been greatly increased by the new, modern and capacious yacht basin.

The rocks surrounding the new jetties forming the new harbor are expected to make excellent spots for the striped bass to "hang out." Chesapeake-North Beaches boast of one of the largest fishing fleets along the western shore of the bay. They fish such well-known spots as Herring Bay, Bloody Point Bar, Eastern Bay, Choptank, Sharps Island and, of course, the famous "Gooses."

Anglers who like to take their families along on beach picnics or bay fishing trips are attracted to the twin beaches, since it includes a large recreation park, where he can park his family to enjoy themselves while he gets in a little fishing. Seaside Park also has one of the few salt-water bathing pools in the East, available for those who do not care for bay bathing.

1295 Golfers Now Entered in Hale America

By the Associated Press

New York, May 13.—The United States Golf Association today received 502 entries, boosting to 1295 the total number of players who will participate in the first qualifying round of the Hale America tournament.

"It's the biggest one day entry list in my recollection," said Joe Dey, secretary of the United States Golf Association. "It's also the second largest entry list in the history of any Open gold competition and with the books not closing until Friday noon we should pass the record of 1402 established for the Open championships in 1937.

Entries received today included Corp. Victor Ghezzi, P. G. A. champion; Ralph Guldahl and Harold McSpaden, all of whom are exempted from qualifying; George Sargent of Atlanta, 1909 Open champion; Billy Burke of Cleveland, 1931 Open titleholder, and Sam Parks, jr., winner of the 1935 Open crown. Of the 22 exempted players only the names of Bud Ward, 1941 amateur champion now in the Army, and Sam Snead, are missing.

The Hale America tournament, replacing the Open championships and designed to raise funds for various war relief organizations, calls for 81 local 36-hole tournaments May 24, 25 and 26 with the qualifiers entering the 13 district tournaments over 54 holes scheduled from June 5 to 9. The finals will be held at the Ridgemoor Club in Chicago June 18-21.

Host Is Only Team Entered In Cumberland Valley Track

Schools Apparently Forget to File Entry Lists With Winchester High

Winchester, Va., May 14.—On the enforcement of a new league rule requiring schools in the Cumberland Valley Athletic League to file a list of men eligible to participate in the annual league track meet will depend whether Handley High School of Winchester is declared winner by default.

The ruling required eligibility lists to be filed on the Monday prior to the meet. It was made at the meeting of the C. V. A. L. last year.

Coach Snag Sargent of Handley, where the meet is to be held said today he has received no entries but is going ahead with preparations as usual.

Teams expected to enter besides Handley are Hagerstown, Md., Martinsburg, W. Va., and Fort Hill and Allegany High Schools, both of Cumberland.

Garland Quarles of this city, league secretary, said the meet, heretofore the highlight of the spring athletic program here, will be held if any of the teams show up.

City Marble Meet Set Tomorrow

Boys and girls from the city's seven major recreational areas, all 15 years old and under, will compete tomorrow in the annual city-wide marble tournament of the District of Columbia Recreation Department at Randall Playgrounds. Starting time will be 11 a. m.

Team, Field; No Foe

Petworth C. A. baseball team has the use of the West Ellipse diamond Sunday and is seeking a worthy foe. Challengers may call Randloph 5026.

Nine Collect Daily Double Payoff of $564 at Charles Town

5000 Fans See Kirk Horse Win

Macie Margaret Pays $71.60; Darting Star Completes Double; High Plaid Scores

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., May 14.—Long-shot players had their innings here this afternoon. From a monetary angle the day's feature was the $564 daily double that went to nine lucky customers in a crowd of 5000. The major portion of the big return was the work of Macie Margaret, owned by T. W. Kirk of Silver Spring, Md., and ridden by his son, Woodrow. The 6-year-old mare brought an individual mutuel of $71.60 and she came from behind to win by a length and a half over Triumvirate, with Black Bass third.

The Flamingo Farm's Darting Star, the first of two winners ridden for that barn by Jockey Al Booson, put the finishing touches on the "double." Darting Star bumped horses at the first turn, ran out at final bend, but withstood a drive to win from Sir Jerome and Bronx II. This winner paid $14.40.

The long-shot parade moved right into the feature race, when J. H. Ladley's High Plaid held on with good courage to win by a neck margin from Mrs. M. R. Waugh's Pops Sister, with Fondenella third in the field of eight. Jockey P. Woodstock rode the winner, which paid $16.60. Pops Sister might have taken it all but for running into a "blind switch" leaving the back stretch.

Scocca Rides Winner

Jockey Danny Scocca of Washington joined those riders who brought home outsiders. Phantom Player, owned by Bowes Bond, was third. Phantom Player paid $11.20, small change compared to most of the winners.

The card opened with a $15 winner. Jockey Sammy Palumbo gave C. L. Bonifay's Lady Tennis a strong ride and the Forty Winks filly got home 2½ lengths in advance of Merciless with Seventeen Guns third. Jockey Bocson won his second race of the day aboard Mr. Jim. The Detroit boy brought this one to the wire 2 lengths ahead of Balkanese and the winner paid $26.60. Third money went to Overbost.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MACIE MARGARET, $71.60, $18.80, $10.60; TRIUMVIRATE, $13.00, $6.40; BLACK BASS, $8.00.

MACIE MARGARET moved up on outside, was steadied to stretch, ducked to inside and came with a bold rush to win going away. TRIUMVIRATE was well placed from start, responded when asked and came willingly. BLACK BASS took command on outside at first turn, drew out and weakened under strong handling in closing test. JACOTTE, slowest to begin, closed ground.

THIRD RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $600; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:27. Off at 3:28. Winner, Flamingo Farm's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DARTING STAR, $14.40, $6.60, $4.00; SIR JEROME, $8.20, $4.80; BRONX II, $7.00.

DARTING STAR bumped horses at first turn, was closest to pace of GLYNLAND, took brief lead, ran out turning for home and rallied gamely to wear down SIR JEROME. The latter saved ground when unable to keep up early, came through on inside entering stretch, took command and barely failed to last. BRONX II bore out at first turn, moved up and closed with good energy. MOST ALERT closed full of run.

Daily Double—MACIE MARGARET and DARTING STAR Paid $564.00.

FOURTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $600; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:55. Off at 3:55. Winner, Flamingo Farm's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MR. JIM, $20.60, $7.40, $5.80; BALKANESE, $8.40, $5.20; OVERBOST, $6.60.

MR. JIM saved ground at first turn, withstood challenges from FRANK BROOKE and OVERBOST and drew out in stretch run. BALKANESE improved position steadily, came to inside entering stretch and hung in final drive. OVERBOST moved up on backstretch and weakened in last sixteenth. FRANK BROOKE had good early speed and stopped. TRUE WARRIOR ran out badly at first turn.

FIFTH RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $600; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:21½. Off at 4:22. Winner, Mrs. J. B. Bond's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PHANTOM PLAYER, $11.20, $4.80, $3.20; MY ONE, $4.00, $3.20; EBONITO, $3.00.

PHANTOM PLAYER, caught in close quarters at first turn, was allowed to race on own courage until clear, improved position gradually on outside and responded when shaken up to dispose of MY ONE in concluding strides. MY ONE took command over IDA TIME leaving backstretch, but could not resist the winner. EBONITO was pinched back approaching backstretch and closed gamely. IDA TIME set pace and weakened.

SIXTH RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $600. The Blue Ridge. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:49. Off at 4:49½. Winner, J. H. Ladley's b. h. Two-dollar mutuels paid—HIGH PLAID, $16.60, $6.20, $4.60; POPS SISTER, $4.60, $3.40; FONDENELLA, $6.00.

HIGH PLAID, well placed on outside from start, responded willingly when shaken up and held on gamely in final strides. POPS SISTER was shut off while improving position on inside, came out for racing room and hung right at end. FONDENELLA set early pace but weakened in closing stages. PEACE DAY closed with good energy.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $600; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:15½. Off at 5:16½. Winner, Mrs. D. Selections at Charles Town

Dear Al: Although she was cut about the legs here on opening day, Rancho's Girl was not injured as badly as was supposed, and she is slated to run in today's fifth race. Jockey J. Martinez came here from Detroit, where he has been working horses, and has applied for a license. He has done a lot of good riding hereabout in the past. Before a serious accident put him out of the saddle for two years the Cuban was contract rider for the Denemark Stable. Mrs. J. Y. Christmas of Marlboro, Md., has shipped five horses here in charge of C. A. Cranford. They are Gov. Sholtz, Rough Man, Baby Bunting, Rough Brigade, Cleaning Time and Chassis. Buck Middleton, ace mutuel clerk, was around to say so long. He went into the Army yesterday. Larry Collyer, timer and identifier for this track, celebrated a birthday yesterday. Walter Haight is No. 1 in the substitute race today. He might do it, too, if the race is used. Jockey Milton Briggs got in from New England. Jockey Eusebis Fort, who made his debut here yesterday, is a Puerto Rico boy who is reported to have ridden 1000 winners in his native country. I said "reported." President Alfred J. Boyle says demands for boxes on Saturday are heavy. Jockey Willie Dufford, the brand new papa, is leading the riders with five winners. Dr. Walter Mitchell drove in to take part in the day's sport. He was the envy of the press box. Living in Ohio, he doesn't have to worry about the gas situation. He left last night with a full tank—I mean gas tank. If you wonder what a chart caller does on his day off, Phil McCann of Racing Form traveled 85 miles from Baltimore to see the horses run. Jimmy Riser is in charge of the sports program on Station WJEJ in Hagerstown, so I guess we will be seeing a lot of him when the bangtails move into Hub City. See you on the rail. BILL.

First race—REAL BOY was in the thick of contention last out and gave me the impression he is ready to whip this kind. I'm going to string along despite the fact HIGH BUD is in the field. HIGH BUD was a driving winner last out. LER-LIN beat cheap ones at the big town.

Second race—CHARMFUL has shown flashes of speed and could be the right one in this rather open affair. RYSAK and LITTLE MOWLEE to fill out the money bracket.

Third race—DISPURR has used early and stopped in that last. With a rated ride this one is dangerous. SEPLIN loves the track and is a threat. FAIR HAIRED for the minor money.

Fourth race—SOME GROUCHER probably needs that last. This one is at home on this oval and needs only the right handling. BAR SHIP turned in a good effort last out and is dangerous. CHANNING downs this kind occasionally.

Fifth race—MALVOIS toyed with fair company last out and will be right there again if taken off the reserve list. GLITTER GIRL is ready for the best. NAVIGATION for the minor money.

Sixth race—ROYAL BUSINESS, if ready, can whip these. This is her home grounds. NAVY is good now and belongs close. RED WRACK belongs in the thick of contention.

Seventh race—HOT MAN turned in a fine effort last out and needs only some saddle help today. PURPLE DAWN ran a nice second earlier in the week. SIR BROADSIDE for the show end.

Eighth race—GRAND COURT defeated sprinters the other day and looked as if he would go a route. The No. 1 post position helps and I'm going to string along. CITY JUDGE'S last was a beaut. PEP TALK can't be as bad as that last.

Substitute race—If this event is used, I'll take SCARLET FLAME, WALTER HAIGHT and OF COURSE.

Best Bet—Hot Man.

Torres Hurls Nat Farm to 9-0 Win

By the Associated Press

Charlotte, N. C., May 14.—Gil Torres, Charlotte's Cuban pitcher, was in fine shape tonight and pitched the Hornets to a 9-0 triumph over Norfolk's Tars. Torres yielded only six hits.

The Hornets sewed up the game with a seven-hit splurge in the second that produced seven runs.

Sharp Reward Captures Feature At Suffolk Downs

By the Associated Press

Boston, May 14.—The White Star Stable's Sharp Reward came on in the stretch at Suffolk Downs today to win the featured $1200 allowance dash for 2-year-olds by a length and a quarter from Mrs. A. Pelleteri's Zacabrand.

W. E. Schmidt's Supreme Best was third, three-quarters of a length back, as the winner ran the 4½ furlongs in 54 3-5 seconds.

Sharp Reward paid $21, $11.60 and $5.60 while Zacabrand returned $6.60 and $3.80 and Supreme Best $3.

Danny Sullivan's What Excuse and Mrs. W. W. Adams' Pari Ernest accounted for the daily double of $40 on which 331 tickets were held.

Out-of-Town Horses Swell Washington Show Entries

Mrs. Lasker's Three Charges and Four From Mrs. Sextons' Ohio String Are on Grounds

With the arrival of two important strings of horses, the Washington Horse Show grounds at Meadowbrook took on all the aspects of a big time show as its committee wound up plans for the event tomorrow and Sunday.

Mrs. Edward Lasker's Modernistic, Commando, Jambol and Clean Sweep arrived from Port Chester, N. Y., late Wednesday night.

From Granville, Ohio, came Mrs. Jones Sexton's topnotch foursome, Jitney Jingle, Runancarry, Balkonian and Tiniot, which unloaded at Meadowbrook yesterday morning.

Mrs. Fred J. Hughes, jr., formerly of Fort Myer, Va., arrived from Fort Oglethorope, Ga., with her open mare, Hi-Ho, and a new Great Dane puppy, that, friends say, is marked exactly like Rigan McKinney's horse, Appy of Blarney, another entry in the show.

A last-minute entry was Capt. J. D. Stouffer of Philadelphia, Pa., with his Cannabis, a consistent winner on the Pennsylvania-New Jersey circuit.

Meanwhile local horsedom was working up enthusiasm over an added starter on the list of classes, a much sought after event for 4-year-olds and under, shown under saddle and over fences. Post entries will be permitted and Washington-Maryland followers feel that the prize list has been tremendously improved. Hitherto its chief weakness was a lack of outings for young performers.

Carroll Hurls Gonzaga to 8-2 Triumph

Special Dispatch to The Post

Woodstock, Md., May 14.—Four-hit pitching by Billy Carroll led Gonzaga High nine of Washington to an 8-2 triumph over Loyola High of Baltimore here in a 7-inning game today.

Carroll struck out 12 batters as he led his team to its tenth victory in 13 games this year and personally notched his fifth decision in six starts.

Gonzaga rushed into a 3-run lead in the first inning and added three more in the fourth to win handily. Its heaviest hitter was big Jim O'Keefe, who collected a triple and single in four times at bat.

Tunney Assigned To Navy's Special Events Committee

By the Associated Press

New York, May 14.—Commander James J. (Gene) Tunney, director of the Navy's physical training program, has been assigned by the Navy Department to the special events committee, the organization which raises funds for the Navy Relief Society.

Transfer of the former heavyweight boxing champion was announced today by Stanton Griffis, chairman of the special events committee of the national citizens committee of the society.

In his new work, Commander Tunney will be in general charge of the development of amateur and professional summer and fall sports program designed to raise money for the society.

321 Trotters Named For 1944 Hambletonian

By the Associated Press

Goshen, N. Y., May 14.—The nineteenth Hambletonian Stakes, which will be trotted in 1944, has drawn a field of 321 trotters, Secretary Will Gahagan of the Hambletonian Society announced today.

The nominations are 28 less than last year but 18 more than were made in 1940. The largest nominators are: Walnut Hall Farm, Donerail, Ky., 97; Hanover, Pa., Shoe Farms, 66; Two Gaits Farm, Carmel, Ind., 24, and W. N. Reynolds, Winston-Salem N. C., 12.

On Familiar Grounds

Broadway Comedians Drill With Dodgers

By Judson Bailey

Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, May 14.—The Giants and Dodgers expect Mayor Fiorella H. LaGuardia to give a definite "yes" or "no" for night baseball in his weekly radio address next Sunday afternoon . . . The lights at both the Polo Grounds and Ebbets Field were turned on for a test Tuesday night while officials watched from a Coast Guard cutter . . . Both ball clubs were represented in the party and although they have had no report from the authorities, they are hopeful.

The Brooklyn Dodgers, who were accompanied by Singer Tony Martin on their final Western swing last season, now have two Broadway comedians, Danny Kaye and Benny Baker, working out with them at Ebbets Field . . . Lew Riggs of the Dodgers is the National League's outstanding pinch hitter; in his emergency calls this season he has made nine hits, including two homers and two doubles, and batted in six runs . . . Fred Fitzsimmons has taught Larry French how to throw a knuckle ball and the veteran left hander used it for the first time in beating the St. Louis Cardinals recently . . . It was the acquisition of a knuckler which made a new pitcher out of Boston's Jim Tobin last year.

Bill Klem

Vander Meer

Joe DiMaggio has been struggling with a hitting slump, but his last seven blows prior to today have been five homers, a triple and a single. . . . Bill Klem, chief of the National League umpires, is carrying around a little glass jar of iron molders' dust which he says all ball clubs should get to spread on the base paths when the diamond is wet. . . . He says it dries up a field like magic and would save many games that have to be called because of wet grounds. . . . Johnny Vander Meer has not beaten the Dodgers since he pitched his second no-hitter at Ebbets Field in 1938.

Ball clubs don't know what to expect in the way of transportation anymore. . . . When the Cincinnati Reds move from Boston to Philadelphia next Tuesday they will have to ride day coaches, leaving at 6 p. m. and arriving at 1 a. m., but when the Yankees started their present Western invasion they unexpectedly came up with a bedroom Pullman. . . . The Dodgers, who always have something different for the customers, now have an electric organ installed in a box back of the Brooklyn dugout at Ebbets Field. . . . Frankie Frisch has found a way for the Pirates to stop slugger Johnny Mize; the Pittsburgh second baseman plays in short right field when the big fellow is at bat.

Corporal Oliver Enters PGA Play

New York, May 14 (U.P.).—Ed (Porky) Oliver, the long-hitting Wilmington, Del., golf professional who now is a corporal at Fort Dix, N. J., today joined the list of members now in the armed forces who will compete in the PGA golf championship at Atlantic City, May 25-31.

Oliver has been granted Army permission to compete, Tournament Manager Fred Corcoran revealed, boosting the number of entrants to 113.

Vic Ghezzi, Deal, N. J., pro who will defend the title, now is a corporal at Fort Monmouth, N. J., and Sammy Snead, of Hot Springs, Va., one of the favorites, will be inducted into the Navy Monday.

A. U. Racqueters Beat C. U., 6 to 3

American University's tennis team defeated Catholic U., 6-3, yesterday on the A. U. courts to wind up its season with seven victories and eight defeats.

The Eagles had a 4-3 margin in matches played and won a pair of doubles matches by default.

Miller (A. U.) defeated S. Murphy, 6—4, 7—5.; Neilson (A. U.) defeated T. Murphy, 1—6, 6—3, 6—4; Manchester (A. U.) defeated Genovese, 6—3, 6—0; Hague (C. U.) defeated Williams, 6—1, 6—4; Jones (C. U.) defeated McGraw, 6—4, 6—2; Greenfield (A. U.) defeated Poretsky, 8—6, 6—1.

A. U. won first two doubles matches by default. Hague and Poretsky (C. U.) defeated Williams and McGraw, 7—5, 6—8, 7—5.

Herman Franks Sworn In as Navy Ensign

Buffalo, N. Y., May 14 (INS).—Herman Franks, catcher for the Montreal Royals in the International League and the property of the Brooklyn Dodgers, was sworn in today as an ensign, in the Naval Reserve. He will leave Saturday for Annapolis for 30 days' instruction and then will be assigned as a physical instructor in the naval aviation program.

Franks, 28, a resident of Salt Lake City, was purchased for more than $25,000 in 1940 from the St. Louis Cardinals by Brooklyn.

The highest priced backstop in the International League, he was optioned to the Royals by Brooklyn.

AND NOW THE FINER SEAGRAM'S 5 CROWN
IN THE NEW Host BOTTLE

THE HOUSE OF SEAGRAM proudly presents the Finer Seagram's 5 Crown in the beautiful new "HOST" bottle. Whether you are entertaining at home, or at your favorite club or bar, you can proudly serve the Finer 5 Crown to your guests in the distinctive new "HOST" bottle . . . a bottle that has been designed as a symbol of gracious hospitality.

And there will always be a Finer 5 Crown. The reason: Seagram possesses an almost inexhaustible reserve of rare, fully matured whiskies which are skillfully blended with mellow neutral spirits . . . truly exemplifying the Seagram Creed of Craftsmanship established in 1857 . . . "Make Finer Whiskies . . . Make Them Taste Better."

So . . . Say Seagram's 5 Crown and proudly play the "host"!

A Toast to the Host

If you would like to make a hit
  When honored guests arrive,
Just serve a tray of drinks you've made
  With FINER Seagram's "5"—
That gracious bottle called the "HOST"
  Gives witness to your friends—
That you are pouring them the most Renowned of all the blends—

And when you're lounging in your club,
  Or standing at the bar,
And you're the host with Seagram's "5"
  The smoothest blend, by far—
Your friends will be so downright pleased
  That they'll propose a toast—
"To one who knows his whiskies—"
  Yes, it's smart to play the "host."

Staples' Index 17.5% Higher Than Year Ago

The Bureau of Labor Statistics reported yesterday the general level of wholesale commodity prices for the week ended May 9 stood at 98.6 per cent of the 1926 average, or 17.5 per cent higher than one year ago.

The general level was 31.5 per cent higher than in August, 1939, just before the outbreak of the war in Europe.

Some sharp declines in prices of livestock, fruits and vegetables brought about a decline of 0.1 per cent in the general index, the first drop since early February.

During the week steers and poultry were quoted at from 4 to 5 per cent lower and hogs and cows were down from 1.5 to more than 2.5 per cent.

Industrial markets were comparatively steady except for advances in clothing and some types of cotton goods.

Fiduciaries Council Named

The fiduciaries section of the District Bankers Association, meeting Wednesday night, elected an executive council as follows: Edwin B. Shaw, Aubrey O. Dooley, Earl G. Jonscher, Lester A. Lawrence and Vincent A. Sheehy, jr. The council will elect new section officers shortly.

Real Estate Bonds Lower

In sympathy with the national trend, Washington real estate bonds showed a lower drift in April. Drops of 4 and 1 points, respectively, were shown by National Press Building adjustment first 3-5s of 1950, and Washington Properties, Inc., general income 7s of 1952. Two other local bonds, included in the Amott-Baker real estate bond index, were unchanged for the month.

The Amott-Baker index of 200 issues showed a decline of 0.9 per cent during April. The average price per $1000 bond was $308 on April 30, compared with $311 on March 31 and $302 at the close of 1941.

$2,764,000 in Death Claims

Life insurance benefit payments to District of Columbia families resulting from death claims aggregated $2,764,000 in the first quarter of the year, the Institute of Life Insurance reported yesterday. The payments were made to the beneficiaries of 3277 policies which became claims during the past three-month period.

Payments to families of the District included $1,928,000 under 496 ordinary policies, $401,000 under 493 group certificates and $435,000 under 2288 industrial policies which became claims during the quarter.

The total of 3277 policies which became death claims here during the quarter compares with 2347 in the corresponding period of 1941.

Building Shows Drop Here

Washington slipped to sixth place nationally in building permit valuations for the first four months this year, according to a compilation by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc. A tabulation of permit values for the 20 leading cities covering the first four months showed 11 cities with higher totals than last year, as against 9 showing losses. The comparisons follow:

Named to WPB Post

Robert B. Shepard, chief electrical engineer of Underwriters' Laboratories, Inc., has been appointed deputy chief of the simplification branch of the War Production Board and is now in Washington. Karl S. Geiges, an associate electrical engineer of Underwriters' Laboratories, also is in Washington as a senior industrial specialist with the simplification branch.

Another WPB Appointment

The War Production Board announced yesterday the appointment of Thomas A. Baggs of New York City, former executive of the Chrysler Corporation, as chief of the truck section of the WPB's automotive branch. Baggs, an industrial specialist with OPM and WPB for the last 16 months, has been associated with the automotive industry in Toledo, Detroit, Chicago and New York for about 20 years.

Meat Packing Firm To Quit Business: Price Rules Blamed

Pueblo, Colo., May 14 (AP).—The Nuckolls Packing Co., which has been purchasing about four million dollars worth of livestock annually for processing, is going out of business after operating under price ceilings for 8 weeks.

"Due to current conditions, we can't take it any longer," said Miss Della Nuckolls, the company president.

"I want to help win this war and do everything in our power to comply with the wishes of the Federal Government, but it is not possible to continue here under current conditions, which I regret very much."

Buying of livestock will cease Monday and processing of meat will end in another three weeks, Miss Nuckolls said.

It's Open Season on Big Business Executives; Angry Investors Worse Than Ever This Year

New York, May 14.—This is that happy hunting season when stockholders in big corporations jam on their hats and dash down to the annual meeting to ask the directors:

Watcha doin' with my money?

They can be divided into four general classes: the grouch, the soothsayer or blessed-is-the-company type, the perpetually bored, and the seeker-after-truth.

The annual spring meetings this year—with Government taxes going up, earnings on the decline and dividend payments becoming less secure—have often been rough, tough, and stormy.

One thing is almost always certain:

The company president or board chairman presiding at the meeting is going to keep his chin up and his temper down, even while getting his ears pinned back by a dilapidated stockholder with less than ten shares.

This is also certain: The gentleman presiding never gets stumped for an answer. It may not be a good one, but he'll have it.

If momentarily stuck, he just turns to one of the company officers—such as the treasurer or secretary—who is supposed to have all information at his fingertips. These officials sit up front where the tormented chairman of the meeting can spot them in a hurry and get a quick reply.

The stockholders—hundreds of them at the big meetings—come out of all the nooks and crannies of American life:

John Moneybags, pink-jowled from good food and rare wines, with a gold-headed cane and a string on his eyeglasses; total wrecks who got their rheumatism clipping coupons; fantastic, ancient females dressed in rainbow colors; conservative, well-attired businessmen and handsome ladies; horny-handed, craggy people who put their life's savings into the company; and some raggedy folks who might have just crawled out of the woodwork.

The chairman may be drawing down $75,000 to $200,000 a year but he is as docile as a clay pigeon when a belligerent stockholder with perhaps two shares and a couple of proxies starts shooting at him:

"If my dividend is going to be less this year, why can't your salary be cut? Do you want it all or are you trying to ruin us?"

Sometimes the president will paralyze the gathering by calmly announcing he has cut his own salary from $100,000 to a paltry $75,000, which happened this year.

In any roomful of stockholders, however, there will be some dispensers of sweetness and light who will try to restore order or defend the company's operations in one of two ways:

1. They heckle the heckler by outshouting him with "shut up, sit down, you gotta gall to find fault, how many shares of stock you got, where you get that stuff at?"

2. They arise, coyly as a girl graduate drawing circles on the ground with her toe or with a roar like a football coach, and say:

"Let's be fair, folks. My money is in this company, too, and I think our officers are doing fine. They're in there pitching all the time for you and me. Let's give them credit. They're all right."

Sometimes this has the desired effect. Not always.

An indigant red-headed Irishman, interrupted by one of the soothsayers at a recent meeting just as he was demanding the officers take a cut, bounded back with the accusation:

"This is a phoney meeting. It's packed with company men."

Order was restored in about five minutes.

Not all meetings are a rumpus. This year's session of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., whose stockholders unfailingly for a score of years have been receiving $9 annual dividends, was as "nasty" as a meeting of sweethearts.

But when a stockholder has been attending the sessions year after year, the fiery or syrupy speeches can get to be a tiresome story that interferes with his regular feeding time.

At the meeting of the United States Steel Corporation an old man whose ancestors had worked a New Jersey iron mine for George Washington's Continental Army got up in the midst of someone's pretty speech and asked:

"When the hell do we eat? That's all we come here for anyway."

That annual midday meal for United States Steel's stockholders is an institution. The company, being incorporated under New Jersey laws, holds the yearly gathering in an old building near the Hoboken waterfront where the saloons are plentiful but the restaurants few.

If the two or three hundred stockholders, some of them rickety with age, had to go busting out for lunch at noon, there might be casualties in the rush for the pie-wagon.

So the company annually provides them with a lunch of sandwiches, coffee and pie. If they want beer, that's extra, it's not on the house, and they have to go look for it.

Very few companies, however, give the stockholders anything to eat. Just dividends, or no dividends.

Grains Rally On Better News From Russia

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 14.—Early declines ranging from fractions to a cent were wiped out in all grain pits except oats today as the market rallied in the final hour on buying which some traders said was inspired by more favorable war reports from Russia.

Better shipping business in corn, wheat and oats and buying attributed to processors as well as a general movement to cover previous short sales in all commodities contributed to the recovery.

Wheat, off about ½ cent at one time, closed unchanged to ⅜ higher compared with yesterday, May $1.21¼, July $1.23½@⅝. Corn, which lost as much as ⅞ of a cent, finished unchanged to ⅛ up, May 86⅛, July 89. Oats sagged ¾@1⅛ cents, being the weakest of the cereals, and closed ⅜@⅞ lower than yesterday. Soybeans closed ½@1⅛ higher and rye unchanged to ¼ higher.

The early retreat was blamed on a continuation of selling inspired by the favorable crop outlook and storage situation. Weakness of oats, rye and beans at this stage was attributed to prospects that increased quantities of wheat will be pushed into competition with other grain as feed and raw material for distillation into alcohol. The Government is expected to press this program in order to relieve the bread grain surplus and met war requirement for munitions and livestock production.

WPB Penalizes N. Y. Dental Firm

By the Associated Press

The War Production Board yesterday denied priority assistance for two months to the Ruby Dental Manufacturing Co. of New York City, charging it with violating priority regulations.

WPB said the company was permitted to assign a military preference rating to delivery of 4275 molded trays, but, instead, used the rating to cover orders for 50,000 trays and a quantity of aluminum castings.

The rating also was illegally applied to certain deliveries of large quantities of other materials not specifically authorized, WPB said.

Gen. Water Proposes To Retire 5% Bonds

Philadelphia, May 14 (AP).—The General Water Gas and Electric Co. filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission today a proposal to obtain a $2,100,000 five-year bank loan to retire $2,832,000 15-year 5 per cent first lien and collateral trust bonds, due June 1, 1943.

General will issue promissory notes. Proceeds of the loan together with additional funds to be received from General's subsidiary, Boise (Idaho) Water Corporation, in settlement of indebtedness, will be applied to the reduction and retirement of the bonds.

Cotton Consumption Increases in April

By the Associated Press

The Census Bureau reported yesterday that cotton consumed during April totaled 998,754 bales of lint and 132,106 bales of linters, compared with 966,631 bales of lint and 131,187 bales of linters consumed during March this year and 920,950 bales of lint and 120,006 bales of linters consumed during April last

Federal-Paid Advertising Plan Decried

By the Associated Press

Columbia, Mo., May 14.—Henry T. Ewald, prominent advertising executive and president of the Campbell—Ewald Co., Detroit, in an address here today decried suggestions that the Federal Government should assume the role of a large scale advertiser during the emergency.

Contending that advertising was purely a function of business, Ewald said:

"The United States is not—nor should it be classed—as a business enterprise. Like the church and other social agencies, the government can benefit—and should benefit—by advertising. But it should not dictate the Media, order the space and pay the bills."

"I know that in advocating this I am running counter to opinion among some of my contemporaries in the advertising business, but I feel deeply about it."

Ewald said he favored Government advertising provided it was paid for by America's business and industrial concerns and retail stores—"each according to its size and ability to pay."

"I say little or nothing about the dangers of regimentation in a vast, all-comprehensive, Government-paid-for advertising program. These are self-evident."

He proposed this program:

"First—the use of full page newspaper advertisements to sell war savings bonds and other Government securities—to salvage waste—to build morale—to give publicity to every effort that will help us win the victory.

"Second—This advertising to be sponsored by retail stores, banks, manufacturing companies, large and small, the country over, in every community. This may be done by these concerns singly, cooperatively, in groups, whatever seems locally most desirable.

"Third—That such advertising for the most part be prepared through the National Advertising Council at Washington, although local ideas and suggestions should by no means be discouraged."

Throughout the war period, Ewald said, it will become more and more difficult for advertisers, both national and local, to advertise peacetime products, and "such advertising as I propose would, I am sure, serve to keep trade names, hallmarks and reputations fresh and green aganist the return of normal living."

Cocoa Futures Market Is 10th To Halt Dealings

New York, May 14 (AP).—The cocoa futures market today became the tenth going into liquidation for the duration. All dealings were ordered abandoned after the close of business today.

Coffee, sugar, rubber, silk, hides, copper, tin, lead and zinc already have become wartime casualties. The rubber and four metal markets on the Commodity Exchange, Inc., have been completely liquidated.

Voluntary liquidation in silk has cut contracts to 428 compared with 1009 outstanding when trading was suspended July 25, 1941. Only three lots remain outstanding in hide futures.

Open contracts in cocoa futures numbered 643 at the close of business May 12. A committee of five for voluntary liquidation has been appointed by the cocoa board.

Reserve Buys $48,000,000 In U. S. Bonds

By the Associated Press

Federal reserve banks bought more Government securities last week in support of the Government security markets.

The Federal Reserve Board said that purchases in week ended May 13 totaled 48 million dollars, including 16 million dollars worth of Treasury certificates and 32 million dollars of Treasury bills. Purchases which have been made every week sinc middle of April have stressed acquisition of Treasury bonds rather than these shorter term securities.

The board said that excess reserves of banks increased 240 million dollars to a total of $2,930,000,000 during the week.

The board's statement said:

"During the week ended May 13 member bank reserve balances increased 223 million dollars. Additions to mmber bank reserves arose from decreases of 218 million dollars in Treasury deposits with Federal Reserve banks and two million dollars in Treasury cash, and increases of 40 million dollars in reserve bank credit and three million dollars each in gold stock and Treasury currency, offset in part by increases of 16 million dollars in money in circulation and 27 million dollars in non-member deposits and other Federal Reserve accounts. Excess of reserves of member banks on May 13 were estimated to be approximately $2,930,000,000, an increase of 240 million dollars for the week.

"The principal change in holdings of bills and securities was an increase of 48 million dollars in United States Government securities, certificates increased 16 million dollars and bills 32 million dollars."

Changes in member bank reserve balances and related items during the week and the year ended May 13, 1942, were reported as follows:

Rail Loadings Off 2.3% During Week

By the Associated Press

The Association of American Railroads reported yesterday that 839,253 cars of revenue freight were loaded during the week ended last Saturday.

This was a decrease of 19,651 cars, or 2.3 per cent, compared with the preceding week; a decrease of 2,104 cars, or 0.3 per cent, compared with a year ago, and an increase of 158,625 cars, or 23.3 per cent, compared with 1940.

The more than seasonal decline in total loadings was attributed primarily to a sizable loss in less-than-car lot merchandise. Ore, however, showed a notable gain.

Brokers' Cooperation On U. S. Issues Lauded

Special Dispatch to The Post

Saratoga, N. Y., May 14.—Closer cooperation between the United States Treasury and the financial community toward total utilization in the sale of Government bonds and in raising funds for the war effort, in particular in marketing the first "tap issue" ever offered, was lauded today by George Weiss, economist and partner of the Stock Exchange firm of J. S. Bache & Co., in a luncheon address delivered before the Rotary Club here today.

"It seems that we are rapidly approaching the point where the financial machinery of the United States will be utilized to the fullest in the sale of Government bonds and in the raising of funds for the war effort," he said.

N. J. Standard Nets 140 Million; Outlook Called Unfavorable

By the Associated Press

New York, May 14.—The Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey today summarized its 1941 business in a report that showed vividly how war has swelled some and sharply curtailed other of the far-flung operations that make Standard probably the biggest oil company in the world.

Standard's consolidated net income for 1941 was $140,572,419, equal to $5.15 a capital share, compared with $123,886,346 or $4.54 a share in 1940.

"Earnings in 1941 were satisfactory, but prospects are not good for 1942," the report commented, after detailing effects of the war.

Reasons listed for the poorer earnings prospects included:

1. Lower consumption of petroleum products through normal channels because of the tanker shortage.

2. Increased expenses due to the war, combined with a smaller volume, has increased unit costs.

3. Tanker transportation costs have reached record high levels.

4. Tank cars and pipe lines have been substituted for water-borne movement regardless of greater costs.

President W. S. Farish and Chairman W. C. Teagle told stockholders Standard is committed to spend 152 million dollars on new construction directly associated with the war effort, of which 65 million dollars will be financed by the Government.

Explaining the omission of customary statistics on operations of Standard and of the petroleum industry, the company said their absence was due to a desire to cooperate with the Government departments interested.

Censorship on marine matters, it commented, made it impossible to obtain accurate information on the tankers of European affiliated companies.

The report also noted that much of Standard's research could not be discussed, since it was for the war program, but told generally of the development and expansion of production of 100-octane aviation gasoline through new processes and of synthetic output of toluol, a major ingredient for manufacture of military explosives.

In synthetic rubber, Standard's investments and commitments on last December 7 were estimated at 12 million dollars, involving a production of 20,000 tons a year of rubber or its raw materials.

"Within a few weeks afterward," the report said, "the company had undertaken commitments for the United States and Canadian governments to produce 200,000 tons per annum of synthetic rubber or raw materials therefor. Since then, some of these commitments have been transferred to other oil companies.

"Without rubber there would eventually be no automobile industry and no civilian cars on the highways. Standard Oil believes that the public welfare and the company's degree of dependence upon the sale of gasoline and lubricating oil warrant it in prosecuting its synthetic rubber development with all the resources at its command."

Commenting on tanker losses, the report said:

"Replacements of the lost tonnage already obtained or under construction will go a long way toward restoring the carrying capacity of our United States and Panamanian fleets."

At present, however, the report commented, "the problem of meeting normal needs of customers is indeed critical."

Stock Prices Close Slightly Lower Despite Feeble Attempt at Late Rally

By the Associated Press

New York, May 14.—While selling dried up appreciably in today's stock market and a number of Wednesday's depressed issues managed to come back fractionally, the price trend continued slightly lower for most departments.

Steels, coppers, aircrafts and scattered specialties dipped to new lows for the year in the forenoon. Most, however, reduced losses in the final hour and several ended with minor improvement.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was off .1 of a point at 33.5. Transfers of 278,857 shares, compared with 366,980 the day before. Of 602 issues traded, 246 were down, 168 up and 188 unchanged.

A little late support was attracted by Russian claims of heavy counterblasts against the latest Nazi drives, but many potential buyers inclined to step carefully pending more definite news from this sector. Tax doubts, dividend casualties and broadening governmental restrictions helped keep bullish sentiment within bounds.

It was questionable whether Federal indictment of a number of important chemical companies and their officers on charges of conspiracy to monopolize manufacture and sale of dye stuffs had much effect on listed shares in these lines. While Allied Chemical lost 1½ points on a small turnover, du Pont ended with a gain of ½. American Cyanamid, on the Curb, also was up ½.

In arrears were United States Steel, Republic Steel, Goodrich, Montgomery Ward, Lockheed, North American, Anaconda, American Can, Kennecott, Johns-Manville, Owens-Illinois, K. C. Penney, Continental Can, Texas Co., New York Air Brake, New York Shipbuilding, New York Central and Southern Pacific.

Emerging on the up side were Bethlehem Steel, General Motors, Chrysler, United States Rubber, American Telephone, Santa Fe, Western Union, Great Northern, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Westinghouse, General Electric, Loew's, Paramount, International Harvester, United Aircraft and Sperry.

Bonds were mixed. Commodities steadied after early hesitancy. At Chicago wheat and corn were unchanged to up ⅜ and ⅛ of a cent a bushel, respectively, and hogs advanced 5 to 15 cents. Cotton was unchanged to 10 cents a bale higher.

Downward shifts in the Curb were shown by Humble Oil, Gulf Oil, Lake Shore, International Petroleum and Brewster Aero. Singer Mfg. dropped 3 points but Aluminum of America was up 2. American Gas and Pantepec edged forward. Volume here aggregated 55,585 shares versus 58,715 yesterday.

Olds Foresees Cut In Non-Essential Sales of Power

Charlotte, N. C., May 14 (AP).—Chairman Leland Olds of the Federal Power Commission said here today that curtailment of nonessential uses of electricity would be necessary "to the extent that facilities now installed or on order, when utilized to the full, prove insufficient to sustain the all-out war production effort."

Speaking to a State-wide safety conference, Olds said "such curtailment is bound to hit certain areas more drastically than others because of limitations upon the planned location of new war industries and the technical obstacles to do anything approaching a nationwide pooling of power."

The war program, he declared, will require the annual production of at least 255 billion kilowatt hours of power, an increase of 75 per cent over the 145 billion generated in 1940.

U. S. Freight Co. Loss Charged Off By N. Y. Central

New York, May 14 (AP).—A charge-off of $26,842,643 in connection with New York Central Railroad Co.'s investments in the Lackawanna Railroad Co. and the United States Freight Co. was disclosed today in New York Central's, pamphlet annual report for 1941.

These holdings, acquired in 1929-31 were the principal assets of the Securities Corp. of the New York Central Railroad, a wholly owned subsidiary, which was liquidated in November 1941 by transfer of its assets to New York Central.

The investment in Lackawanna was acquired at an aggregate cost of $17,294,882 and the freight forwarding company's securities at a total cost of $14,943,248.

Central's purchase of the Lackawanna securities was in connection with plans proposed during the 1920s for consolidation of Eastern railroads which failed to materialize.

Frederick E. Williamson, New York Central president, said in the report that railroad wage increases awarded around the end of 1941 would boost the company's annual payroll by an estimated $31,497,600, which would include vacations and additional payroll taxes.

Int. Harvester Sales Up 19% In Six Months

By the Associated Press

Hoboken, N. J., May 14.—Fowler McCormick, president of International Harvester Co., said today that production restrictions might lower sales of regular products in the next six months but might be offset by increased deliveries of armament products.

"Because of these factors and other uncertainties," he told stockholders at the annual meeting, "we cannot predict the final outcome of the current fiscal year or estimate the effect upon the company's business or profits."

Total sales for the six months ended April 30, first half of the fiscal year, were 19 per cent higher than in the like 1941 period, McCormick said, but in the remainder of the fiscal year were expected to be substantially lower than in the same period a year ago.

Government orders would be handled by the company "at a margin of profit which will be recognized as fair and moderate," he said.

Harvester directors had decided to comply under protest, McCormick said, with the War Labor Board's order for a 4½-cent-an-hour increase and union maintenance of membership in eight of its plants.

The wage increase would add about five million dollars annually to the company's payroll, he said, and was opposed both as unjustified by increases in the cost of living and as being inflationary in tendency.

Postwar plans had been discussed, McCormick said, and the company's purpose was "to conduct our business so that we may enter the postwar period in a strong financial position, free of debt and its accompanying perils."

Harvester's inventories of motor trucks frozen by Government order were "unusually high," McCormick said, but could not be liquidated without Government approval. He said inventories of new farm machinery were low and probably would continue to decline.

Plant employment had been reduced about 6 per cent since October, he said. At that time the company had 58,000 employes in the United States.

New York Cotton

New York, May 14 (AP).—Cotton futures closed unchanged to 10 cents a bale higher today with most traders remaining inactive pending Senate action on the farm bill.

Hedging was small and most offerings were suplied by scattered liquidation.

Announcement of record-breaking April cotton consumption of 998,754 bales stirred only a small amount of buying interest.

Soldiers Seek D. C. Woman Who 'Directed' Them

An unidentified woman who misdirected three soldiers last Sunday night on a Washington trolley car can prevent the demotion of two of them if she will write to Sergt. Robert Lowell, 20122936, Pioneer Company, 626 T.D. Bn (L), A. P. Hill Military Reservation, Fredericksburg, Va.

She need only identify herself as the woman in question, according to a letter from Sergeant Lowell to The Post.

Coach-and-Four Will Publicize Horse Show Today

Mrs. Robert C. Winmill, Warrenton socialite and sportswoman, will drive a coach-and-four down Constitution Avenue today, starting at the Lincoln Memorial at 11:30 a.m., circling the Federal Triangle and then going back to the Memorial.

The event is intended not to mark the debut of gasoline rationing but rather to publicize the approaching Washington Victory Horse Show, to be sponsored Saturday and Sunday at the Meadowbrook show grounds by the Junior League as a benefit for the social service department of Children's Hospital.

Junior Leaguers said last night that several of their number likely will accompany Mrs. Winmill in the coach, a miniature affair to be drawn by four ponies. It is also planned to have along a couple of grooms with "hunting horns and everything."

Funeral Services Set Today for Dr. B. K. Leon

Funeral services for Dr. Benjamin K. Leon, Washington dentist who died Wednesday night at Emergency Hospital, will be held at 10:30 this morning at the Bernard Danzansky and Son funeral home, 3501 Fourteenth Street Northwest.

Dr. Leon, who was 59 years old and a resident of the District since 1907, was born in Chicago, but was brought to Washington as a child. He was a graduate of the Georgetown School of Dentistry and a member of the Washington Hebrew Congregation, the Temple Brotherhood, and the Woodmont Country Club.

His survivors are three daughters, Mrs. James E. Greenberg, of New York; Mrs. Irving Fogel and Mrs. Daniel Sondheimer, both of Washington; his mother, Mrs. Kalman Leon; two brothers, Dr. Jack K. Leon of Stubenville, Ohio, and Dr. Albert K. Leon of Frederick, Md., and a sister, Mrs. Henry K. Ulman.

Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld of the Washington Hebrew Temple will conduct the services. Burial will be in Washington Hebrew Cemetery.

Knights Templar Pay Homage To Dean Phillips

Knights Templar of the District, attending Ascension Day rites last night, paid tribute to the Very Rev. ZeBarney T. Phillips, late Supreme Prelate, Dean of Washington Cathedral and Senate Chaplain. He died last Sunday.

The plumed Knights marched into Foundry Church at Sixteenth and P Streets Northwest, stood at attention in the pews, and the Rev. Dr. Frederick Brown Harris, pastor, said the gathering missed Dean Phillips' "saintly presence and genial personality."

Dr. Harris explained that Dr. Phillips had planned to attend the Ascension Day service, and offer prayers. Dr. James Shera Montgomery, chaplain of the House and Past Supreme Prelate of the District Templars, read those prayers. Foundry Church placed flowers on the chancel in Dr. Phillips' memory.

Rev. Rose, Famed Negro Cleric, Dies

Rochester, N. Y., May 14 (AP).—The Rev. James E. Rose, D. D., Negro Baptist minister who in 22 years as a pastor here won a conspicuous position in civic circles as well as in the role of champion of Negro rights, died today, aged 59.

A native of Centralia, Va., and graduate of Howard University, he had been pastor of Mount Olivet Baptist Church since 1920. Dr. Rose was a school teacher and for a year a letter carrier in Virginia before entering Howard University, from which he was graduated in 1913. He then entered Rochester Theological Seminary and was ordained a minister in 1916.

He was the possessor of honorary degrees from both Colgate-Rochester and Howard and was on the board of trustees of the latter.

Nazi Offensive Begun, Turk Sources Say

By the United Press

Ankara, May 14.—German assaults in Crimea are the beginning of a general offensive and the Russians, fortified with a vast and still increasing flow of Allied war materials, are supremely confident of withstanding the blow, diplomatic quarters reported today.

The Soviet Ambassador, Sergei Vinogradoff, called on Turkish Foreign Minister Sukru Saracoglu Wednesday and informed him that Russia regards the big German offensive as definitely under way, it was reported.

American and British planes and tanks, already in action, are expected to play an increasingly large part in the battles. Information in Turkish quarters was that 1,500,000 tons of Allied war materials reached Russia over the Arctic route during the past winter, while an average of 20 truckloads a day, plus rail shipments, crossed the frontier from Iran. The volume over both routes is said to be swelling.

Russians here showed nothing but confidence. The nature and extent of Josef Stalin's preparations can only be guessed, and Allied military experts here freely admit that they know more about German troop dispositions than they know about the Russian.

Yugoslav diplomats, whose estimates have been consistently good, now say that the Russians can be thrown back another 600 miles to the Volga and still maintain a front. They say the Red army now is so thoroughly familiar with German encirclement tactics that future attempts are "sure to fail."

Neutral military attaches who attended an Axis cocktail party last night returned with a report that the new secret weapons the Germans have been talking about consist merely of mass use of powerful flame throwers against fortified positions.

The same attaches said operations would have started in the Crimea several weeks ago had not the Germans lost enormous amounts of munitions at Braila and Galatz, in Rumania, in a Danube River flood.

W. H. Wanamaker, Ex-Treasury Employe, Dies

William H. Wanamaker, a resident of Washington since 1890 and former assistant chief of the Division of Redemption in the Treasury Department, died yesterday at Garfield Hospital. He was 88.

Mr. Wanamaker, who served the Treasury Department for 38 years, started there in 1890 in the office of the auditor. In 1900, after his transfer from the office of the Comptroller of Currency, he was sent by the Postoffice branch to the Philippines to establish a money order system. His retirement from the department came in 1928.

A member of Lafayette Lodge, No. 19, F. A. A. M., Mr. Wanamaker served as that organization's master in 1908 and as secretary from 1911 to 1936.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. today at the Wright funeral home, 1337 Tenth Street Northwest. The Rev. Archie W. Davis, chaplain of the Lafayette Lodge, will officiate. Interment will take place Saturday morning in Girard, Ohio, near Mr. Wanamaker's birthplace.

His survivors are his wife, Mrs. Ellen Fitzhugh Wanamaker of Virginia, and a brother, Elmer Wanamaker of Lawrence, Ohio.

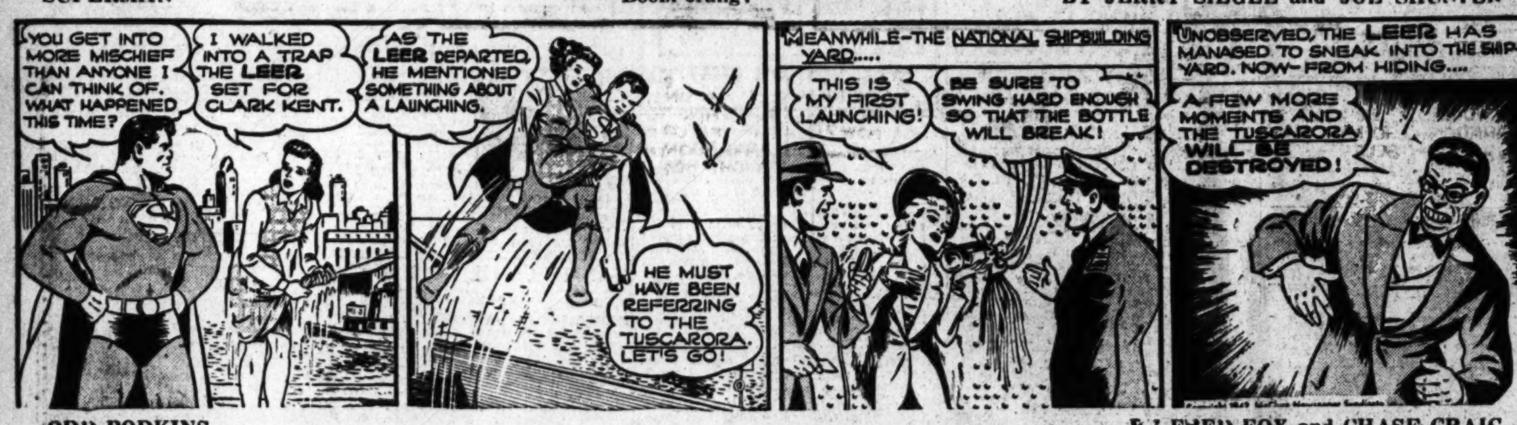
Boom-erang!

BY JERRY SIEGEL and JOE SHUSTER



YOU GET INTO MORE MISCHIEF THAN ANYONE I CAN THINK OF. WHAT HAPPENED THIS TIME?
I WALKED INTO A TRAP THE LEER SET FOR CLARK KENT.
AS THE LEER DEPARTED, HE MENTIONED SOMETHING ABOUT A LAUNCHING.
HE MUST HAVE BEEN REFERRING TO THE TUSCARORA. LET'S GO!
MEANWHILE—THE NATIONAL SHIPBUILDING YARD....
THIS IS MY FIRST LAUNCHING!
BE SURE TO SWING HARD ENOUGH SO THAT THE BOTTLE WILL BREAK!
UNOBSERVED, THE LEER HAS MANAGED TO SNEAK INTO THE SHIPYARD. NOW—FROM HIDING....
A FEW MORE MOMENTS AND THE TUSCARORA WILL BE DESTROYED!

It's pleasant to be able to announce today that the United States Treasury is a generous institution.

The reason for the announcement being that it's through the courtesy of the Treasury that tonight you'll be able to hear a lady named Dorothy Lamour on the first radio presentation of the new motion-picture play called "Roxy Hart," now playing in first-run movie houses throughout the Nation.

Miss Lamour, it seems, has contracted with the Treasury to make personal appearances throughout the country for the purpose of selling war bonds. But the Treasury generously has said that she could interrupt that worthy activity for the length of time it takes to appear in a radio show.

"Roxy Hart," then, will be heard over WJSV and the Columbia network at 9 tonight in the Philip Morris Playhouse series, with Miss Lamour in control.

"Roxy Hart," in case you don't know, is adapted from the play, "Chicago," which had a very successful run on Broadway a few years ago. It's a farce about the publicity build-up given an obscure dancer, more or less innocently involved in a gangster murder, and how she made good as a result of it.

It should be pointed out, I suppose, that there isn't a single sarong in the thing and that it will give Miss Lamour a chance to indulge in a flair for comedy which has been pretty effectually hidden by said garments despite (or would it be because of?) their scanty proportions.

♣Q J 10 6

The bidding has gone:

North	East	South	West
1♠	3♡	Pass	4♡
Pass	Pass	Pass

What is your opening lead?

Answer to Quiz

1. South's logical rebid of two hearts is unsatisfactory as it does not show the strength of his hand and North may pass, although game is quite possible if he has a fair hand. South would be wise to say two no trump which encourages his partner to keep the bidding open.

2. South's best lead is the queen of clubs. Since he holds five cards of his partner's suit, one of the opponents probably has a singleton, so two spade tricks are very doubtful. If North has the spade ace, he may be able to win it later; if the adversaries have it, South has wasted his lead. He should utilize his one lead in an attempt to set up a club trick.

Bill to Assure Women Workers Of Eight-Hour Day Is Tabled

A House District subcommittee yesterday voted to put on the shelf a bill requiring District of Columbia employers to post working schedules of all women employes, proposed as an improved method of enforcing the eight-hour working day for women workers here.

The decision to table the measure came after trade association representatives had expressed vigorous opposition to the bill—predicting in their testimony that it would eventually be necessary to relax the eight-hour limitation because of the drain of male workers into the services.

The latter view was expressed both by Joseph C. McGarraghy of the Board of Trade and Ringgold Hart, general counsel for the Merchant and Manufacturers Association.

They emphasized that such a change in the law should be made only for the duration, but said that already a need for more flexible regulation of hours for women had become apparent. They said it was likely that merchants would be asking Congress for "some relief" from its provisions in the near future.

The bill tabled by the committee, headed by Representative McGehee (Democrat), Mississippi, would have permitted Minimum Wage Board inspectors to check personnel actually working against the posted schedules. If they found a woman working at hours other than those posted, under the bill, this would have constituted prima facie evidence of a violation in court action.

Employer groups opposed its passage on grounds that it was unnecessary to enforcement of the law, that it imposed an unreasonable burden on employers by making it impossible to change schedules on short notice without running afoul of the law, and that it was "un-American."

The latter term was used by McGarraghy, who declared that the law would mean that an employer "was guilty until he proved himself innocent," contrary to the principle of justice that asserts a man is innocent until proven otherwise.

Both he and Hart testified that as former corporation counsels, they had never found any difficulty under the present set-up in prosecuting cases or gathering evidence for hour violations.

The Minimum Wage Board had asked its passage as "a piece of machinery" which would aid in enforcing the hour law.

Others who testified in opposition to the bill were Rufus S. Lusk, president of the Washington Taxpayers Association, who asserted that it would "freeze a clumsy, impractical and expensive method" of law enforcement—and Mrs. Ernest W. Howard of the District Federation of Women's Clubs.

Tours of Georgetown Gardens to Start Today

The fourteenth annual Georgetown Gardens Tours will be held today and tomorrow—a showing of 18 gardens—for the benefit of the Georgetown Children's House at 3224 N Street.

Established 11 years ago, Children's House is now a Community Chest agency. Twenty children are now enrolled in the House's nursery school, and there is a long waiting list, "the longest in years due to the increase in warworkers here," it was said. After school hours, boys and girls from 5 to 10 years of age come to the house for games and other recreation. Other groups come in during the evenings for games, dancing and various study classes. There are four cooking classes a week, one for boys alone.

The gardens of the following eight persons will be open this afternoon from 2 to 7:

Mrs. Herman Hollerith, 1633 Twenty-ninth Street; Dumbarton Oaks, 3101 R Street; Mrs. William B. Poland, 1675 Thirty-first Street; Mrs. Henry Butler, 1671 Thirty-first Street; Mrs. Howard C. Davidson, 3238 R Street; Mrs. L. M. C. Smith, 3230 Reservoir Road; Mrs. Edward C. Radue, 3229 Reservoir Road, and Mrs. Doretta Klaber, 1679 Thirty-fifth Street.

The ten listed for tomorrow are:

Evermay, 1623 Twenty-eighth Street; Mrs. Robert Allen, 1525 Twenty-eighth Street; Miss Elizabeth Dean and Miss Blanche Halbert, 2816 O Street; Mrs. Edward Burling, jr., 1339 Twenty-ninth Street; Mrs. William Burden, 1224 Thirtieth Street; Mrs. Deering Howe, 3014 N Street; Mrs. Henry Leonard, 3038 N Street; Miss Lucy Bentley, 2918 P Street; Miss Katherine Dougal, 3030 P Street, and Mrs. Devereaux Green, 3128 P Street.

Holders of 'X' Cards Will Be Made Public, Senators Keep Theirs

All Registration Data Except That Of Military Forces Will Be Disclosed

By Roland Nicholson
Post Staff Writer

The names of motorists who have obtained high-allowance gasoline rationing cards will be a matter of public record, along with all other gasoline rationing data, under a Government ruling announced last night.

The Office of Price Administration, moving swiftly after President Roosevelt expressed the belief that data connected with the gasoline registration should be a matter of public knowledge, announced that it would order all local rationing boards to open the records to public inspection "as soon as practicable."

Excluded from public gaze will be records dealing with cards issued to the military services and law-enforcement agencies, but inspection of any of the others "may take place at any time when it does not interfere with board business," OPA announced.

Motor Traffic Decreases

The order revising the confidential status of the records came at the end of a day which saw a considerable decrease in auto traffic and dwindling business for parking lots and filling stations as Washington entered another phase of its gradual but sometimes jerky metamorphosis from peacetime to wartime living.

Although there appeared to be no inclination on the part of motorists here to exchange their X cards, entitling them to unlimited supplies of gasoline, or their B-3 certificates, which are good for 57 gallons of gas between now and July 1, OPA reported that hundreds of persons elsewhere in the affected area had already contacted their local boards and offered to exchange their cards for others providing smaller rations.

Persons who obtained such cards "through a mistake, or misunderstanding of the regulation, may exchange them for proper cards," OPA said.

But, the agency announced, all preferred cards will be checked to see that persons holding them are actually entitled to them.

Fine and Prison Sentence

The OPA announcement also included a grim reminder that falsification of records or forms connected with any rationing plan is subject to a fine of not more than $10,000 or imprisonment up to 10 years.

As the rationing program became effective here, these were the chief developments on the local front:

Lawson J. Cantrell, who supervised the distribution of cards here, announced that a total of 137,447 were issued before the registration closed Thursday night.

The OPA announced that civilian defense workers who burn up their own gas in pursuit of emergency duties are entitled to apply for supplementary gasoline allotments

By a Vote of 66 to 2

Legislators Refuse to Give Up Privilege to Fill Gas Tanks

By vote of 66 to 2, the Senate yesterday turned down a resolution pledging its members to waive special privileges in obtaining gasoline.

Only the author of the resolution, Senator Downey (Democrat) of California, and Senator Pepper (Democrat) of Florida, voted for the proposal—which was the first thing on yesterday's calendar and elicited no direct debate.

Indignation created by the measure and criticism of the lawmakers for accepting unlimited "X" rationing cards found an outlet, however, when Senator Byrd (Democrat) of Virginia later in the afternoon told an attentive chamber that Government departments last year had 18,948 passenger automobiles—all entitled to "X" cards if used on official business.

These automobiles traveled 211,868,978 miles in the last fiscal year at a cost to the taxpayers of $4,813,560 for tires and gasoline, he said. While some of this travel and expense was necessary, the Virginia Senator declared, the "total undoubtedly is far in excess of what it should be."

He presented the travel statistics in a debate on the 680 million dollar Agriculture appropriation bill, which provides that the department, by August 1, must return $1,500,000 of its travel expenses to the Treasury.

Senator Wheeler (Democrat) of Montana, charged that much of the riding around in Government cars "made no sense" and was done by minor bureaucrats. He traced to Government bureaus the criticism of Congressmen for securing "X" cards and declared many of the departments were staffed with publicity agents and bureaucrats who "are earning more than they ever could earn in private industry."

"They take the money that Congress votes them to attack us with," he asserted. "Is it any wonder that newspapers attack Congress and say we are spineless and weak? It is time for us to assert ourselves."

Joint Return Is Approved By House Unit

Mandatory Feature Revived but Voted 'Only in Principle'

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Mandatory filing of joint income tax returns by husbands and wives who are living together was approved yesterday by a 13-to-10 vote of the House Ways and Means Committee.

The joint return requirement, estimated to yield more than 350 million dollars additional revenue, would abolish the present option under which married taxpayers may file either separately or jointly.

In approving the reform, which would force larger tax payments from middle and upper bracket married couples, the committee revived a controversy which last year drew the combined fire of women's organizations and eight community property States.

Chairman Robert L. Doughton said the proposal tentatively accepted was substantially the same as the provision of the 1941 tax bill which was rejected last year by the House after a sharp floor fight.

Only Principle Adopted

President Roosevelt took a hand in last session's fight by writing an eleventh-hour letter to Doughton in which he opposed joint returns unless special earned income credits were provided to protect husbands and wives who both work.

This year the proposal was revived by the Treasury itself with modifications along lines suggested by the President. Doughton indicated that only the principle was adopted and some refinements still have to be worked out.

Chief modification of the 1941 joint return plan recommended by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, is the following joint return formula:

A tax would be computed separately on the husband's earnings up to a maximum amount, and on the

Some Cuts Expected

Senate economy forces yesterday were set back in opening attempts to restrict the big $680,383,695 Agriculture Department appropriation bill but promised a return engagement on Monday when the main showdown comes on the measure.

Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, sought to trim authority for transfer of funds within the department.

The agency now has authority to transfer up to 5 per cent of any appropriation item to other uses. The bill increased this to 10 per cent. Byrd sought to return it to 5, but the Senate voted the increase, 46 to 22.

Senator Lee (Democrat), of Oklahoma, likewise failed in an effort to persuade the Senate to reconsider its action in rejecting the $1000 limit imposed by the House on soil benefit payments made to any one farmer. The Senate turned down the motion to reconsider, 15 to 46. The present ceiling on individual soil subsidies is $10,000, and this the Senate retained.

Other Items Face Fire

But principal economy fire was directed at provisions passed over until Monday, notably a 25-million-dollar cash increase over House figures for FSA, 55 million dollars additional authority for rural rehabilitation loans, and the department's 16 million dollar travel bill.

The Senate agreed to reconsider departmental travel expenses on Monday on motion of Senate Majority Leader Barkley after Byrd released figures showing 18,948 passenger cars owned by Government

Portland, Ore., May 15 (AP).—Senator Charles L. McNary, who was charged by his opponent with lagging in his war efforts as Republican minority leader in the United States Senate, took the lead at the outset in returns from today's primary election.

Senator McNary, who remained in Washington and did little campaigning for renomination, on the basis of the first 650 out of 1770 precincts received 42,486 votes to 10,350 for Arthur N. Geary, Portland attorney.

Representatives Walter M. Pierce (Democrat) and Homer Angell were leading in their districts, the second and third respectively.

Red Cross Sends Word

Devereux, Who Led Marines On Wake, a Jap Prisoner

Maj. James Patrick Sinnot Devereux, commander of that little handful of fighting Marines who won everlasting fame at Wake Island last December, is alive in Shanghai.

This message was received here last night in a phone call from his wife now living at Governors Island, N. Y., to members of the marine hero's family.

Joseph Devereux, a brother, of 1 Bradley Lane, Chevy Chase, Md., told The Post that Mrs. Mary Welsh Devereux, the officer's wife, said that news of her husband's safety had been transmitted to her by the International Red Cross. There was no word as to whether Maj. Devereux was wounded or physically well.

Major Devereux, who lists Washington as his home, was in command of the small force of Marines—14 officers and 371 men—when the Japs struck the American outpost in the Pacific. For 14 days the garrison stood off the Japs attacking from the air, sea and land. They sank a Japanese cruiser and three Japanese destroyers and withstood 14 air attacks and nobody knows how many attacks by land. And when the Navy in Hawaii asked Major Devereux, at the height of the battle, if he needed anything, he terse-

Sub Strikes In Mouth Of Mississippi

Freighter Blasted, 27 Seamen Killed; Another Explosion Shakes River Jetty

By International News Service

New Orleans, May 15.—An enemy submarine has penetrated to the very mouth of the Mississippi River to sink a large American merchant ship, with a loss of 27 lives, the Eighth Naval District announced tonight.

The attack marked the most brazen exploit to date of an Axis U-boat in American waters and also brought the greatest loss of life in a Gulf of Mexico torpedoing since the start of the war.

Equaling in audacity the recent enemy submarine foray into the waters of Canada's St. Lawrence River which resulted in the sinking of two United Nations ships, the attack on the American vessel was carried out in broad daylight the afternoon of May 12.

Hit Waiting for Pilot

Officers lost in the sinking included Capt. Bengt H. Larson of Squantum, Mass.; First Mate Einer H. Larsen, Hartford, Conn.; Second Mate Hjalmar Christofferson, jr., of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Third Mate Harry W. Benedict, Galveston, Tex.

The first torpedo struck, it was revealed, as the vessel waited only a mile and a half from the Mississippi River for a pilot to guide her through the difficult passages.

In all, three torpedoes ripped into the ship in rapid succession, turning it into a mass of flames. The resulting explosions were heard 40 miles inland.

The Navy announcement of the sinking noted that on the morning of the attack an explosion shook the east jetty of the southwest passage to the Mississippi. Cause of the explosion has not been determined, the Navy said.

Tht ship burned for six hours before she sank slowly in 100 feet of water, a hissing mass of twisted wreckage.

Seamen Rescued

Coast Guard boats rushed to the scene were able to pick up 14 seamen who had jumped free of the blazing ship. Seven bodies were recovered. The survivors were brought to a New Orleans hospital, all suffering from burns, and two in critical condition.

So quick and complete was destruction of the ship that those lost apparently had no chance to save themselves. One of the injured men brought to New Orleans was an oiler, Herbert Dann of The Dalles, Oreg.

"I knew I was a goner," he said, "'till I called on the Lord and He answered the prayer immediately.

"The smoke and flame was parted and a path cleared to the port side of the ship. There was my life preserver. I took it on, kicked off my shoes, jumped overside and started swimming. I swam until the Coast Guard cutter picked us up.

Our New Army

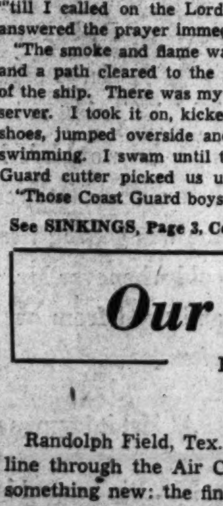
CHAPTER XIII

Randolph Field, Tex., May 15.—The time has come to draw a line through the Air Corps you used to know and write down something new: the fine young Air Force of today.

Write it not in terms of pilots alone but of teams; alongside the pilot write navigator and bombardier. And then you will have the key to what the Air Force is doing today, how it will take the air from its enemies and hold it and leave no hostile place unshadowed by its wings.



ANDREWS

The Air Force is growing. President Roosevelt has called for 60,000 pilots a year and the Air Force is giving them to him, keen young fellows, finely trained and proud of the wings they earned. And along with these pilots, the Air Force is training for combat many thousands of navigators and bombardiers.

That is the answer of the Air Force to global war, with its limitless fronts and tremendous distances. Today's airplanes, great monsters of outlandish power and range and capable of incredible destruction, are not the one-man affairs of World War I.

Air crews are going to win this war in the air; closely knitted teams of pilot, navigator and bombardier, each dependent on the other, to take the airplane to its target, hit the target when it gets there and come safely home again. It is a business now, a deadly and breathless business, but nontheless exacting for all that.

Where the Air Corps trained one pilot in the lean and peaceful years not so long ago, the Air Force trains a hundred now. These new cadets fly 200 hours under instruction before they get their wings, just as those cadets did back in the good old days, and they

Akyab Evacuated

New Delhi, India, May 15.—Remnants of the British army from Burma straggled across the border into India today while the Japanese pushed westward behind them and simultaneously probed deeper into China.

A military spokesman said the British, now estimated to number hardly more than 5000, had extricated themselves from a dangerous salient in the Chindwin Valley of Northwest Burma, escaping a Japanese attempt to get between them and the Indian frontier.

Akyab Force Evacuated

They had to destroy their heavy equipment, since they could not move it through the roadless wilderness where the streams were newly flooded by sudden rainstorms.

No land fighting has been reported in that section of Burma since Monday, and the spokesman said there had not even been contact with the Japanese for 24 hours.

Another small British force which had been left far behind in the port town of Akyab to do demolition work has been evacuated to India by sea.

British bombers again attacked Japanese barges on the Chindwin River, and U. S. Army fliers from India bombed the Myitkyina airdrome in North Burma yesterday for the second day in a row, reportedly destroying 15 enemy planes, but the Japanese were busily consolidating their hold on Burma.

Chinese Admit Loss

There was scant indication, however, that the end of the five-month battle of Burma would mark the beginning of a long-expected assault on India.

Despite roundabout Axis reports relayed by the Vichy radio that the Japanese already were 68 miles inside India on the way to Chittagong, dispatches from China and information here indicated the belief that the Japanese would concentrate in an effort to smash the ill-equipped armies of China.

(The German radio reported Friday night that Japanese planes destroyed 14 Allied craft on an airdrome in Manipur state, on the

LEADER OF THE WAACS—Oveta Culp Hobby

Bill Creating Force Signed, Mrs. Hobby Appointed Director

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

Ladies who wish to be officers in the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps can prepare now to tell civilian life goodby.

Recruiting stations will be ready to receive officer candidates' applications in about two weeks and the officers' training school for all accepted will open at Fort Des Moines, Iowa, within the next two months.

Their director and top-ranking officer will be Mrs. Oveta Culp Hobby, attractive 37-year-old Texan who was named by Secretary of War Stimson to head the corps yesterday as soon as President Roosevelt signed the bill.

Replacing Mrs. Hobby as director of the women's interest section of the War Department will be Mrs. Emily Newell Blair, well-known author, of Alexandria, Va., whose appointment was announced last night.

No Enlistments for Three Months

When President Roosevelt signed the WAAC legislation, he also issued an executive order limiting the first enrollment to 25,000, who will be trained in units not to exceed 100.

Privates in the new army, which eventually will have 150,000 members, cannot begin enlisting for about three months, Secretary Stimson said. They will be eligible for promotions later on, according to the announcement, which stated that after the first school all officer candidates would be selected from the enlisted personnel.

Uniforms for the corps are undergoing "a few last-minute changes," but priorities have been cleared and the manufacturers are ready to go. The Quartermaster Corps has had top designers at work on them and they are said to be complete down to underwear and cotton stockings.

Volunteers for the WAAC—first military organization of its kind in this country's history—can be between 21 and 45 years of age, either

3 From D. C. Aid as Sub Saves Gold

Three Washingtonians—two United States Navy officers and a Government official—participated in the thrilling saga of an American submarine that spirited out a vast treasure of gold and silver from Corregidor right under the noses of the Japanese forces.

The Washingtonians cited by the Navy Department for their part in the daring exploit are: Lieut. Alber Hobbs Clark, 30, whose wife and three children live at 4227 Fordham Road Northwest; Lieut. Harry Eades Woodworth, 26, whose wife's family lives at 716 Allison Street Northwest, and Woodbury Willoughby, former financial adviser to Francis B. Sayre, Philippine Commissioner. Willoughby, now back in Washington, is temporarily living at 2101 Connecticut Avenue Northwest.

In making the announcement of the exploit of the submarine early last February, the Navy Department said the operation was carried out so secretly the Japs never found out what was going on. The submarine was commanded by Lieut. Comdr. Frank W. Fenno, jr., of Westminster, Mass. On March 20 Commander Fenno was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross and his entire crew of six other officers and 64 men received Silver Stars for performing the feat.

Lecture for Home Front

Roosevelt Says D. C. Outdoes Entire Nation in Loose Talk

President Roosevelt asserted yesterday that there was more loose talk in Washington than in all the rest of the country put together and that lectures on the subject were very much needed.

In fact, he said, it is quite customary for him to deliver them, as he did Wednesday when the Pacific War Council met at the White House. Members of the council, representing seven of the United Nations actively engaged in the war in the Pacific, came away from the meeting urging the necessity for tight lips in wartime to prevent military secrets leaking out.

Mr. Roosevelt told a press conference frankly yesterday that he had lectured the council on loose talk, but he indicated the lecture was directed at such talk in all parts of the world.

He said he had mentioned the Far East. When informed that Prime Minister John Curtin of Australia had declared that the President was not talking about him, Mr. Roosevelt asserted his remarks were aimed not alone at Australia but at India, Egypt, South America and every continent.

"And at Capitol Hill?" a reporter inquired.

That is included in the District of Columbia, the Chief Executive replied.

Moscow (Saturday), May 16. Red army troops, beating a bloody path over the approaches to the great Ukraine industrial city of Kharkov, have destroyed or damaged more than 400 Nazi tanks in three days and still are advancing on that key to Germany's southern defenses, the Russians announced officially early today.

On the Kerch Peninsula the Soviet midnight communique said Russian troops defending that approach to the Caucasus oil fields "continued stubborn fighting."

(Reports to London indicated Marshal Semeon Timoshenko's troops had broken the inner defenses of Kharkov in at least two places. Some diplomatic informants in London asserted they had heard that Hitler was so gravely worried at the turn of events that he had ordered his Ambassador to Tokyo to make urgent representations to Japan for a Japanese attack on Siberian Russia.)

Reported in Suburbs

[International News Service said the Russians had broken through the first line of inner defenses at Kharkov and are now fighting at close quarters around a railway station in the city's northeastern suburbs.

[Meanwhile Reuters said German troops occupied all save the harbor area of the City of Kerch, but a Russian counteroffensive promptly drove them out of the town.]

"In the Kharkov direction our troops carried out offensive battles and are advancing," the communique said. "Our troops destroyed 255 guns, damaged over 250 tanks and brought down 40 enemy planes."

The 250 tanks damaged is in addition to 150 knocked out in two previous days.

A supplementary communique also said that Red airmen destroyed or damaged 100 more Nazi tanks Thursday on "various sectors of the front"—not making it clear whether these were in addition" to those at Kharkov.

Many Villages Taken

No other significant changes occurred on the long Russian front, but in the Barents Sea the Russians reported their airmen sank three enemy ships, including a transport.

Ford Operating Bomber Plant; Feel Bad, Hitler?

Special Dispatch to The Post

Detroit, May 15.—The Ford Willow Run bomber plant is now in operation.

This announcement Friday was approved for publication by the Army press relations officer. He will allow newspapermen to say this—and no more.

It's bad news for Hitler and Hirohito. And good news for Allied service men from Australia to Iceland. It's significant that the long-awaited word from the world's largest airplane factory came just 13½ months after ground was cleared for the project.

When in full production the Willow Run plant will produce as many heavy bombers as all the factories of the entire Axis are believed to be turning out.

2 U. S. Warships Sunk, Nazis Claim

Martinique Deal

French Crews Will Remain On Warships

By Wilfrid Fleisher

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Demobilization of the French warships stationed at Martinique, the strategic Caribbean island, was described by Secretary of State Cordell Hull yesterday as disposing of the most important point at issue in the negotiations which have been going on between Rear Admiral John H. Hoover, commander of the Caribbean Sea front, and Admiral Georges Robert, the French commissioner.

From a reliable source it is learned that the demobilization of the four French warships at Martinique calls for the removal of the breeches of the guns and essential parts of the machinery of the vessels which will be locked up in the American consulate at Fort de France. Marcel E. Malige is American consul there.

The French crews of the vessels will continue to be maintained aboard, after the removal of the parts, in order to prevent deterioration of the warships. The four warships are the aircraft carrier Bearn, 22,146 tons; the cruiser Emile Bertin, 5886 tons; the training ship Jeanne d'Arc, 6496 tons, and the cruiser Barfleur, 5000 tons.

It is learned that the land forts on the island are not to be dismantled, according to the agreement reached between Admiral Hoover and Admiral Robert, the French high commissioner.

The 100 American Army planes carried to Martinique aboard the French aircraft carrier Bearn are considered obsolete. The Bearn with its cargo of aircraft was on its way to France in June, 1940, when France surrendered to the Germans, and the vessel put in at Fort de France. The planes were landed there and have been deteriorating on a hillside ever since. The planes were two years old then and were being sent to France as an emergency. They have since suffered considerably from exposure.

Samuel Reber, assistant chief of the European division of the State Department, who accompanied Admiral Hoover to Fort de France, is remaining there to continue the negotiations on economic issues which, Mr. Hull said yesterday, include the disposition of approximately 150,000 tons of French merchant shipping and tankers at Martinique. Admiral Hoover has returned to Porto Rico.

The American Government may propose the French merchant ship tonnage be transferred to Latin-American registry. Reports from Vichy have pointed out that under the terms of the Franco-German armistice it cannot be transferred to any belligerent nation which would prevent it being turned over to the United States.

Secretary Hull indicated at his press conference yesterday that the major issues remaining to be settled at Martinique are economic ones and that they might require some time to adjust because of technicalities involved. Discussions, he said, were proceeding in the light of American objectives.

Cruiser, Destroyer Asserted Lost In Far North

(Dispatches from enemy countries are published with the warning that they frequently contain misleading information intended for propaganda purposes.)

Berlin (from German Broadcasts), May 15 (AP).—Germany declared officially today that the Nazi air force had sunk a United States cruiser of the 9100-ton Pensacola class and an American destroyer yesterday in attacks on an American squadron between the North Cape of Norway and the Arctic island of Spitzbergen.

Further, the Germans credited their air force with sinking in the Far North a 3000-ton ice-breaker and a 2000-ton merchant ship, hitting and setting on fire a freighter of 10,000 tons, and sinking four ships totaling 7500 tons in a British south coast harbor.

U. S. Makes No Comment

(There was no comment from Washington on the claims. However, the scene of the action as given in the German reports was the first hint that American Fleet units were operating so far along the Allied supply line to Murmansk and Archangel.)

Quoting a German military source, the German radio said the United States ships were seen yesterday morning by German reconnaissance planes and the attack came at 5 p. m.

Despite a heavy antiaircraft barrage, the German radio said, the bombers broke through and scored several direct hits on the cruiser, putting it in flames immediately.

The cruiser, it was said, sank about midnight. One of the four escorting destroyers picked up survivors and another of the four was fatally hit, the radio added.

Two in Pensacola Class

(The Pensacola class consists of the Pensacola and the Salt Lake City, each with a crew normally of 663 men. The vessels carry ten 8-inch guns as their main armament. Each has four planes launched by catapults and both were built in New York, the Pensacola in 1930 and the Salt Lake City in 1929.

(The destroyer was not identified further.)

D. N. B. said the icebreaker and the 2000-ton merchant vessel were bombed in a fjord at Spitzbergen, the large Norwegian island 400 miles off northernmost Norway.

(Canadian, British and Norwegian shock troops last September destroyed coal mines on Spitzbergen and removed several hundred anti-Nazi miners and their families.)

The 10,000-ton freighter was reported to have been set on fire near the Arctic coast north of Murmansk. The German high command said the ship "burned from stem to stern."

The ships in the British harbor were sunk during a night raid, the high command said, in which the planes flew low in the face of a balloon barrage and violent antiaircraft fire.

Reds Crack Inner Kharkov Line

planes were reported smashing at Kharkov.

Along a wide front (some British commentators pictured it at 40 to 50 miles) his troops had crossed the Donets River to the west and village after village outlying the great steel metropolis, said the official army organ, Red Star, was falling to his arms.

The Moscow radio announced that among the newly captured positions were heights of strategic importance before Kharkov.

"Our troops are inflicting blow after blow on the enemy and making successful advances," said this announcement. "The offensive spirit of our troops is rising every minute. The operation is developing into an irresistible drive."

On the Leningrad front, where another major Soviet offensive is under way, the Russians reported 2000 Germans killed and 23 enemy tanks destroyed or captured.

German losses were described in official Soviet accounts as enormous; the roads leading from the broken German first line into Kharkov were littered with Nazi dead, smashed tanks and cannon.

Some 400 miles to the south of this great action—on the Kerch Peninsula in the Crimea—other Russian forces were furiously fighting to hold the positions to which they had fallen back in their second forced retirement in that area.

Of that front, an earlier communique of the Soviet command said merely that the most stubborn battling was continuing.

(Reports from Axis sources indicated that Timoshenko also had thrown in a heavy attack along the north coast of the Sea of Azov against the German position at Pokrovsk, some 15 miles from Taganrog, in an effort to cut the German wing protecting the Kerch action while he hurled the bulk of his mighty force at Kharkov to the north.

(The German high command asserted that Nazi and Rumanian columns were "at the gates of Kerch" after having broken Russian resistance in the heights just short of the town, but had nothing to say of Kharkov other than that "fighting continues" and that 145 Russian tanks had been destroyed.)

Before Kharkov, said the front-line dispatches of Red army correspondents, Timoshenko's advance was increasing hourly in speed, although the German command was casting its reserve troops into the line at the moment they arrived, in semi-exhausted state, from their forced marches from the rear.

Despite the fact that the grand objective—Kharkov itself—had not yet been reached, Red Star declared that Hitler already had suffered "another heavy defeat" along the approaches to the city because of his vast losses in men and machines.

Reds Command Air

Aloft as well as afield the Russians claimed to command the situation. Soviet quarters reported that a squadron of Stormoviks in a single engagement had destroyed 30 Nazi planes on the ground and had shot down five German fighters which sought to intercept them.

Just east of both the Kerch and Kharkov battlegrounds, the Soviet rear continued to send forward an orderly flow of troops and supplies, apparently little hampered by German aviation.

Men arriving in Moscow from Baku, the great Caucasian oil center, reported that the Caucasus and eastern Ukraine showed few signs of enemy bombing, that plenty of Russian reserves were in evidence and that Russian transport was moving smoothly.

Reports from neutral centers indicated the Germans had been compelled to withdraw dive bombers from the Kerch battle in an effort to halt the Russian tank advance on Kharkov.

As the Chinese admitted loss of Tengyueh, important caravan town in western Yunnan Province, the threat to China appeared the most serious in nearly five years of stubborn warfare against the Japanese invaders.

The Chinese said they still had some forces in Burma, within 25 miles of Japanese-held Myitkyina, and that another column was within striking distance of the border town of Wanting, but the Japanese appeared to be paying little heed to these units. Instead, they concentrated on reinforcing their spearheads in China itself.

The Chinese expressed confidence that situation would soon be stabilized, but the Japanese already have isolated China from her Allies, have pushed 125 miles up the Burma Road, and are sending other forces northward into China from the Thailand and French Indo-China border zones.

Main Column in Combat

The main Japanese column was reported in combat with the Chinese at Hungmushu, on the west bank of the swift Salween River.

The east bank is held in strength by the Chinese, who have destroyed the river bridges to prevent a Japanese advance on toward Paoshan, 55 miles farther up the road.

"Send us some more Japs!"

The garrison was swamped December 24, 1941. The surviving Leathernecks were taken prisoner and since then no word had been received as to their fate.

Major Devereux's wife is with her father, Lieut. Col. John Welsh, on Governors Island. He once was stationed on Corregidor. Devereux and Miss Welsh were married about a dozen years ago. They have an 8-year-old son, Patrick, who is now with his mother.

A Four-Star Family

Major Devereux, a grandnephew of the late Archbishop Patrick Ryan of Philadelphia, is a member of a family that is entitled to display a flag with four service stars—more than that if sons-in-law and grandsons are counted.

The father, the late Col. John R. Devereux, served in Cuba under Gen. Leonard Wood. His oldest son, Joseph, fought in the World War.

Those now serving, besides Major Devereux, are Capt. John Devereux, jr., United States Air Corps; Lieut. Ashton Devereux, United States Air Corps, and Tristram Devereux, a flier with the Royal Canadian Air Force.

Three of the Devereux girls married men in the armed services. Margaret is married to Col. Richard Hull Jeschke, Marine Corps; Ann to Lieut. Comdr. Harry Chase, United States Navy, and Mary to Maj. Raymond Crist, Marine Corps.

Three months ago, a grandson, Jack, son of Joseph Devereux, enlisted in the Marine Corps. Another grandson, the son of Col. and Mrs. Jeschke, was graduated two days ago from V. M. I. and enrolled in the Marine Corps. A granddaughter of the Jeschkes, nicknamed "Slim," is married to Maj. John (Barney) Oldfield of the Marine Corps, who is on leave from the Atlantic Patrol.

Tokyo Replaces Publicity Chief

New York, May 15 (AP).—The Tokyo radio announced tonight that Capt. Kanji Ogawa had replaced Rer Admiral Inori Maeda of the imperil headquarters press section, and CBS listeners who picked up the broadcast suggested that the change might have been due to 'fantastic claims the Japanese put out after the battle of the Coral sea."

"Rear Admiral Maeda," the Tokyo announcement said, "is to be transferred to an important post at sea."

Japs Mass Planes To Peril Australia

Reinforced Fleet Is Believed to Be Operating to Counter Allied Blows

By C. Yates McDaniel
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters, Australia, May 15.—The Japanese, apparently stung by the effectiveness of Allied planes operating in the New Guinea and New Britain areas, have increased considerably their aerial squadrons in those strategic territories, reports to headquarters indicated today.

Further, the possibility that the Japanese might be having to use inexperienced pilots was seen by an Air orps spokesman.

[The United Press reported from Melbourne that American and Allied planes raided the Japanese airdrome at Lae on the northern coast of New Guinea today.]

Reporting that bombers in a raid on Rabaul, New Britain, yesterday shot down 7 of 17 Japanese fighter planes which intercepted them, he said that it was a remarkable score for such unescorted aircraft against the ultra-maneuverable fighters and that it raised the question of the experience of the Japanese pilots.

One hint of the increased Japanese strength was seen yesterday in the second of two quick raids on Port Moresby, southern New Guinea city. Thirty-five Japanese planes—the largest number of aircraft in one unit the enemy has yet sent over New Guinea—dropped bombs from a great height after 13 fighters strafed the airport in the first short raid.

The size of the force indicated that the Japanese would go to great lengths to keep the Allies from using Port Moresby as an air operations base. The bombers, however, did not hit a single worthwhile objective.

The second raid was Port Moresby's fiftieth since the war began.

Allied interceptors shot down two Zero fighters. No Allied planes were reported damaged.

Allied raiders attacking Japanese bases in New Guinea and New Britain are meeting stronger opposition, it was said, with Japanese squadrons apparently being reinforced at Rabaul, New Britain, and Lae, New Guinea.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters reported earlier that long-range Allied bombers, striking for the second straight day, raided Japanese shipping in Rabaul and returned safely from their brush with the 17 Japanese planes.

The Allied planes were said to have damaged at least one transport.

Headquarters announced that other Allied bombers attacked the Japanese seaplane base in the Deboyne Island group in the Louisiade Archipelago off the southeast tip of New Guinea, sinking a seaplane and setting fire to shore installations.

Australian Again Has Invasion Fears

Copyright by Chicago Sun

Somewhere in Australia, May 15 (Passed by Military Censor).—The indecisiveness of the Battle of the Coral Sea has put Australia on its toes. After a long lull during which Burma took the beating, the feeling that the Japanese may either try to strangle this continent from the outside or invade it is growing stronger by the hour—and so are the preparations to meet either of these possible eventualities.

What troubles many a thoughtful Australian is the suspicion that in the matter of priorities on equipment from America General MacArthur's command may be left behind.

It is realized here that Britain and Russia and the Middle East and all the area involved in the Battle of the Atlantic have urgent claims upon American men and material. Equally it is pondered here among Australians whether the powers that be in Washington and London share the Australians' full conviction as to how vital this continent may or may not be in the whole global scheme of the war.

There are some Australians who will concede the point publicly aired recently in both Washington and London that the Allies possibly could lose this immense island without ultimately losing the war. But no one on this side of the international date line who knows how to look at a map can find any other spot than Australia from which some fine day the offensive against Japan may be launched. Amid all the poppycock cabled here from Washington from the typewriters of "experts" who in all this war have never had their noses within several thousand miles of the stench of cordite, none has been more ridiculous than the description which came to us this morning calling Australia "impregnable."

Chief to Be Major

Mrs. Hobby, who has been with the War Department for almost a year, will have a rank equivalent to that of major. Other ranks will be "worked out" as organization continues. There will be assistant directors for each of the nine Army corps areas and officers in charge of such duties as personnel and housing.

All work of the corps will be noncombatant, its members replacing enlisted men who are now performing "duties as typists, telephone operators, clerks, laboratory technicians, etc." About 12,000 will be assigned to the Army's aircraft warning service.

MRS. EMILY N. BLAIR

In taking on responsibility for the WAAC, Mrs. Hobby is adding another "first" to her distinguished record. After graduation from the University of Texas Law School, she became the first woman legislative parliamentarian—serving in Texas. After that she was assistant city attorney in Houston. In 1931 she was married to William Pettus Hobby, who had served two years as Governor of Texas and who demonstrated his belief in women's rights by signing the bill giving suffrage to Texas women. They have two children—William Pettus, jr., 10, and Jessica, 5.

After her marriage Mrs. Hobby became interested in journalism, since her husband is publisher of the Houston Post. She was elected executive vice president of the paper in 1938 and is also a radio station executive.

"Office Personnel" was a problem to Mr. Pip

UNTIL...

MR. PIP was a boss. He ran a large office. But he was running so low on personnel that soon he wouldn't have anybody to be boss over. Not even his wife. Because she was getting tired of serving dinner cold whenever Mr. Pip came home late and tired from overwork. Which was often.

At last it happened.

Mr. Pip peeped in the door one night and instead of his wife he saw a note.

It said: "Am going home to mother, you brute. Your dinner is on the table. If you want me to come back, put a 'Help Wanted' ad in The Washington Post. When I see it, I'll know you'll never be late for dinner again—because The Post gets wonderful results★ for advertisers. It really does. Your loving, Wife."

The next day Mrs. Pip saw her husband's "Help Wanted" ad in The Post She laughed. She cried. She came running home.

And Mr. Pip came home in time for dinner ever after.

She laughed. She cried. She came running home.

Axis Inquiry Now Seeking Aid of Army

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

Attorney General Biddle's special prosecutors investigating sedition sought the Army's aid yesterday in obtaining testimony about the operation of the Charles E. Coughlin weekly, Social Justice.

The witness desired was Lieut. Bernard T. D'Arcy, now on duty in New York with the Engineer Procurement Division. Lieut. D'Arcy was described as the former manager of Coughlin's operations for the whole New York region.

Special Prosecutor William Power Maloney addressed a request to the commander of the Second Corps Area, Maj. Gen. William N. Haskell, for cooperation in securing the appearance of Lieut. D'Arcy next Thursday, for questioning before the special grand jury on Axis agents in Washington.

More Propaganda Details

Maloney and Prosecutors John T. M. Reddan and Lieut. (j. g.) Edward J. Hickey, U. S. N., plan also to question others believed to have information about the Social Justice operations.

Attorney General Biddle branded Social Justice "clearly seditious" last month and it was barred from the mails. Publication has been suspended.

Before Justice T. Alan Goldsborough in the District Court yesterday were disclosed more details of the propaganda activities of the organization, Jikyoku Iinkai, through which the Japanese government spent $195,000 to spread the doctrine that America had no enemies in Asia.

On trial before the justice are Frederick Vincent Williams and David Warren Ryder, accused of conspiring with the Japanese agent, Ralph Townsend—writer for Scribner's Commentator—and five Japanese to evade the Foreign Agents Act.

Sold Big Mailing List

Charles D. Ponton, formerly of the Ponton Co., of New York, took the stand in the blue uniform of a Coast Guardsman. Ponton testified that his company dealt in mailing lists and other services.

To Jikyoku Iinkai, the agency set up by Townsend and the Japanese, Ponton said he sold mailing lists totaling 250,000 names.

Tsutomu Obana—only one of the Japanese to face an American court—has already pleaded guilty. He testified yesterday that Jikyoku Iinkai submitted false statements, which were designed to conceal that its money, its inspiration and its orders all came from Tokyo.

Obana said the Takahashi, boss of Jikyoku Iinkai, told him to swear to the false statements, and he did so because he was afraid he would lose his job as secretary of the Japanese Chamber of Commerce in San Francisco.

Cross-examined by Defense Attorney Elisha Hanson, Obana said he did not like Takahashi.

But Errors Are Now Rectified, Cramp Official Declares

By the Associated Press

Ralph D. Weyerbacher, general manager of the Cramp Shipbuilding Co., acknowledged yesterday "some errors" and some "phony" bidding on subcontracts in the 12 million dollar job of restoring the long-idle Philadelphia yard, but told the House Naval Committee:

"We had to expand very rapidly. We've gone ahead economically and efficiently. We're way ahead of schedule."

That summary brought to a conclusion Weyerbacher's day-long testimony, during which he declared:

1. In 1939, he foresaw that "national policy and national defense" would bring the Nation to a need for more ships, and, as a result, began a study of the potentialities of the idle Cramp yard which led to its reorganization and rehabilitation.

2. That Charles F. Rohleder, whose subcontracts at the yard were the center of questioning over "phoney" bids, completed his work, amounting to $2,200,000 with a profit of only 6 per cent and "I doubt that any other contractor in the country has a record like that."

3. That, over Navy objections, he had attempted to put into effect a system of negotiated contracts, rather than those let on a competitive basis—a system, he added, which War Production Chief Donald Nelson put into effect only two months ago.

Navy Pleased, Bradley Says

As he completed his testimony, Representative Bradley (Democrat) of Pennsylvania, that committee's acting chairman, observed the Navy had informed him that it was "pleased" with the job which had been done in restoring the yard for naval construction.

Weyerbacher, a retired naval commander, who built the dirigible Shenandoah, said that he was "shocked" upon discovering those instances of "phoney" bidding, cases in which subcontractors submitted their own estimates along with other "courtesy" bids, higher in amount, for other contractors to meet a Government requirement for three bids on all work.

Toland Questions Witness

"What did you do upon discovering them?" pressed Edmund Toland, the committee's counsel.

"I called Rohleder down," responded Weyerbacher. "I gave him the devil." He added that the company had changed procedure, changed personnel and "doubled our precautions" to guard against future "phony" bidding. Rohleder was the general contractor for facilities at the yard.

Lieut. C. B. S. Priest, assistant supervisor of shipbuilding at a New York yard, testified that he had found Rohleder already at work before competitive bids for the job had been submitted to him and approved.

Bids from two other companies later were turned in, and Toland, describing them as "phony," introduced letters from the other two companies which wrote that they never had bid on the job.

10 of Troops Building Alaska Road Drowned

Edmonton, Alta., May 15 (INS).—The drowning of two American Army officers and ten enlisted men, employed in construction of the Alaskan highway, was announced by authorities tonight.

The men were aboard a scow on Lake St. John, and lost their lives when the scow capsized. Fourteen other men were rescued. Identity of the victims was not revealed.

Glassford to Head 6th Naval District

Rear Admiral William A. Glassford, jr., commander of American naval units in the Allied defense of the Netherlands East Indies, yesterday was ordered to duty as commandant of the Sixth Naval District, with headquarters at Charleston, S. C.

Since detachment of his southwest Pacific command some weeks ago, Rear Admiral Glassford has been on duty in the Navy Department here.

Rear Admiral Glassford in his new shore duty will relieve Rear Admiral William H. Allen, who will retire, having reached the statutory age limit.

Evie Drives a Jeep—Army Eyes Pop

HER OWN MECHANIZED DIVISION—Evie Robert drives off in a jeep

The jeep—all-weather, all-work combat car and pride of the Army—yesterday won the unqualified indorsement of Evie Robert, prominent society woman.

Mrs. Robert, the wife of Lawrence Wood (Chip) Robert, former secretary of the Democratic National Committee, revealed yesterday that she's had a wonderful time with a borrowed jeep all last week and is reluctant to give it back.

But although this particular jeep is a factory model and doesn't belong to the Army, officers have been stopping her and asking how come she's kicking around in a combat vehicle.

Seems that Mrs. Robert had to move some chicken houses on her 550-acre farm on the Eastern Shore, Md. She had no tractor, and the mules were stubborn about it. Word of the difficult situation reached the ears of a friend, who represents the jeep building company in the Capital, and he arranged to lend the social leader a demonstration model.

So for the past week, aboard a jeep, Mrs. Robert has been moving chicken houses, marking fruit trees and jeeping around on her chores.

Well, yesterday she came to Washington on business. Army officers stopped her and asked questions. She explained that she was returning the jeep to the lender tomorrow. Meantime, she'd like to have the Army know that there's more fun riding a jeep than a horse or an elephant.

U. S. to Grant 14-Day Leave To Inductees

Selectees will be sent home at Government expense immediately on induction and given 14 days to straighten out their personal affairs under a plan announced yesterday by National Selective Service Headquarters, acting in conjunction with the War Department.

The new system, designed to eliminate injustices likely to occur under the present arrangement of granting men 10-day furloughs on request, is slated to become effective June 15.

The announcement came as Washington's local Selective Service Boards prepared to intensify efforts to produce their share of man power necessary to meet the Nation's goal of an eight-million-man Army.

Under the revised procedure of granting selectees time to adjust personal affairs, men will be transferred to the Enlisted Reserve Corps for 14 days as soon as they have completed Army physical examinations at induction centers.

The Army will furnish transportation, meals and lodging for each reservist from the induction center to the city in which his local board is located and at the end of the 14-day period from the city to a reception center.

"Many of the disadvantages of the present system will be eliminated in the new procedure," National Selective Service Headquarters said.

For one, the new system calls for immediate release of all men who wish to go home whereas under the present arrangement some requests for furloughs have been denied or delayed. In other cases inductees have been unable to pay for transportation home.

"Every man who wishes to return to his home will be given the opportunity to do so without being required to establish his reasons for returning," National Headquarters said. "Investigation and recommendation by the local board is no longer necessary."

Plans of Washington local boards to speed up production of man power for the Army stemmed from a meeting Thursday night of National and District Selective Service officials with personnel of District local boards, the board of appeal, advisory boards and Government appeal agents. William E. Leahy, District Selective Service director, declared:

"The local boards in Washington are doing an excellent job. It is now imperative that they surpass the work previously done since America must go 'all out' for the war effort."

Particular emphasis was laid on classification of men with dependents. Registrants whose wives and families are not dependent upon them for support derived from earned income must be inducted, Leahy said, and local boards were again reminded that dependency obligations assumed after Pearl Harbor have no bearing on a registrant's classification unless circumstances beyond the registrant's control were involved.

Dr. Winfred Overholser, superintendent of St. Elizabeths Hospital, urged local boards to make use of records at the Board of Public Welfare's Selective Service Department referal center as a check on past mental illnesses of prospective selectees.

Local boards were requested by Dr. Francis X. McGovern, chairman of the District procurement and assignment committee for doctors, to refer to his organization for opinions on whether individual physicians are necessary men in their respective communities.

District Selective Service headquarters meanwhile announced the following registrants would report for induction this morning at Fort Myer, Va.:

to give them lots of credit. They sure were fine to us."

Another who fought his way to safety was Bert McDowell of Lima, Ohio, whom Dann singled out to praise for his heroism. McDowell, Dann revealed, leaped into the water and grabbed assistant engineer Albert H. Simmons of Houston, Tex., who had been thrown off the ship by one of the explosions. McDowell by himself probably would not have been able to save Simmons, and perhaps not himself, Dann said, had it not been for the help given them by yet another seaman, Mike Kuzman, of St. Paul, Minn.

Kuzman, noting McDowell was having trouble keeping both himself and Simmons afloat, swam over to lend a hand. And it was due to Kuzman's heroism, Dann stated, that the men were kept afloat until help came.

Shore Dimout Ordered

Atlanta, May 15 (AP).—An order prohibiting many types of lighting and restricting other illumination along the Southeastern Coast was issued today by Maj. Gen. William Bryden, Fourth Corps Area commander.

The order is applicable to all lighting for a distance of 10 miles inland and for city lighting, in communities of more than 5000 population, within 30 miles of the coast. States in the Fourth Corps Area affected are North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and all of Florida except the extreme northwestern portion.

Similar regulations already are in force along the rest of the Eastern seaboard to prevent silhouetting of ships to the advantage of Axis submarines.

Illuminated signs, floodlights and sports parks lighting are on the prohibited list. Street lights are to be dimmed and structures along shorelines are to black out all windows except those facing inland.

Roused by Sub Attack, Mexicans Call for War

Mexico City, May 15 (AP).—A deluge of demands that Mexico declare war on the Axis arose in political and labor quarters today as anger mounted over the first torpedoing of a Mexican ship in this war, with the loss of 14 lives.

Congressional leaders weighed the grave issue at an informal meeting but deferred action pending a reply from Rome, Berlin and Tokyo to the government's demand for "complete satisfaction." That demand set next Thursday as the deadline for a reply.

While the legislators were meeting a throng of National University students stoned the German Club in the heart of Mexico City. Several windows were smashed before police dispersed the demonstrators.

Hasty Parley Compromises On Wheat Price

By Joseph H. Short
Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

As the result of a conference called hurriedly by President Roosevelt last night, sale for feeding purposes of surplus wheat stocks held by the Commodity Credit Corporation probably will be limited to a price equivalent of 85 per cent of the parity price for corn.

The Chief Executive summoned Administration and Senate farm leaders to his office as the result of a threat from the Congressional grain bloc to modify provisions in the agriculture appropriation bill permitting unlimited sales of corn for feeding and alcohol manufacture, unlimited sales of wheat for alcohol and 125 million bushels of wheat for feeding.

Informed persons said a likely compromise would be an amendment preventing Government wheat sales from breaking the feed corn market by placing a floor under the surplus wheat price.

Cabinet Men at Parley

The current price of corn is 86 cents per bushel. The parity price is 96.9 and 85 per cent of this is 82.3. The proposed compromise, as explained in authoritative quarters, would not mean wheat sales at the latter figure, but at a figure equivalent to that, when the heavier weight of usable wheat is taken into consideration in relation to corn.

The conferees at the White House were Vice President Henry A. Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard, Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., and Senators Richard B. Russell (Democrat) of Georgia, John H. Bankhead (Democrat) of Alabama and Charles L. McNary (Republican) of Oregon. Russell is floor manager of the Agriculture appropriation bill, Bankhead a leader of the farm bloc and McNary Senate Republican leader.

As passed by the House, the appropriation measure would have prevented sale of Commodity Credit Corporation's stocks of 350 million bushels of wheat and 68 million bushels of corn unless it had "substantially deteriorated."

Restrictions Removed

At the Administration's behest, the Senate Appropriations Committee modified this drastically, removing restrictions of corn sales for feeding and alcohol and also opening the door to sales of large quantities of the Government-held wheat.

The President was represented as being "perfectly satisfied" with the Senate committee version and willing to compromise on a floor under the surplus wheat price equivalent to 85 per cent of corn parity.

The matter comes before the Senate Monday and between now and then, informed persons said, the proposed compromise will be discussed among farm bloc senators. Under pressure from the White House and with assurance that wheat would not be used to force down corn prices, it was expected that the compromise would be agreed to by a sufficient number of senators to insure its final Senate approval.

Manchukuo-Mongolia Border Dispute Settled

Moscow, May 15 (AP).—A possible source of Russian-Japanese friction in the Far East was removed today through ratification of an agreement by Manchukuo and Outer Mongolia to end their border dispute which erupted into open warfare in the summer of 1939.

An accord delimiting the boundary between the two countries was signed October 15 at Harbin, in Japanese-dominated Manchukuo, and its ratification announced today simultaneously there and at Ulan Bator, capital of Outer Mongolia, protege of the Soviet Union.

(The long border dispute ostensibly was between Manchukuo and Outer Mongolia but most of the fighting two years ago was by Japanese and Russian troops. In one battle which lasted several weeks around the border town of Nomonhan the Japanese admitted 18,000 casualties among their troops.)

Norwegian Teachers Tell Of 'Hell Ships'

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, May 15.—"Thou shalt honor thy father and thy mother, and above all thy fuehrer," is the new version of the Fifth Commandment which the Nazis are trying to impose in Norwegian schools, according to five Oslo school teachers who have reached England after escaping from Norway.

The teachers—four men and a woman—today described systematic German attempts to corrupt the minds of Norwegian children by inculcating Nazi doctrines, but only about 2 per cent of the country's 15,000 teachers have yielded to German pressure to "cooperate," they said.

"Of the resisting teachers nearly 5000 have been flung into concentration camps, including 496 packed in the notorious "hell ship" Skjerstad and sent to an Arctic slave camp near Kirkenes. How many survived that fearful voyage no one knows, and they say another slave ship has already left Trondheim for the Arctic Circle."

R.A.F. Sinks Minesweeper, Damages Two

By the Associated Press

London, May 15.—R. A. F. Spitfire and Hurricane bomber planes attacked three German minesweepers steaming in a line near the north coast of the Cherbourg Peninsula today, sinking one, leaving a second in a sinking condition and damaging the third.

The attacking planes struck as the ships were about 4 miles offshore. The first vessel was hit amidships and blew up. The second was "set on fire and left sinking," a communique said, and the third was "also hit with bombs and damaged."

No British craft were lost in the operation.

Malta Shoots Down 5 Raiders, Damages 6

Valletta, Malta, May 15 (AP).—Five Axis planes were shot down and six damaged over Malta today without the loss of a single R. A. F. craft.

A revised official tabulation showed 21 German planes destroyed or damaged over Malta yesterday, of which six bombers and five fighters were destroyed.

House Group Cool to C.I.O. Women's Plea To Hike Army Dependents' Payments

Labor Auxiliary Asks FSA Be Given Power to Aid

A suggestion from the C. I. O. women's auxiliaries that proposed Government payments to dependents of service men be increased sharply and that the Federal Security administrator be empowered to augment them got a cool reception yesterday from the House Military Committee concluding hearings on legislation whereby dependents would receive part of the service men's pay plus additional sums from the Government.

Payments originally proposed, said Mrs. Eleanor Fowler, Washington, secretary-treasurer of the Congress of C. I. O. Women's Auxiliaries, are "absolutely inadequate" and should be boosted substantially.

On behalf of the wives, mothers, sisters and daughters of C. I. O. workers, Mrs. Fowler told the committee that in some cases the original proposal would not permit dependents "to survive."

She pointed out that under provisions of the pending bill a dependent wife with two children would receive a total of $60 a month, made up of $20 from her husband's pay and $40 from the Government. Under the C. I. O. recommendations, the same family would receive $90.

Mrs. Fowler urged that the maximum allotment from the soldier's pay be retained at $20, but that the Government allowance be doubled from $20 to $40 for a wife and increased from $10 to $15 for each child.

She offered no proposal to increase payments to secondary dependents, such as parents, brothers, sisters or grandchildren, which would be a maximum total of $50 per month.

The auxiliary went on record as favoring the recommendation of Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt that he be permitted to give additional allowances to dependents in hardship cases. It was the only group that actively backed the McNutt plan.

Chairman May, Democrat, Kentucky, and other committee members said the additional cost of Mrs. Fowler's proposals would be prohibitive, and predicted the McNutt proposal also would be turned down when closed sessions are held next week.

Frank T. Hines, head of the Veterans' Administration, indorsed the pending bill as necessary to morale and told the committee that while the Veterans' Administration was willing to administer it, he believed the Army and the Navy should handle it.

GOLD FROM THE PHILIPPINES is delivered safely at Pearl Harbor as sailors lift it from submarine wealth, to banks and to mines and individuals.

On the night of February 3, the submarine stood off Corregidor and unloaded much-needed antiaircraft ammunition and took on gold and silver. The following day the submarine hid off shore and that night secretly loaded ton after ton of gold and silver. The work went on until 4 a. m. Then at dawn, the sub arranged a rendezvous with an auxiliary vessel in Manila Bay the next night. It put out to sea 3 miles and submerged to spend daylight under the sea.

When nightfall came, the auxiliary vessel sailed from Corregidor to the rendezvous with her load of securities The sub did not make her appearance immediately. But after a while, the dark bulk of the sub pushed through the surface.

But No Passengers

"It took about 20 minutes to transfer the securities," Willoughby said. "Then Commander Fenno made a remark I'll never forget. His crew had gone below and he was standing by the conning tower preparatory to giving the order to submerge. 'Any passengers?' he asked cheerfully. Any of us would have been glad to get aboard that submarine but it was not for us to leave. We had to tell him No."

Willoughby, to whom the Navy gave much credit for collecting the wealth, said air raid after air raid warning sounded during the long days and weeks required to collect the metals, currency and securities in Manila and other points.

"Frequently bombs fell close to us, taking their toll of lives and property," he said. "As fast as shipments were collected we took them to Corregidor, using whatever boats were available. The docks were blasted by bombs and bombs fell in the water about them."

Paper Currency Burned

When all the valuables had been collected, paper currency, which can be reissued here, was listed by number and burned. The submarine took her cargo to a Pacific base, where it was transferred to a cruiser which took it to San Francisco.

Mansion's Walls Yield Fortune; Search Continues

Hornerville, Mo., May 15 (AP).—Walls of the 18-room mansion of an aged physician-planter which already have given up a sizeable fortune will be torn down in a search for further treasure.

Between $200,000 and $250,000 in cash and securities has been uncovered from the old house of Dr. F. Kinsolving, who died May 5 at the age of 79.

Trustees of the estate said that two wills have been found, but search continued for a small black bag the retired physician usually carried, in the belief it contained a later testament. He is survived by a son and daughter.

Those making the search said $130,000 had been found in a metal box behind the basement wall, $26,000 in another part of the basement and $1700 in a tin can. One searcher found $270 in currency in books in Dr. Kinsolving's extensive library.

Dr. Kinsolving operated farms for many years in Missouri, Arkansas, Kentucky and Virginia.

British Women Urged To Go Bare-Legged

London, May 15.—The women of Britain were urged by the board of trade today to go bare-legged this summer so that none will have to go without stockings next winter.

"There is a definite shortage," an official of the board declared, "and a suggestion that stockings be sold singly so that odd ones can be matched is to be considered."

School Patrolmen Hold Rally Today

A rally of 5000 school safety patrolmen will be held at 7:30 p. m. today at Uline's Ice Arena, taking the place of the annual School Safety Patrol parade, canceled because of war conditions. Similar rallies will be held in various parts of the country.

The program will include an hour's demonstration of the use of infantry weapons by the 176th Infantry Regiment, selections by the Police Boys Club Band, boxing bouts and tumbling acts by club members and professional acts by New York and Philadelphia entertainers.

Policewoman Gets Rank of Detective

Private Dorothy F. Douglas of the Police Department Public Relations Squad was promoted to the rank of precinct detective last night. In recommending the promotion, Police Chief Edward J. Kelly said that for a number of years Private Douglas has been doing practically all of the work of the squad insofar as female cases are concerned.

The additional $240 per annum that the promotion will mean will be paid from lapsed salary fund. Private Douglas is the third woman to be made precinct detective within recent years.

fly their 200 hours in 32 weeks instead of the 52 weeks of prewar days.

The answer to that is total use of all equipment; training planes are flown from 8 a. m. to 6 p. m. with no time out for lunch, 10 hours a day, 6 days a week. And there are plenty of them. That time a year ago when combat planes waited while training planes rolled off the production lines is paying high dividends.

And, in addition, the course has been shortened and intensified. Pilot cadets are taught what is essential to combat flying and what is essential to military organization and discipline, and that is all. The intimate knowledge of engines and instruments is left to the mechanics.

Young men who would like to be Air Force pilots are not hard to get. They volunteer in swarms, from civil life and from the ranks of all the Army, eager to fly, eager to reflect the bright glamour of the war of war trod by the aces of yesterday.

Though the Air Force has relaxed its standards, without appreciably lowering them, only about one in five of the men who wish to fly can meet them. To get 60,000 pilots the Air Force must examine 300,000 applicants, must carry at least 80,000 of them through some part of training. And on top of that, it must train another 20,000 or so to get 15,000 for the navigator and bombardier places on the team.

So the young man who wishes to fly in this war does not enlist for pilot training; he enlists as an air crewman, and as such is sent to the Air Force Reception Center at Kelly Field, across San Antonio from Randolph. There he is given an examination which will determine his aptitude for one place or another in the crew.

Very probably the glamour and the romance of flying brought him to Kelly to earn his wings and pilot a fighting airplane against the enemy. Perhaps it never occurred to him before he got there that air fighting needed other than pilots.

What place he will fill on the air team is determined in the end by one thing and one alone: his country's need.

He may pass the physical and aptitude tests for pilot and at the same time show himself suited for navigator and bombardier. He may have expressed a desire (and probably has) to pilot an airplane. He may even hold a civilian pilot certificate. If there are sufficient others who asked to be bombardiers or navigators or could not pass the tests for pilot he probably will get his chance to learn to fly.

But if navigator or bombardier cadets are needed, their quotas must be filled from those who have passed the aptitude test for pilot. Some of these lads are bitterly disappointed and recover only when it begins to dawn upon them how vitally important they will be to the success of the team in the air.

They go to Kelly badly conditioned for this change in their hopes. They have read of great feats of arms by bomber plane crews and then have seen the medals go to the pilots alone. They have been told that navigators and bombardiers are chaps who tried to fly and failed, which is not true at all. A lot of false notions burden them when they get to Kelly, notions which they discard after they learn the truth about bomber fighting.

How the Air Force determines just what place in the air crew an aspirant is fitted for involves a day-long bout with a set of ingenious and almost human machines and a round of oral and written examinations on many subjects. Admittedly, nothing but experience in an airplane will make absolutely certain whether a cadet can fly.

But the probability of his learning to fly well and safely can be determined, and that is what is done at Kelly. His coordination of mind, eye and muscle is established, his ability to accommodate himself to new things, his faculty of judgment, his quickness and accuracy of reasoning are marked. Then he is given a series of tests which bring out not how much he has learned but whether he can learn what he needs to know; the Air Force wants intelligence, not mere education.

On the basis of these tests the cadet is graded as a pilot, navigator or bombardier. Sometimes he ranks equally well in all three; sometimes he shows low probability of learning flying but is a whiz at mathematics. So he is rated as a flying cadet, a navigation cadet or a bombing cadet and goes off to school.

Should he fail at flying and his other grades are high, he gets a chance at navigation or bombing. If he cannot make the grade as a navigator or bombardier, he still may get a chance to earn his commission on the ground as an engineer, communications, photographic, weather or armament officer. The Air Force wants to keep him if it can, because it needs him.

(Tomorrow: Cadet entering Randolph has good chance of finishing.)

Women Want To Bare Legs For Duration

By Anne Hagner
Post Staff Writer

WHICH DO YOU LIKE BEST?—Peggy Backus prefers hose; Suzanne Dunning goes bare-legged, and Pat Orr wears socks. That's the way with these G. W. Coeds

Washington women, at a wide divergence of opinion with the First Lady, would like to go barelegged this summer, if only the rules of strict ethics could be relaxed.

Mrs. Roosevelt told reporters at her press conference Thursday that she thought most women looked "very ugly" without stockings, but the ladies differ—almost to a woman.

Most of the feminine contingent questioned yesterday observed that going without "for the duration" would be most patriotic and, they emphasized, decidedly more comfortable.

Mrs. Richard Hume of 2113 S Street Northwest, wife of an Army captain, agreed with Mrs. Roosevelt about slacks being taboo for office wear, but remarked that nicely browned legs without hose are attractive enough for general usage.

"Or, if the legs are too pale, there are several excellent 'ersatz stocking' preparations in lotion form that are extremely becoming," Mrs. Hume added.

"Slacks? Oh, no!" she exclaimed. "Skirts are far more graceful. Really, a fishing boat is the only place I can think of in which slacks are completely appropriate."

Peggy Bohanan, attractive Kappa Kappa Gamma Sorority member at Maryland University, prefers ankle socks for the campus but "never slacks!"

Subject of Controversy

"Some girls here at College Park wear them around the house," she said, "but never in public. We do like going without stockings, but we find that ankle socks and saddle shoes are more comfortable than high heels for trudging to classes."

Patricia Prochnik, society singer and daughter of former Austrian Minister Edgar L. G. Prochnik, goes without stockings all summer but agrees with Mrs. Roosevelt that stockings are better for office wear.

"They seem much neater, somehow," she said. "But slacks—I do think that women in slacks are atrocious. For the privacy of the home they are all right, but otherwise they are inexcusable. And I do wish girls wouldn't wear them bicycling; culottes are far more becoming."

Jean Craighead, of 5301 Forty-first Street Northwest, believes that accustoming the world in general to bare-legged ladies is merely a matter of conditioning.

"Remember when bobbed hair came into vogue in 1928?" she asked. "No end of fuss was made over it at the time, but it soon became a general fad. Any sudden change is apt to cause tremendous comment, but it shouldn't last long.

"I do think Mrs. Roosevelt is justified in saying that Government workers shouldn't wear slacks in offices unless the job calls for it. They are good in industry or outdoors, but there is no actual need otherwise."

Ruth Kearney, who is employed at the Department of Justice, likes stockings for working hours but prefers to go without during her leisure.

"I have seen no one going without stockings in our building," she said, "although some Government girls go in for ankle socks. Slacks, though, are too unattractive for words and have no place in offices."

Most George Washington University girls interviewed on the subject held up their hands in horror at the thought of slacks on the campus, although they are seen occasionally and are not frowned upon by the administration.

"I don't like slacks, but it is wonderful to go without stockings," observed Betty Owen, a fair-haired freshman. "Naturally, tan legs help out a great deal."

Catherine Moore, a senior, took time out from studying for final exams to say that stockings are "much too expensive and I'd love to go without, if only the custom would come into general approval."

Bette Meloy, a junior, was in favor of leaving slacks entirely out of milady's wardrobe.

"They look uncouth and distinctly farmerette in classes," she said.

Peggy de Freyre, attractive young daughter of the Peruvian Minister, agreed with the First Lady on both scores.

"Stockings are so neat that I think girls look bad without," she said. "Slacks may be more practical for the few girls who look well in them, but they are so unbecoming to most women that they have become generally unpopular."

As for the gentlemen, most of them agreed that "lots of girls look fine with or without stockings—but don't let 'em wear slacks!"

Collective Bargaining at Loggerheads With Pay Stabilization, Henderson Says

Middle and Upper Classes to Feel Pinch, He Warns

By the Associated Press

New Orleans, May 15.—Leon Henderson, Federal Price Administrator, said here tonight that "today collective bargaining comes head-on in collision with stabilization of income."

He asked, however, in a speech prepared for delivery before the National Conference of Social Work, tolerance while adjustments are made. Henderson spoke on "The Coming Changes in Our Standard of Living."

"One of the major freedoms of our way of life has been the freedom to bargain collectively for higher wages, and by that bargaining the American standard of life has had a steady measure of forward tread," he declared. "Today collective bargaining comes head-on in collision with stabilization of income.

"If I had but one appeal to make tonight, I should earnestly ask tolerance and forbearance while these two great necessities are satisfactorily adjusted. Certainly morale, again one of our precious components of life, rests just as heavily on this as it does upon a full stomach."

In painting his picture of giving up of consumer goods for war production, Henderson said the standard of living of the upper and middle income brackets will be reduced much more sharply than that of the lower one-third of our population.

"How far we will have to cut civilian production before the war is over, no one today can foresee perfectly," he said. "As far as we can see today none of us, barring such natural disasters as drouth or flood, will be deprived of any of the goods really essentital to our welfare; all of us will have enough to eat, we will all have adequate shelter and enough clothing and fuel to keep us warm and dry. In this assurance, let us remember, we are far more fortunate than any of the other nations actively participating in this war."

Henderson said he saw no prospect at this time of curtailing flour or bread or fresh fruit or vegetables. He declared more sugar might be found for home canning.

"With respect to meats, there may be considerably more of a squeeze—not because we are producing less in the aggregate, but because we must make heavy shipments, particularly of pork products to Europe and Russia," he warned.

Fred K. Hoehler of Chicago was chosen president of the conference, and Martha M. Eliot, Washington, D. C., was named to the executive committee.

Women Urged to Kindle Spark For Great War Bond Drive

Women everywhere were urged last night to redouble their efforts in the war bond and stamp savings program so that their rousing enthusiasm will be felt in the factories, training camps and the front lines.

The appeal was made by Mrs. Eugene Meyer, wife of the editor and publisher of The Post, in a broadcast over WINX, concluding the series, "War Is Women's Business," sponsored by the women's division of the District war savings committee.

Women as a group may not be able to get or make the bigger contributions, Mrs. Meyer said, "but we can get millions of little contributions. And that's what counts."

Mrs. Meyer declared: "A rousing success in this campaign will give women a new pride, a new security, a new feeling of being directly enlisted in the war effort.

"Our enthusiasm will spread to our men in the factories, to their employers, to the training camps, yes, even to our sons and brothers battling for the survival of civilization over the face of the globe."

Mrs. Meyer urged that the meaning of the bonds be made a reality in terms of jeeps or tanks or bombers.

"The payroll cut for bonds is necessary for many reasons," she said. "But it is a cold procedure because it deprives the individual of the satisfaction that comes from spontaneous giving. Yet the program can be humanized by showing all men and women just what they have achieved in actual war materials."

The men and women who contribute will then have double satisfaction of helping win the war and helping themselves at the same time, the speaker declared.

Treasury officials, she asserted, want to make it clear that to buy bonds with spare change isn't enough.

"The need is so great that it can only be met by cutting down our daily expenditures in our personal lives," Mrs. Meyer said. "The President, in his anti-inflation message, called upon the American people for 'rigid self-denial' and added 'We cannot have all we want if our soldiers and sailors are to have all they need.' In other words, we have got to recapture the inventiveness and the adaptability that enabled our American pioneers to get along with less.

"The women of America can do no greater service than to make last year's clothes serviceable for another year, to patch up old appliances instead of buying new ones and to save in every possible way for the purchase of war bonds.

"Our people will save all the more gladly if they realize that many war materials which they might otherwise buy for civilian use will thereby become available for war purposes."

SHIRER

STARTING SUNDAY

William L. Shirer—the man who watched Propaganda do its deadly stuff to Hitler's Germany for six years and wrote his "Berlin Diary" account of it for millions of readers, will write a once-a-week newspaper column exposing Axis propaganda in America. Shirer's column will appear every Sunday in The Washington Post.

Shirer watched Hitler come to power via the great lie . . . then watched him use more and bigger lies to wear down the rest of Europe, until the average French soldier was saying to himself: "Why are we fighting another war . . . why don't we just go home and forget it?"

Shirer can sense propaganda where others can only guess at it or fail to suspect it, because his reporting nose-for-news has been trained to it.

Only last month the Librarian of Congress and head of the Office of Facts and Figures, Archibald MacLeish, warned:

"Propaganda attacks upon the American people will not come advertised as propaganda . . . they will appear to come as American suggestions originating within the United States."

Shirer is going to do something about that. He will be on constant watch and will report every Sunday, starting tomorrow, in

District Churches to Observe I Am An American Day Tomorrow

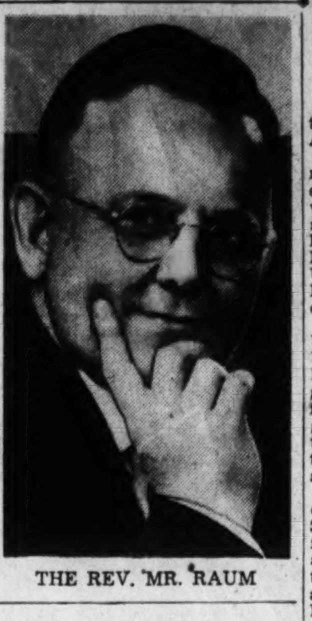
City-Wide Services Will Be Conducted In U. S. Auditorium

Religious and patriotic services here tomorrow will commemorate "I Am An American Day," as proclaimed by President Roosevelt as an occasion for rededication to America and its ideals.

"At no other time in our national history," declared the President's statement, "have the people of the United States had more reason to chant, with great pride, 'I Am An American!' It is a phrase that should stand out above all others.

"I urge that the day be set aside as a public occasion for the recognition of all our citizens who have attained their majority or who have been naturalized during the past year; and I call upon Federal, State and local officials and patriotic, civic and educational organizations to take part on that day in exercises designed to impress upon all our citizens, both native-born and naturalized, the duties and opportunities of citizenship and its special responsibilities in a nation at war.

"* * * It is even more essential in time of war than in time of peace that a people should fully understand the form and genius of their government and the responsibilities of citizenship."



THE REV. MR. RAUM

One of the leading celebrations will be a city-wide service at 8 p. m. in the Departmental Auditorium, Thirteenth and Constitution Avenue Northwest.

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, will deliver the invocation. Speakers will include Dr. William F. Russell, dean of Teachers' College, Columbia University, and Marshall E. Dimock, associate commissioner, United States Immigration and Naturalization Service, Department of Justice.

Music will be furnished by the United States Navy Band and the Washington A Cappella Choir of First Congregational Church. A group of South American students from the naturalization school will give a pageant. Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the District Board of Education, will preside.

First Methodists, Defense Committee To Stage Rally

The congregation of First Methodist Church, 514 Fourth Street Southeast, and the Civilian Defense Committee for the Southeast area, will cooperate in a patriotic rally tomorrow at 8 p. m. at the First Church. The Rev. A. F. T. Raum, pastor, will preside.

Speakers will include Charles M. Thomas, Comdr. Frank Buckley, W. G. Cornelius, James O'Brien, Victor Perlmutter and Grover Hartman. Mr. Hartman is Federation of Churches' defense commissioner.

Many Catholic Groups Will Attend Annual Military Mass

Among the national Catholic organizations which will be represented at the fourth annual solemn memorial military field mass, at the Arlington Amphitheater on May 24 at 10 a. m. are the following:

The Supreme Council of the Knights of Columbus will be represented by Francis J. Heazel, of Asheville, N. C., supreme treasurer; the National Council of Catholic Men, Edward F. Heffron, executive secretary; National Council of Catholic Women, Miss Margaret T. Lynch, executive secretary; Catholic Daughters of America, Miss Katherine Ruppert; Ancient Order of Hibernians, Joseph E. Kerrigan, of Lawrence, Mass., national president; Ladies Auxiliary, Ancient Order of Hibernians, Mrs. Anna M. Carey, of Trenton, N. J., national president; Catholic Central Verein of America, William H. Siefen, of New Haven, Conn., national president; National Catholic Women's Union, Mrs. Mary Fileer Lohr, of New York City, national president.

Miss Elizabeth J. Dolan, state regent, will represent the national office of the Daughters of Isabella; the Ladies Auxiliary, Knights of St. John, will be represented by Mrs. Wilfred P. Ross; Thomas J. Quinn, of Philadelphia, national commander of the Order of the Alhambra; Western Catholic Union, Miss Alberta Kroner, representing national office; Miss Cristobel Hill, District Governor will represent the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae; National Alliance of Czech Catholics; Martin Conboy, of New York, National President, Georgetown University National Alumni.

Mrs. Francis M. Moran, of Jamaica Plains, Mass., will come to Washington to personally represent Theta Phi Alpha Fraternity. She is national president of the group.

Every local post of Veteran Organizations has been invited to be present with their post colors. They are to be under the direction of Frederick J. Roy and Henry Hodges, both representing the Catholic War Veterans. It is expected a number of out of town posts of the Catholic War Veterans will be present.

Following the mass more than fifty national and local Catholic organizations will place wreaths at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

Bible Classes to Dedicate Room at Mission Tuesday

Members of the District of Columbia Organized Bible Class Association on Tuesday at 8:15 p. m. will formally dedicate the room they are furnishing at the Central Union Mission's John S. Bennett Memorial Building.

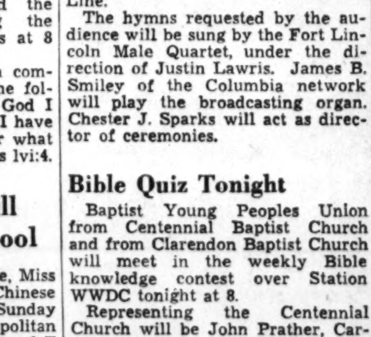
"O LOVE THAT WILT NOT LET ME GO"
— GEORGE MATHESON —

O Love that wilt not let me go.
I rest my weary soul in Thee;
I give Thee back the life I owe,
That in Thine ocean depths its flow
May richer, fuller be.



Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS

Written with extreme rapidity in the Clydeside Manse of Innellan in Scotland in 1882, it was, as the author tells us, the fruit of acute mental distress and personal sorrow suffered by long years of blindness.

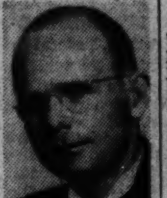
Federation's Drive Cheers Campaigners

Churches' response to the Federation of Churches' annual budget drive indicates that a new day is dawning for cooperative Christianity in the Nation's Capital, campaign leaders said yesterday. This year's goal is $34,288.85.



Rev. Borchers

"The response given the appeals for funds is most heartening," said the Rev. Walter G. Borchers, federation administrative assistant and former associate pastor of First Congregational Church. "Our records show that to date no person who contributed last year has refused to give this year, and a substantial number have materially increased their giving.

"One person increased his giving 2000 per cent. In one church the number of contributors has increased 800 per cent. Another church increased its appropriation for the federation 300 per cent, while another congregation doubled its budget giving. A church with 3500 members is conducting a vigorous campaign to reach the average goal of 50 cents per member. A very substantial number of individuals who have never shared in our work before are making gifts this year and a growing number of churches are affiliating with the federation. Several churches which are not yet members of the federation are volunteering support.

"With the cooperation, commitment and consecration evidenced by these facts a new day is dawning for united and community minded Protestantism in the Nation's Capital."

Walter W. Britt, chairman of the Federation's Finance Committee and active lay leader of First Congregational Church, said in his statement that the churches here are becoming "increasingly more aware" of the tremendous power for community good that can be exercised through the federation.

"Not only are they becoming more aware but we are finding, through the campaign for finances now in process, that the ministers and laymen are intensely interested in making the campaign a success.

"Sixty per cent of the member churches are fully organized with key men and committees; the remainder are in the process of appointing key men and organizing committees and I am sure they will make it a unanimous drive as the campaign progresses," he said.

Father Ryan to Speak

The Rev. Dr. John K. Ryan, associate professor of philosophy in the Catholic University of America, will give a talk from Station WWDC tomorrow from 3:30 to 3:45, under the auspices of the Pius XI Guild. Dr. Ryan will speak on "Between Ascension and Pentecost."

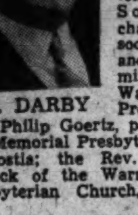
Presbyterians To Hold Parley In Milwaukee



DR. DARBY

Prominent local and nearby clergy and laymen will attend the 154th General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, convening on Thursday in Milwaukee, Wis.

They will include Dr. W. L. Darby, president of the Washington City Bible Society and chairman of the social education and action committee of the Washington City Presbytery; the Rev. Philip Goertz, pastor of Garden Memorial Presbyterian Church, Anacostia; the Rev. Wendell S. Tredick of the Warner Memorial Presbyterian Church, Kensington, Md.

Also, L. A. Cole, Eckington Presbyterian Church; Hunter Mack, Lewinsville Presbyterian Church, McLean, Va., and James Sherrier, New York Avenue Presbyterian Church.

Meanwhile, Presbyterian women are attending the triennial meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the denomination in Atlantic City this week through tomorrow night.

They are Mrs. Wilbur J. LaRoe, jr., president of the Washington City Presbyterial; Mrs. W. L. Darby, vice president; Mrs. J. Claude Keiper and Mrs. D. Hobart Evans. Mrs. Evans is the wife of the pastor of the Hyattsville Presbyterian Church.

How to marshal the resources of the denomination to effectively meet all its wartime obligations will be one of the chief problems to be discussed at the Milwaukee parley.

The problem includes methods of recruiting enough Presbyterian chaplains for the Army and Navy and of assistance to them in their work, of providing other welfare and Christian service to soldiers and sailors, of giving adequate help to civilians in the Far East and other war-suffering regions, and of affording worship and educational facilities for the populations of America's recently enlarged industrial defense areas.

Clubs to Conduct Vespers Tomorrow

Campus religious clubs will present the first of the season's outdoor vespers tomorrow at 6:15 p. m. on the administration building steps of Maryland University.

The newly formed student religious activities council will sponsor the services, conducted entirely by students of the university.

Speakers will include Miss Eleanor Acher, freshman, and president of the Maryland-District of Columbia Baptish Student Union; James G. Sneeringer, of Gettysburg, Pa., president of the Newman Club, Catholic student organization, and Harold Silverman of Washington, leader of the Hillel Foundation, Jewish student foundation.

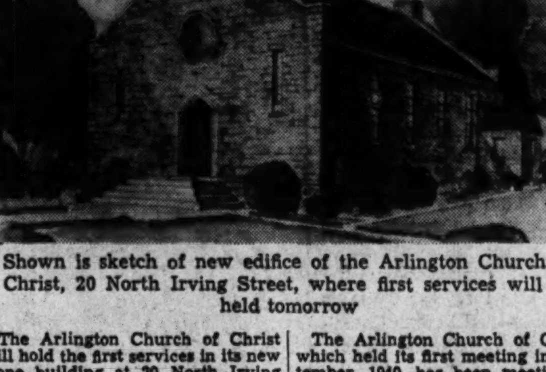
Arlington Church to Hold First Services in New Building



Shown is sketch of new edifice of the Arlington Church of Christ, 20 North Irving Street, where first services will be held tomorrow

The Arlington Church of Christ will hold the first services in its new stone building at 20 North Irving Street, Arlington, Va., tomorrow.

P. D. Wilmeth of Houston, Tex., will speak on "What Meaneth These Stones?" at 11 a. m., and at 5 p. m. on "Surrounded, Confronted, Encumbered—Let's Run!"

Bible classes will convene in the basement of the new building at 9:30 a. m., and the Lord's Supper will be observed at the close of the 11 o'clock service. At 6 p. m. Mr. Wilmeth will address the young people of the congregation, and simultaneously a song service will be held in the auditorium of the building.

The Arlington Church of Christ, which held its first meeting in September, 1940, has been meeting in the Ashton Heights Community House during the erection of its building.

Leaders of the congregation have extended a cordial invitation to everyone to attend all of its services, and have announced the following weekly schedule of events: Sunday, 10 a. m., Bible study; 11 a. m., worship; 11:45 a. m., Lord's Supper; 5 p. m., evangelistic service; Tuesday, 10 a. m., ladies' charity sowing; 2 p. m., ladies' Bible class; 8 p. m., meeting of leaders; Wednesday: 8 p. m., prayer service; 8:45 p. m., Bible study.

Missionary Produces Milk From Peanuts for Africans

How she fed synthetic milk made from processed peanut pulp to undernourished African children was described here yesterday by Miss Dora Jane Armstrong, Virginia-born missionary to the Belgian Congo.

Miss Armstrong, now secretary of the southeastern area for the American Mission to Lepers, addressed the spring meeting of the Washington City Auxiliary of the Mission to Lepers, at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, Ninth and Massachusetts Avenue Northwest. Women from 40 local and nearby churches attended, and brought cash, garments and other gifts for the leper cause.

The speaker said that the formula for the milk drink, which she developed with the aid of nutrition specialist at Johns Hopkins Hospital, will not be commercialized.

The peanut milk idea, Miss Armstrong explained, was the brainchild of an industrial missionary at the Methodist post in Wembo Nyama, Africa.

The principle is the same as that used in making nourishing soybean pulp that is used in China. The oil is first extracted from the peanuts and the residue—prepared by a technique which Miss Armstrong invented—is made into small, dry cakes.

"When dissolved in water, these make a liquid of milky consistency, pleasant nutty flavor and with the nutritive equivalent of cow's milk," said the missionary. "That is a priceless boon for Africa, where cows do not flourish, for powdered cow's milk from America is expensive and hard to get."

Urging continued support of leper missions, Miss Armstrong said:

"Many African babies will become lepers because they associate with leper adults, whereas with sufficient proper leper colonies, they could be isolated and grow up perfectly sound and healthy."

Group to Hear Mission Worker

Miss Elizabeth Redelstein, Seventh-Day Adventist mission worker in China for ten years, will address the travel talks class of the Young Adult School for Christian Living of the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, 900 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, tomorrow at 6:45 p. m. Her subject will be "Glimpses of Life at the Headquarters of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek."

Miss Redelstein is well acquainted with the battle area of the Far East, having organized hospitals and training schools in the Philippines, Penang and Singapore, as well as in China.

Concordia To Mark 50th Anniversary

Concordia Lutheran Evangelical Church will celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of the dedication of its church with special services tomorrow at 11 a. m. The Rev. Dr. Louis W. Goebel of Chicago, president of the Evangelical and Reformed Church, will be the speaker. Special music will be rendered by the Concordia choir under the direction of John R. Monroe.

The usual Sunday evening fellowship gathering will be held beginning with a buffet supper at 6 p. m., the Rev. Walter Borchers, administrative secretary of the Washington Federation of Churches, will speak on "Blessed Are the Pure in Heart" in the devotional period at 7 p. m.

Special anniversary exercises will be a feature of the meeting of both the Concordians on Tuesday at 8 p. m. and of the Mission Society on Thursday at 1 p. m.

The present church edifice of Concordia Church was dedicated to the service of the Triune God on May 15, 1892. It stands on the site of the first church building of Concordia Church which was erected on Twentieth and G Streets Northwest in 1834. The lots on which the church building stands were given for a church by Jacob Funk in 1769, but were not claimed for this purpose until Concordia Church was organized in January of 1833.

The new church was built in the second year of the pastorate of the Rev. Ernst Drewitz, who served Concordia from 1891 to 1896. Only three other pastors have served Concordia Church in the 50 years since the dedication of the church, the Rev. Paul A. Menzel (1896-1919), the Rev. C. W. Locher (1919-1924) and the present pastor, the Rev. Charles Enders, since 1924.

A thorough renovation of Concordia Church was undertaken in 1925, at which time the interior of the building was redecorated, and a new pipe organ, new pulpit furniture and pews installed. On the occasion of the 100th anniversary of the organization of Concordia Church in 1933 the basement of the church was rebuilt for recreation and entertainment purposes, and an education building was erected adjoining the church at the rear.

Priest Shortage Attributed to War

The war and other causes are causing a shortage of priests here, the Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore and Washington, said recently.

He cited "unprecedented deaths" and "priests entering the Chaplain Corps" as factors responsible for the shortage, and intimated that a similar condition prevails in dioceses throughout the country.

He said that only 10 candidates for the priesthood from these archdioceses would be ordained in June—about one-third of the number having died or become chaplains.

Bible Distribution Increase Caused by War, Society Says

A distribution of 8,096,977 volumes of Scripture during 1941, which exceeded that of any year since 1931, was reported by the American Bible Society at its 126th annual meeting on Thursday (May 14) at its headquarters in New York City.

This increased call for the Scriptures, the society feels, is undoubtedly a direct result of the war. Its service to the fighting men of this country, where distribution is made entirely through the chaplains, and the fact that the society is the principal source of supply of Scriptures for war prisoners in Europe and elsewhere, accounted for the circulation of nearly a half million copies. A dozen languages were required to fill the needs of the European prisoners and refugees. Acknowledgment has been received by the society's office in Geneva of the receipt of 95 per cent of these war packages.

A new solidarity of the Americas, crystallized by the war, is supported by the continuous demand from virtually everywhere in Latin America for the Scriptures in the common speech of the people. All but one of the society's seven agencies reported a larger circulation than in 1940.

War-torn China, whose demand for the Bible has never been equalled in any missionary country, cabled the distribution of over a million and a half copies of the Scriptures. The society's chief problem there was the maintenance of production and transportation. Unusual measures were taken, however. A tiny New Testament was produced that could be mailed for letter postage. Truck loads of Scriptures amounting to 30 tons were sent up the Burma Road and into Free China.

Locally, Dr. William S. Darby, president of the Washington City Bible Society and local representative of the American Bible Society, spoke on Thursday from 12:30 to 12:45 p. m. over WRC, in recalling th anniversary

Another Reservist Class Reports at Naval Academy

Annapolis, Md., May 15 (AP).—A new Naval Academy reservist class, the second this year, began to report today for a four-month course leading to ensign commissions in the United States Naval Reserve.

Academy officials said 305 college graduates from all parts of the Nation are expected. The class will undergo one month of elimination training and then begin a three-month engineering course.

Like the previous reservist engineering class, graduated earlier this month, the new group will live in Bancroft Hall, the regular midshipmens' dormitory, and will be bound by the academy's regulations.

Today's and tomorrow's arrivals will get room assignments, stow away their gear and make other preparations to begin their indoctrination course Monday. The new reservists will receive commissions in September.

Age Of Papers

If you are casting about for a good descriptive title for this not altogether comfortable historical epoch, how about "the age of papers?" The day must be fast approaching when every adult citizen will spend at least a third of his waking hours preparing some kind of official documents or filling in questionnaires. We are doing it more or less cheerfully, as becomes a people grimly set upon winning the war. But eventually, if the trend continues, so much room will be required for cabinets in which to file the interminable dossiers about everybody and the infinite records about everything that there will be no room left on earth for anything else—including ourselves.

We may thus call this papyrolatry, or the worship of papers, our new religion. We hold our documents in as much veneration as any heathen ever held his idols, or any Christian his saints. With us the brief case is as much the badge of personal piety as the rosary or book of hours with the Mediaeval Christian or the chaplet or votive wreath with the classical pagans. And just as our forefathers accused themselves of their sins, we confess at prescribed intervals to our names, addresses, phone numbers, ages, heights, weights, complexions, racial origins, economic ratings, marital situations, degrees of education and so on. To facilitate confession everything is as conveniently arranged into categories as were the various venal and mortal sins in the old-fashioned spiritual examen. Yet it all seems to be done with a minimum of grumbling.

War Of The Air

Supremacy in the air—for want of which the Freedom Front has lost many a battle—seems definitely to have passed out of the hands of the Axis. British production is perhaps still behind the German on its own, though not much behind. But experts here and in Britain are confident that British and American production, taken together, is enormously ahead of Germany and Italy together. Even with the addition of Japan, the Axis, according to the same authorities, is way behind the United Nations in aircraft manufacture. That is the best assurance that the air offensive on Germany will be kept up and that it will be kept up to victory.

Perhaps the best way to get some idea of how the tempo of the war in the air has been stepped up is to make a simple compilation of recent plane losses. In the 10-day period ended May 12, according to United Nations communiques, upward of 1400 enemy planes were destroyed or damaged. In the same period the acknowledged Allied plane losses were less than 200. We don't know how many of the enemy planes were bombers and how many were fighters. Nor do we know how many were downed in aerial combat and how many were the victims of antiaircraft fire. But even without this information the Allied showing is most encouraging.

For it is a fact that most of the losses on both sides were incurred in offensive air warfare. For many days now both sides have been primarily concerned with attack, not defense. The British have been hammering German objectives relentlessly. The Germans, in turn, have struck again and again on the Eastern Front and in the Mediterranean. And in the Far East the British, the Americans and the Japanese have all taken the initiative. For its pains, however, the Axis has suffered losses approximately seven times greater than those of the Allies. Moreover, in the period covered, it appears that for all the Axis expenditure of planes, the damage inflicted on Allied objectives was relatively light. Certainly the damage was not extensive enough to justify enemy losses on such a scale.

We have to remember, though, that now if ever is the time for the Axis to use the considerable reserves of planes which have been built up. For the British have given notice that their already heavy bombing forays are but a foretaste of continuous and big-scale destruction. Accordingly, we are almost certainly on the verge of a new phase of air warfare which may well dwarf previous operations. Then the Nazi reserves will come into action. However, it does not seem that the Axis can long continue losing 1400 planes every 10 days. According to Allied estimates—intelligent guesses, of course—this toll is more or less equivalent to the number of new planes which the Axis can turn out in 10 days.

For a time, nevertheless, the Axis can and undoubtedly will spend its air power lavishly to achieve its objectives in the shortest possible time. This, of course, is well understood by the Allied high command. And one of its major jobs is to make its dispositions so as to whittle down the Axis air offensive without interfering with the business of increasing the volume of the Allied air offensive.

Where Congress Fails

Congress has emerged from the furor over gasoline rationing in a rather sorry plight. The Senate had good reason, of course, to smother the Downey resolution, for that resolution had no significance. And Senator Byrd clearly showed that the special privilege claimed by many Congressmen is only a drop in the bucket compared with that accorded bureaucrats having no connection with the war effort. Still the fact remains that Congress has bungled another opportunity to lead the way toward essential wartime adjustments.

The fact is that many overworked legislators need their cars for transportation between their homes and the Capitol and for official business during the day. It was not unreasonable for Congressmen facing these necessities to request ration cards granting them access to all the gasoline they will actually need. But there are some things that are even more important than the arrival of legislators at their offices in the shortest possible time. And one of these is the morale of the American people. Possibly no other development will so quickly undercut that morale as the claiming of special privilege in high official circles at a time when general sacrifices are imperative.

Senators Barkley and La Follette are right in saying that the incident involves basic principles of democracy. It is of the utmost importance, particularly when vast powers must be delegated to the Executive, that the confidence of the people in Congress be maintained. Many Senators are properly perturbed by the indications that this confidence is being undermined. We, too, deeply regret the tendency in that direction. But is the respect of the people for Congress to be maintained by silence on the part of the press as to the weaknesses shown by that body? Such silence would merely indicate weakness on the part of the press and thus raise another gloomy portent for the democratic system.

The heart of the issue is this: many officials stepped in to claim a privilege in a democratic land when everyone was being asked to sacrifice for the sake of victory in this globe-circling war. The demoralizing aspects of that situation are not mitigated by Senator Byrd's showing that administrative agencies of the Government operated nearly 19,000 passenger cars last fiscal year and spent nearly five million dollars for gasoline and tires. Orators draw effective irony out of the fact that Congressmen furnish their own transportation while petty bureaucrats ride behind chauffeurs in Government cars with unlimited gasoline supplies paid for by the Government. But the fact is that Congress is responsible for this as well as for the demands of its own members for special privileges.

The real weakness of the position that Majority Leader Barkley and many of his colleagues have taken is that it is based on priority of privilege instead of priority of sacrifice. Only a flicker of imagination is needed to see that official examples of sacrifice in these days are infinitely more important than any privilege that administrator or legislator can claim. The people are willing to meet every requirement that this mammoth struggle imposes upon them. But they must be led through the hardships of war and not driven by an officialdom clinging to its dignity and its privileges.

Congress made an inexcusable blunder when it voted pensions for its own members in the midst of a world crisis. Now it has slipped again on these tricky X cards. How long will it take Congress to realize that these petty lapses from the true spirit of democracy at war are an important cause of its weakening influence? Informed Americans know that Congress is a sincere, hard-working body. But if it expects to retain its position as the guiding influence of American democracy, it cannot too quickly correct the impression that its members are absorbed by issues of petty privilege while the world is on fire.

Pope's Appeal

Again Pope Pius XII has lifted his voice in an appeal for peace. Well he must know that he will scarcely be heard above the roar of new battles and new charges and countercharges of the radio propaganda mills. The Pontiff, indeed, recognizes that in the present alignment of forces a peace by agreement is well-nigh impossible. "One side (the Axis) bases its security on results obtained, the other rests its hopes on future battles." Nevertheless he pleads with the statesmen to let no opportunity pass that might open a way to "a peace of justice and moderation." He calls for "generous leaders who, inspired not by weakness but by a sense of responsibility, shall choose the road of moderation and the field of wisdom when they meet with the other side, also guided by the same sentiments."

Here the Pointiff seems to suggest that, if anything is to be saved from the general cataclysm, it must be through understanding rather than force. This is fully consistent with all his former utterances. It is perfectly obvious from the context that the Pope considers the sacrifice of political aspirations a far less serious matter than the prolongation and extension of all the spiritual, moral and social dislocations, the sacrifice of all social progress, and the totalitarian tendencies engendered even in those countries which are joined in battle with the totalitarian powers. In an eloquent passage he calls attention to the prolonged separations of husbands and wives, the consequent disruption of family life and regimentation of children by and for the state. "Do not," he pleaded, "let the home and with it the school become merely an anteroom to the battlefield."

Perhaps the best comment on the difficult problem posed by the Pope is given by the distinguished Roman Catholic prelate, Archbishop Spellman. "Thou, O Holy Father," he said, "cannot make peace or have peace with the forces of evil." Still the Pope's allocution should remind the leaders of the freedom front of the full social implications of this total warfare. And perhaps it will also serve to remind us, peoples of the free countries, before we have begun to confuse means and ends, that we, too, are committed through the Atlantic Charter to ends "of justice and moderation."

Striking Back

The oil of the Caucasus dangles like the grapes of Tantalus in front of Hitler. But it would be the height of folly on his part to pursue an advantage through the gateway of the Northern Caucasus at Kerch without making sure of Kharkov. Kharkov, it is true, is 380 miles north of Kerch, but a Russian recapture of that important railroad junction would endanger the entire flank of the Nazi thrust at the Caucasus.

Whatever the facts about the actual fighting, the sign from Kharkov that the Russians are on the offensive will bring cheer to the entire free world. If, as reported, Hitler is rattled, there is no wonder. Maybe he expected to monopolize the attack this spring. But the indications are that, whether Hitler wants it or not, the Russians intend to make the campaign a conclusive test of strength. After all, this is not the first time that the Russians have seized the initiative. They seized it last December, and since then have unsleepingly prepared for the day when General Timoshenko could take over from General Winter. With preparations and resources which were lacking last year, they can now fight in depth.

This, then, is the long-heralded battle of the mastodons. There is no longer any need to stress the fateful consequences to every American of what is going on in Southern Russia. Hitler, without doubt, is in no position to execute his original war aim—namely, to annihilate the Red army. But if he even neutralizes Russia's combative strength, he could prolong our war for a matter of years. Thus the future pattern of our world is now being written on the bloody battlefields where Teuton and Slav are locked in a clenched struggle. That is the sober judgment of our strategists. It explains why the United Nations have strained every nerve this winter to keep open both the northern and the southern routes along which to pour material into Russia.

That faith has been justified by the superb fighting quality of the Russian. The toughness in the common soldier is the residue of hundreds of years of hardship and suffering. What is left is iron. It has been strengthened in the stormy years of the present regime. What was not generally appreciated was that the passionate love of country which animates the Russian people has actually been intensified under a regime which had a world-wide outlook.

Thanks To The Teachers

Grumblings about the nuisance of sugar, draft, and now gasoline registration have been noticeably lacking from those perhaps most entitled to grumble. They are the teachers who were drafted to do most of the actual registering. Although school sessions were curtailed somewhat during rationing periods, the amount of extra effort required of the registrars was appreciable. In addition to working at unfamiliar jobs, many teachers still met most of their classes, for which they prepared lessons and corrected papers after school hours. Most of them traveled across town from the schools where they taught to those where they were employed as registrars and did not reach home until well into the night hours. In at least one building teachers also had to undergo the physical discomfort of being seated all day in half-size chairs made for the use of primary students. Nonetheless, they did the work cheerfully, and this paper has heard nothing but praise for the courtesy and efficiency of the individual registrars all over the city.

LIGHT

The brittle sound of winter water goes,
No sky begins, there is no ending water,
Nor sun repeated on a turning sail.
The late gulls fly now in a single light,
The light that hangs a ship, not wing, not sail
In eyes that keep it
As ears the quiet between waves.

Letters To The Editor

Indian Crisis

Permit me to congratulate The Post for its recent excellent summary of the crisis in India. It is becoming increasingly apparent that the people of India alone can properly shape their constitution, and that Indian freedom cannot exist within the framework of British imperialism.

We of the West have had our minds sharply changed in regard to the role of India today. A country of 400 million has become overnight of extraordinary importance; the focus of a giant pincer movement by the Axis—Germany and Japan. Should the Axis conquer India they will control territory so rich in raw materials, labor, etc., that the loss to the United Nations would be incalculable. It is therefore of utmost importance that we understand the complex causes lying behind India's "nonviolent, nonresistance" theory.

Republican Policy

Casting no reflection on the sincerity of Republican belief in the policy of intervention, to a slightly cynical observer the enthusiastic approval given Mr. Willkie's resolution by the party leaders would indicate that he has again convinced them (as he convinced them in the last campaign) that to have any chance of winning the coming election they must continue to indorse the program and policies of the New Deal.

Official Use of Cars

I am allowing myself 15 to 20 minutes more than formerly to get to work, a 30 minute bus ride. So many "Bus Full" signs pass me, and occasionally a convoy will tie up traffic, that I am late once in a while. If my department head happens to be ahead of me he gives me a stiff lecture.

Yet, later in the day, he will take a departmental car and a $1440 clerk to drive and go downtown to do personal shopping or get a hair-cut, etc., on Government time and expense. The only reason he doesn't drive it to Virginia and back over-night is that his superior drives it home at night.

Why are so many Government tags seen on F Street on Thursday nights?

Your paper will do the Government and the public a tremendous service by causing public opinion to demand punitive action by semi-responsible officials.

What constitutes "official" business should be brought out into the open!

CRITICAL.

Teach Children Why We Fight

The schools in America are doing a lot to help win the war. But are our children being taught why we are fighting Hitler? It seems to me that there should be a common understanding among teachers as to the causes of this war, and the implications of defeat and victory.

Before December 7 the opinions teachers had were but a cross section of those of the public at large. Among them were isolationists, haters of Russia or England, pro-Fascists, pro-Nazis and many who held unscientific and bigoted opinions of race, nationality or religion. Public school pupils come from families holding all these points of view. Now, since we are at war why should there not be some officially inspired attempt to correct erroneous ideas and give the American or democratic philosophy?

Where do teachers learn the causes of war? The causes of our strife are interpreted differently on each side of the Mason and Dixon line. How many teachers have studied "Mein Kampf"? How many teachers have given much consideration to the implications of a defeat at the hands of Hitler or Hirohito? Do children of the upper grades and the higher schools understand the conflicting philosophies of Nietzsche and Christ, of the doctrines based on the law of the survival of the fit as opposed to the principles of Christianity? Are teachers instructed in the true meanings of communism, fascism, naziism in contrast to ideal Americanism? Do teachers hold scientific explanations of the meanings of race or do they subscribe to the unscientific mores and beliefs of tradition? Do boards of education or school superintendents have implicit faith in the loyalty and understandings of teachers or are they fearful of dealing with controversial subjects in keeping with the academic freedoms of a democratic nation at peace? Or are teachers considered mentally or socially too immature to listen to qualified lecturers on the causes and philosophies of this war?

In some sections this attitude of educational officials might seem a reflection upon the intelligence of the teachers, but in most cases it may be an indication of the conservatism or the reactionary attitude of the community.

If the children in the schools of Germany had been taught to expect to live in a world where there should be respect for the personality and individuality of man and not the philosophy of a superman race this war might not have been. Hitler began his war with the youth in schools. It will be another generation before the effect of these teachings can be undone. If the children in America carry with them the prejudices and traditions of this day into the next two decades we shall expect them to take part in another bloody conflict more horrible than the one their elders over the world have begun. We must be sure of our teachers. It is to be expected that teachers by negative or positive means will often reflect their views in classrooms. We need to be careful of the fascistic-minded teacher as well as the disciple of communism.

Supreme Court Justice Black in August of 1940 declared that colleges should offer a seminar in "Mein Kampf." Perhaps the Office of Facts and Figures should train lecturers or teachers to travel about the country and with teaching devices place the fundamental understandings before assemblages of teachers. We might ignore the causes of past wars but our children should be taught the causes of this war. They are not fools nor too young to learn. I can imagine that the effort to conserve essential materials and to sacrifice that our Nation might survive could be measurably stepped up if we become concerned about what our children are being taught with regard to the causes of this war.

Service Promotions

There appears to be a necessity at this time to give thought to proper advancement for officers taken from the ranks of reserve officers.

Men were called from the ranks of reserve officers as far back as the first call, made a year and a half ago, and have been for the past year serving in capacities above their rank. These men have not been commissioned to a higher rank, but are still carrying on as first lieutenants, which rank they had when entering the service. This procedure certainly does not hold out a very attractive future to the men who gave up four years of their time in college to get the commission of second lieutenant and then through hard study and going to camp each year were able to obtain the commission of first lieutenant.

The writer of this letter has sons who entered the service on the first call and their work must have been satisfactory, as the responsibility placed upon them would entitle them to a higher rank—they happen to be men of family and are entitled to the financial return as well.

It has been suggested that only those coming from Regular Army sources would have first chance for advancement. This I cannot believe to be true as our President would not condone any such action . . . his personal interest for the welfare of those who have given up everything they had attained in civil life to come forward in this, the country's greatest need.

Of course, this may be an oversight or it might be that the commanding officers at the different camps may not have given proper consideration to suggesting to General Headquarters of the Army that men holding such positions be given the rank to which they are entitled by reason of the service they are performing. It would create a feeling among the men that would help them to feel that they are receiving recognition for what they are doing and to a degree help to offset the loss to them of the businesses they were carrying on before entering the service.

Breeding Discontent

So Mr. Wallace warns of sabotage within our own house. Mr. Wallace should look around him closely. The cleverest thing Hitler has put across in this line is the gas ration racket. Divide and rule is the Hitler plan. So we have Senators and Congressmen unlimited as to their gasoline. Thus their sons and daughters race to country clubs and cocktail parties while the rest of us walk or stay home. This situation is the finest breeder of discontent Hitler could devise. What a laugh to hear the radio blare at you 24 hours a day to stand together and buy bonds.

Running a close second is the bill to forcibly take from the pay check the money to fight the war. The American people will give and fight and give again voluntarily, but when you start to take from them by force, you bring revolution and then anarchy. This is when Hitler steps in. I can hear him now with a slap on the back saying: "Goebbels, you're slipping, you bum; you've never thought up anything half as clever as these two ideas to breed discontent."

So long as the American people feel they are getting a square deal they will whip the world in the long run. Get out and put your ear to the ground, Mr. Editor, and hear what you can hear in stores and filling stations. You can hear an echo of Hitler's laugh behind the conversations.

The Post Impressionist

Knights on Horseback

Many years ago, when all Europe was at peace, I enjoyed several months' travel there, going the longer distances by rail and the shorter ones on foot. I visited Paris, where I saw pictures painted by famous artists; then in Holland, at The Hague, I saw others, notably those by Rembrandt; and in Antwerp, Peter Paul Rubens' masterpiece, "The Descent From the Cross." That painting, which covered nearly one-half a side wall in the great cathedral and which was three years in the making, has lingered longest in memory. I wonder what has happened to it and to other works of art since the pagan Nazis have taken possession?

There are other pictures which have disappeared, but their obliteration has been due to modern inventions, not to ruthless destruction.

They were pictures seen in the old home, evenings and mornings, when winter had settled down in the region near the Great Lakes. The pictures in the evening became visible in the library when a log that had burned briskly in the open fireplace finally took shape as glowing embers which became a wonderful panorama of places and people when one gazed at the radiance.

Jack Frost drew the other pictures, those of early morning, and instead of canvas or prepared paper, he used glass for his fairy figures, the glass-leaded panes, frequently 12 in number, that formed a bedroom window.

I was standing near such a window one morning when the mercury had dropped to zero, but it was warm there because my mother had kindled a fire in the small, wood-burning drum stove which gave forth plenty heat within five minutes after flames commenced roaring through the sheet-iron stovepipe into the chimney. Therefore I was comfortable as I stood near the south window, clad only in my red flannel johnnygown.

Sister had scooted through the cold upper hall and closing the door behind her, she asked, "Do you see any knights on horseback?"

"Plenty of them," I said. "How many can you count?"

She had to stand on tiptoe that her eyes might be on a level with the lower rows of panes. "One, two, three," she said, pointing with a forefinger. "There is another, and another. That makes five; and in that corner is a very small one. I see six knights on horseback. Will you boost me up so that I can see the other panes?"

Instead of boosting her, I brought a hassock from my aunt's room.

"Oh, look!" cried Sister when she had become a foot taller. "Here is a castle with a drawbridge!"

I saw it perfectly and called attention to some foot soldiers who were marching toward the bridge.

"See their spears!" she cried "Look how they glisten."

I saw that also; the spears were glistening because our morning sun had broken through some fleecy clouds and more light was entering the room.

One ray of light did something else. It rested upon the upper panes and its warmth commenced to change the picture Jack Frost had made. The castle and its drawbridge became a lake with a ship on it and white sails appeared on the masts.

Sister saw this just as plainly as I did, and as the tiny icicles on the pane kept changing their shape and position she pointed to some swans that were moving toward the ship which soon had sailors on its deck.

All was so wonderful that we were late for breakfast, and when at table I explained why we were tardy, Mother said, "Children have such vivid imaginations."

But Sister and I knew that she was mistaken; that we actually had seen those knights on horseback and other things, and soon we saw other pictures which proved what we had seen in the first place.

When halfway to the one-room schoolhouse, which was painted red, like all small schools in America at that time, more fleecy clouds crept over the sun, whose ray had changed Jack Frost's window-pane sketch, and big flakes of soft, fluffy snow commenced to fall lazily because there was no wind; and they came down so close together that boughs on trees and bushes were overlaid with a white mantle so quickly that it seemed as if a great spirit was moving on ahead of us and unrolling the pure covering as it went.

"Look at the little dwarf sitting straddle on that fence post!" exclaimed Sister.

I saw the dwarf quite plainly and also a fairy that was trying to play peekaboo as two leaves of a hazel bush moved up and down. Then, on another fence post, a hobgoblin made a face at us from a pyramid of snow, and although he tried to look fierce he really was very comical and made us laugh.

"I wish Mother could see that imp," said Sister. "Then she wouldn't say that we imagine things."

As for imagination, are not all great paintings the replicas of images that are brain-born by the artist? "Mona Lisa," catalogued a portrait, is elevated to the highest rank in art because of an enigmatic smile. Leonardo da Vinci worked four years before being satisfied with LaGiocando's expression. She could not have continued posing during that period, with her lips as pictured on the canvas. That elusive something which one senses when viewing the picture was the result of the artist's imagination, and what he imagined about the Florentine noble's wife has long been food for conjecture.

The three Marys pictured in "The Descent From the Cross" are women of piety as imagined by Rubens. Attendants in the cathedral at Antwerp said that many thousand artists had copied their faces, but no one had attempted to portray the face of the thorn-crowned man toward whom the arms of the Marys were outstretched. Rubens' imagination had given birth to an indescribable expression that has baffled all.

Public Accounting Of Unions

FAR BE it from me to stir up mischief between two ladies who have been getting along beautifully for years and years, but I find that Mrs. Frances Perkins, our cherished Secretary of Labor, and Mrs. Roosevelt have developed a very interesting difference of opinion and wonder if they would be good enough to decide publicly which lady is right.

PEGLER

In a recent published contribution to the sum of human wisdom Mrs. Roosevelt took the position that unions, with their rake-off of more than 1000 million dollars a year, should not be compelled to publish audited financial statements and said the reason they are not "anxious" to do so for the benefit of the general public is that "when they are not well established, this information would inform employers immediately of certain of their weaknesses."

Mrs. Roosevelt said further that "most of the unions that I know publish a report of their financial status to their members and do so in more accurate and simple form than most business corporations."

I WOULD like to point out the escapes in this construction. Mrs. Roosevelt does not undertake to say that all unions or most of them publish such reports, but says this is done by most unions that she knows. That is a vague term.

How many unions does she know? It is my impression that she knows very little about unions, and she may be speaking of, say, only a half dozen of them. Nor do we know whether she is speaking of locals or internationals, and there is a very important difference. For the international may be reasonably straight and the locals crooked.

A case in point might be the electricians of the A. F. of L. If we grant that the international is straight we still know that one of its biggest and richest locals, the one in Chicago, is governed by one of the foulest crooks in the whole rogues' gallery of predatory unioneers, namely Umbrella Mike Boyle, who has been notorious as a grafter for many years and was denounced by the Federal Court as a betrayer of labor, but never was removed from office by the international.

I point out also that Mrs. Roosevelt does not say unions are weak now, but attempts to suggest that they are weak even with their rake-off of a thousand millions plus, per year.

SHE SAYS "when they are not well established" and so forth, and the whole effect of her answer to a question is a political stall.

Well, what does Mrs. Perkins say on the same subject?

Addressing the national convention of the A. F. of L. in Seattle last September, Mrs. Perkins, after salving the boys with the usual political malarkey, told them as follows:

"The scrupulous account for money, regular independent and public audits of all moneys, including insurance funds, dues, assessments and so forth, should be done voluntarily rather than under compulsion. With the trade union basic right protected by statute, surely no moneys need be expended except as authorized by the membership and for purposes which can be stated in a public accounting without embarrassment."

Let us go back and run over that part again. Mrs. Perkins calls on the unions to give regular, independent, public audits and says the unions are now in such a strong position that their strength, not their weakness, can be stated publicly without embarrassment.

Of course, we all know that they are the greatest single political power in the country, and the greatest single financial power as well, and it has been shown that they are infested with low rascals and vicious adventurers, and here, nevertheless, we have Mrs. Perkins pleading with them to be nice voluntarily as an alternative to compulsion. She knows, of course, that she might as well request a skunk to smell pretty, contrary to the nature of the brute, but at least we have here wrung from her an admission that the unions are not weak and could not endanger themselves by revealing their riches.

"Whatever secrecy or veil may have been effective in the early days when the unions were struggling to survive is certainly no longer effective," Mrs. Perkins said.

Reading these expressions side by side I feel a suspicion that one or the other of these ladies doesn't know what she is talking about, or that one or the other is trying to kid the public. A bill to require such accounting was passed by the House, but was killed in the Senate by direction of the President. This provision, of course, would have been the first encroachment on the most gigantic racket in American history.

The Gallup Poll

Churchill Popularity at High Level in Britain Despite Criticism; Offensive Mood Rises

By Dr. George Gallup,

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., May 15.—While Winston Churchill's cabinet has been under persistent fire of criticism, the Prime Minister himself has maintained an extraordinarily high level of popularity in England since he took office two years ago this week.

On his second anniversary in power the Prime Minister has the confidence and support of 82 per cent of British voters, as measured in a poll by the British Institute of Public Opinion.

This is nearly as high as it was in the fateful summer of 1940 when, one month after France fell, public confidence in Churchill stood at 88 per cent. In the intervening period, despite such grave British reverses as the fall of Crete, the collapse of the Libyan offensive, and the fall of Singapore, there was never a time when fewer than 80 per cent of his countrymen expressed themselves satisfied with him as Prime Minister.

The sharpest drop in his popularity came in late February and early March of this year, following the fall of Singapore. The trend of Churchill's popularity, as measured in terms of the number of voters satisfied or dissatisfied with him as Prime Minister, is shown in the following results of British Institute polls.

	Satisfied.	Dissatisfied.	Undec.
July, 1940	88%	7%	5%
Nov., 1940	89	6	5
March, 1941	88	7	5
June, 1941	87	9	4
Oct., 1941	84	11	5
Jan., 1942	89	7	4
March, 1942	82	11	7
TODAY	82	13	5

The two high-points in his popularity were in November, 1940, at the height of the Nazi bombings of London, and January, 1942, shortly after the United States had entered the war.

Rise of Cripps

Throughout the period of Churchill's premiership the British Institute found Anthony Eden most consistently popular as the successor to Churchill in case anything should happen to him.

The most recent test indicates that while Eden is still the top choice, Sir Stafford Cripps has shown a remarkable rise in popularity as a possible Churchill successor.

His rise is indicated in the replies to this poll question:

"If anything should happen to Churchill, who would you like to see succeed him?"

Results today as compared with those in a similar poll in December follow:

	Today	Last Dec.
Eden	37%	38%
Cripps	34	*
Bevin	2	7
Attlee	2	3
Beaverbrook	2	11

Churchill's fighting speech early this week reflected an increasingly aggressive mood which has been widespread in England in recent months.

British Institute polls taken before Churchill's address show plainly that the average Briton does not worry so much about survival today, but, on the contrary, is eager to take the offensive.

Churchill took note of this spirit in his address and lauded the British people for it.

Aggresive Mood

When voters were asked in late April by the British Institute, "What do you think is the most important war problem the British government must solve in the next few months?" nearly twice as many named "invasion of the continent" as named any other item.

The aggressive mood is likewise reflected in answers to the British poll question:

"How can Britain best help defeat Germany this year?"

By invading continent or attacking elsewhere	36%
By giving all possible aid to Russia	15
By bombing Germany	13
By increasing production	9
Misc. and undecided	27

When Britishers were asked in another survey if it were possible for the United Nations to defeat Germany this year, 41 per cent said "yes," 40 per cent "no," and 19 per cent were undecided.

U. S. Goods Reach Front

Lend-Lease Aid Rises

By Alfred Friendly

Post Staff Writer

THE UNITED STATES, both through its armed forces and the lend-lease products of its munitions factories, is playing a steadily wider and larger role in the world conflict, President Roosevelt disclosed yesterday.

Telling a press conference that American forces were constantly going into battle in greater numbers and in more and more places, the President also announced record high shipments of lend-lease goods in April.

A formal White House report showed that lend-lease assistance last month totaled 667 million dollars, or 109 millions more than in March. The April figure, the President estimated, was equal to the total of all assistance in the first six or seven months after the foreign-aid program began. Total lend-lease aid, the statement showed, amounted to $3,835,000,000 since the lend-lease program was initiated last year.

The President also gave encouraging word that shipments to Russia were coming along all right.

DECLINING to be more specific about where and in what numbers American troops are fighting, or how seriously the transportation of lend-lease supplies had been reduced by sinking, Mr. Roosevelt would only vouchsafe that a pretty good proportion of the shipments actually got to the places where they were intended.

The accompanying statement did not indicate what part of the lend-lease shipments were in such items as ship repair or industrial facilities, as against actual munitions.

It declared, however, that "today the major part of the aid supplied is in the form of finished munitions."

"Since the start of the program the proportion of fighting weapons to food, drugs, raw materials and other industrial materials has steadily increased," the statement continued.

"The division of guns, planes, ships and industrial materials between our armed forces and industries and those of our allies is made by military, naval and industrial experts in a manner aimed at putting the supplies to their most effective use in fighting our common enemies."

The President indicated that this increasing military and industrial activity lay behind the Army seizure of civil aircraft transportation on Wednesday. Although the Army and Navy are building large numbers of transport planes, he said, the requirements are so pressing that we need every plane that can be obtained. He mentioned that the military had on occasion taken over even small one- and two-man puddle-jumpers because anything that flies is usable.

IN THIS connection, the President hinted broadly of far more drastic transportation curbs to come, particularly in passenger carrying on the airlines and airmail.

Although the Chief Executive indicated he did not believe it would be necessary to ration railroad coach transportation yet, he said he guessed we could get along with less air-mail service, pointing out that only a few years ago we did without it entirely.

He also cited an example of 12 persons who had come to see him a couple of weeks ago, seven of them on personal, rather than on military or Government business. If air passenger service were curtailed by half, he added, these people would have and could have come by train. This change, he was inclined to think, would be an increasing necessity in the country.

3 New Quakes Rock Ecuador

Guayaquil, Ecuador, May 15 (U.P.). Three new earth temblors of severe intensity occurred in Ecuador this morning as the toll of Wednesday night's disastrous quakes was estimated at 115 dead in Guayaquil and Portoviejo, capital of the maritime province of Manabi.

The trio of severe shocks early this morning sent thousands of residents rushing panic-stricken through the streets fearing a repetition of the Wednesday night shock. Today's quakes occurred at 5:55 a. m., 6:50 a. m. and 8:30 a. m.

Into The Caucasus

By George M. Lamsa

War Will Enter Ancient Lands

MILLIONS of descendants of ancient races will, sooner or later, be in the path of the German march into the Caucasus and northwestern Persia. The inhabitants of these lands have for many centuries been victims of wars between great powers fighting for political and economic supremacy and mastery of these rich lands. These people have at various times been subjugated by Turkey, Russia and Persia but have continued to preserve their racial identities, cultural life, customs and manners as of yore. Indeed, these ancient lands have changed hands many times but the people have never lost their racial characteristics, warlike disposition and tribal organizations. They are noted for their bravery, fearlessness and endurance.

The inhabitants of this area are known as Georgians, Armenians, Kurds and Assyrians. There are other races who are a mixture of Mongols, Turks and Persians. Small scattered Jewish communities are to be found everywhere.

THE PART which the inhabitants of these ancient lands has played in the past conflicts, to some extent, has been responsible for the victories and the defeats in that part of the world and the rise and fall of great empires. Persians, Greeks, Romans, Turks, British and Russians have sought their help and used them as mercenaries during their campaigns. Of course, today things are quite different. Modern warfare, planes and tanks have reduced the importance of land warfare everywhere. Nevertheless, these peoples will figure in forthcoming German-Russian offensives in the Caucasus and northwestern Persia. Undoubtedly tanks, planes and mechanized units will play an important part in this offensive, just as they have done in Malaya and Burma, but the man power will be the deciding factor in these mountain regions. This is because airplanes could do little damage to primitive villages, and there are no large cities to be destroyed. The Kurds retire to the mountains and live in caves. They are noted for treachery and sniping.

Just now the interests of these peoples are in doubt. In previous wars they always rallied on the Turkish side; but since the establishment of the new order in Turkey the Kurds have been discontent. There have been several uprisings in Kurdestan. Under imperial Turkey most of the Kurdish tribes were semi-independent and were permitted to raid Christian and Jewish communities at will and levy and collect taxes. Being a nomad people for centuries, they have maintained themselves largely by robberies and raiding among each other. The new Turkey has put an end to this, which makes it difficult for the Kurds to make a living. Then, again, the Kurds have from time to time demanded their freedom and were awakened by the Wilsonian doctrine of self-determination. They are hoping to form a Kurdish state which will embrace the Turkish, Persian and Iraquian portions of Kurdestan. The Kurds are in the majority in most of these places. They are good warriors and, like the Assyrians, die rather than surrender.

The Armenians are modernized to some extent and are good soldiers if properly equipped. Just now no one can predict how the Armenian sympathies go. The Armenians are a Christian people and have sacrificed so much for their faith. A large section of Armenia is under Russia and the Armenians thus far have been loyal to the present Russian government. What inroads Bolshevism has made in Armenia it is difficult to predict. The Armenians have always fought against both Turkey and Russia and shed blood for their independence. Prior to the last war they fought on the side of the Allies, hoping they would regain their freedom, but were betrayed by the Allies. This betrayal has made them somewhat bitter against the French and the British. On the other hand, Armenians have received education under German and American missionaries. Be that as it may, the Armenian will make a decision during the course of the campaign between Russia and Germany.

CAUCASIA was taken from Turkey and Persia and annexed to the Russian empire. It has been a part of imperial Russia for several centuries but the land has changed very little from former days. The people have always fought for their freedom. Not many Russians are to be found in this region. Most of the inhabitants are of the Near East origin. Georgians, Armenians, Caucasians and Kurds predominate. Religious differences, racial rivalries and discontent against imperial Russia have deprived the country of moderations. Under the Czars few roads and schools were built in that part of the country. The people revolted from time to time but they were crushed by the Russian armies stationed in large centers and fortified places. Since the Russian revolution there have been considerable improvements but not sufficient for large military operations and modern equipment. The land still lacks good roads, railroads, bridges and other means of transportation. The donkey, mule and horse are still the only means of transportation in northwestern Persia and Kurdistan.

It seems that Crimea will be the springboard of the German march into the Caucasus. Should the Germans succeed in crossing Kerch and occupy Norosoosk, their forces may be expected to split in two directions. One army would march behind the Caucasian Mountain Range on its way to Baku. This army may join another German force coming down from Rostov. Nevertheless, the main German army will march west of the Caucasian Mountains, close to the Black Sea, with Tiflis as its main objective. This has been the course of military operations against Turkey in past campaigns and seems the only logical route. The land here is good for mechanized equipment, and the German land forces can be reinforced by naval units operating in the eastern part of the Black Sea.

Tiflis, the Georgian capital, will become the German base for military operations into northwestern Persia and, if necessary, into western Turkey. The path of this army will cross through Armenia, with Tabriz as its goal. Thence the Germans could easily attack the Mesopotamian and Persian oil fields.

GERMAN success in Persia and Armenia would force Turkey into making a decision. I doubt that Germany would dare to attack Turkey by way of the Balkans—that is, through Chatalja. The Turks are great warriors. Their army is German-trained and their fortifications on the Bulgarian border would be very difficult to penetrate. This is because Turkey is well prepared on this frontier and would defend its territory to the last man. Nevertheless, the German flank through Armenia and northwestern Persia will render Turkish military power useless. Just as the Turkish frontiers in the Balkans are strong, the eastern frontiers are weak and can easily be penetrated. The Turkish provinces on the Russian border lack good roads for military operations. In the past, Turkish armies always suffered defeats in these provinces simply because of the lack of transportation. Food and munitions have to be transported by mules, donkeys and on the backs of men. A narrow-gauge railroad has been constructed but is not adequate for large military operations.'

There are other factors to be considered: The native population in Kurdistan will be a great factor in the Battle of Caucasus and Persia. There are several millions of warlike Kurds in the lands situated between northwestern Persia and eastern Turkey. I believe, to some extent, the action of the Armenians will be guided by promises made to them by the Allies and Germany. The latter has manifestly shown interest in the creation of an Armenian state. But this depends on how Turkey will act. If Turkey should join Britain, Germany will proclaim a free Armenia and free Kurdistan.

The other peoples in this area are small but important. The Assyrians have been helping Great Britain since the beginning of the present conflict. The Jews everywhere are doing everything possible for the Allied cause, but the latter, being oppressed for many centuries, are not a warlike people in these areas.

Propaganda directed by the United States can easily change these people and bring them to the Allied cause. Most of them cannot read or write. News of war and rumors are spread by word of mouth, but they are carried faster than by newspapers and are largely exaggerated. Things are taken for granted very easily. This is because the people are simple and credulous. Germany has not been idle in that part of the world. She has many agents, and the natives who like to see a change look to Germany for it. They believe that the British policy in the Near East is permanent and cannot be changed. That is to say, the British are always interested in the majorities, such as Arabs and Turks. The Kurds, Armenians and the Devil Worshipers, as well as other races, are minorities, and minorities have always sought change, regardless of the consequences.

FOR INSTANCE, during the last war nearly all Christian and Moslem minorities went on the side of the Allies and fought against Turkey, thinking that the change would usher in a new era, but disappointment came a few months after the armistice — instead of freedom and self-government, most of these races lost their homes and privileges which they had previously enjoyed under the Turkish government. I have consulted the leaders of many of these people and in nearly all cases found that they regretted their actions and ingratitude toward the Turkish government. Today both Christians and Jews realize that no European nation would have done what Turkey did for them in the past; in permitting them to preserve their customs, languages, cultural life and complete freedom of worship. There is nothing to parallel this in the history of the Christian nation. Races much stronger than some of these Eastern races lost their language and cultural life under Christian governments in Europe.

These are some of the things which today are reflected in the minds of the leaders of these people. They all want a change but what change is in store for them no one can tell. So far, changes have resulted in destruction, suffering, famine and persecution. Let us hope that the American entry into this war may bring a new era—one of prosperity and peace.

The Once Over

Life Without Gas

Tough as the ban on gas may seem, it is going to be a good thing for lots of luxury-accustomed Americans.

For the first time in a couple of generations Americans by the millions are going to have to relax, take it easy, stay in one spot longer than 24 hours at a stretch and get a little exercise without using pulleys.

• • • •

The trip nobody needed is out for the duration.

• • • •

And with it goes the spur-of-the-moment weekend, the Sunday tour-on-an-impulse and the general pattern of life on the hop-skip-and-jump plan.

• • • •

We are now going to have to live more like human beings and less like a strange species combining the habits of the blind bat, the wild antelope and the common grasshopper.

• • • •

It is going to be easy, for the first time in a quarter of a century, to tell America from a squirrel cage.

• • • •

We are going to have to get back to the normal, restful and wholly adequate vacation at one resort instead of a series of overnight flights through the open country. When we locate a good hotel we are going to have to stay and enjoy it instead of keeping up a nonstop hunt for new locations with different vistas.

• • • •

We are returning to the era when grandpop and grandma, having discovered a perfect place to relax, relaxed for a couple of weeks at a stretch and came home healthy and refreshed.

• • • •

A sea breeze was a sea breeze, whether grandpop got it 3 miles from home or in a series of 100-mile dashes amid a smell of burning brakes. And the test of country air wasn't how many traffic lights he went through to get it.

• • • •

But for the last 24 or 30 years a vacation has become a combination safari, endurance test and a demonstration of the power of man to resist nervous exhaustion. It wasn't "What resort did you spend your vacation at?" but "How many miles did you cover?"

• • • •

People have been burning up hundreds of gallons of gasoline, wearing out costly tires and cracking up expensive motors weekend after weekend, purely for the purpose of discovering how much better they would have felt if they had stayed home.

• • • •

The auto has been a blessing in some ways, but it has certainly given us the wrong slant on comfort, good behavior, contentment and rest.

• • • •

But we are now going back into a situation in which we will have to behave like human beings and live a life unhurried, gentle and pretty enjoyable, once we get used to it.

• • • •

We are going to get a chance to look over our own neighborhood and find that it has its good points. We are going to be confronted by the spectacle of father and mother actually on friendly terms all day Sunday instead of arguing over direction signs. We are going to get used to walking a couple of blocks for a haircut instead of making the trip in a seven-passenger sedan.

• • • •

And we've a hunch it's going to be one of the best things for our nerves that ever happened.

American Envoy Makes Diplomatic History in Italy

Madrid, May 15 (AP).—For more than five months after Italy declared war upon the United States, George Wadsworth, jr., U. S. charge d'affaires in Rome, made diplomatic history by keeping in daily contact with the Italian foreign ministry, it was disclosed today as he passed through Madrid en route home.

Wadsworth, a native of Buffalo, N. Y., was aboard the last of four trainloads of Americans from Italy headed toward Lisbon tonight to board the Swedish liner Drottningholm.

Three other trains bearing 120 Americans from Germany entered Spain during the day.

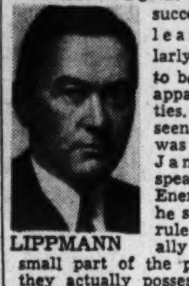
The Swiss legation in Rome assumed representation of American interests, but two American embassy secretaries, Elbridge Burbrow of San Francisco and Merritt Cottes, of Norfolk, Va., stayed on as Wadsworth's liaison officers. The embassy staff itself lived in three Rome hotels under 24-hour police guard.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

No Reason To Feel Hurt

NO DOUBT there is always much to be learned from our mistakes but it is now true also that we can learn a great deal from our successes. We can learn particularly, I think, not to be stumped by apparent difficulties. For we have seen how right was William James when, speaking of "The Energies of Men," he said that "as a rule men habitually use only a small part of the powers which they actually possess and which they might use under appropriate conditions."



LIPPMANN

There is not one of us who has not in the past two years grossly underestimated the true capacity of the country to do what it actually sets out to do.

THEREFORE, we must always ask ourselves whether the bottlenecks about which we hear so much are real or are due to lack of vision and of will power. Two years ago there were few, if any, who thought aircraft could be built by mass production, or that automobile manufacturers could manufacture them, or that ships could be built by mass production, or that anyone who had not been a shipbuilder could build ships. With what we know now, we have every right to challenge anyone who tells us that there is not enough raw material to supply the great war facilities which have been created, or enough transportation to move the weapons where they are needed.

It may be that at some time we shall reach the point where we must choose between more tanks and more cargo ships, or between more cargo ships and more warships. But there is nothing like conclusive evidence that we are at that point, and there are very strong indications that once again we are underestimating our true capacity.

EXPERIENCE has shown, I think, that the tendency to underestimate capacity arises from inertia, from the almost universal human habit of preferring to do things in the usual way. In the field of manufacturing capacity this inertia has been brilliantly overcome—so brilliantly that our capacity to manufacture weapons is now greater than the available supply of materials. We are, therefore, told by some that we are faced with a shortage of materials. But by others, and these are the men who do not allow themselves to be stumped easily, we are told that the apparent shortage of materials is in considerable degree at least due to an inadequate system of distribution.

When a better system is set up, as it will shortly be if enough people insist on it, we shall almost certainly see once again that what was said to be impossible is in fact possible. We have something like half again as much steel capacity as all our enemies and all the conquered countries combined. It cannot be true, therefore, that we are already running short of steel when we have just begun to manufacture on a large scale. It must be the fact that we are not allocating the steel efficiently, that the priorities have bogged down, that steel is piling up in inventories, that some of it even is being diverted to inessentials. And so when Mr. Nelson really takes control of steel and other raw materials, allocates them sternly, and causes them to flow smoothly to the plants and shipyards, we shall find there is more steel than present estimates admit.

WE SHALL NOT have got to the real limits of our supply of materials until in this field also, we cross the Rubicon and pass completely from peacetime to wartime methods. Each of these crossings of the Rubicon is painful, and the act of pushing ourselves across the Rubicon is usually accompanied by a good deal of demagogy and many injured feelings and some damaged reputations.

None of this is necessary. All of it is avoidable by approaching the problem maturely, in adult fashion, without animosity or misplaced sensibilities. I have, for example, a letter from a respected correspondent whose feelings are hurt because I have written that the overhead direction and control of the conversion of industries to war should be given to competent outsiders rather than to those who have grown up in the industry.

MY CORRESPONDENT happens to be interested in shipping and he actually feels himself attacked and injured because I pointed out that in this war, as in the last war, the direction and control of merchant shipping, as distinguished from the operation of ships, will almost certainly be done best by men who are not in the shipping business. Yet if I had said that Mr. Murray or Mr. Green ought not to be placed in charge of the draft or of the manpower mobilization, my correspondent would have had no difficulty in seeing the point.

He would have seen the point if I had said that the founders of the Republic were right when they made the President and not a general the commander in chief of the armed forces. He would see the point if, looking at the superb achievements of our citizen army, he had been told that what the professional soldiers have done has been promoted by the fact that there is a statesman in the War Department. How absurd it would be to think that this was a reflection on General Marshall. Grant had his Lincoln, Pershing had his Baker, and Marshall has his Stimson, and that is the way it is supposed to be, and that is the way it works best.

THERE is no reason at all, therefore, why industrialists and businessmen should feel hurt at the idea that in wartime they are not the best final judges of how their industry should be mobilized. If they would recognize and accept this general and fundamental principle of sound government, they could save themselves and the country no end of trouble. For demagogic attacks on the dollar-a-year men are fed by the fact, undeniable as a moral and a practical principle, that no man is a good judge of his own interest when it encounters the public interest.

And therefore, far from resenting it, every man ought to welcome the idea that he will not be placed in the position of having to judge his own interest, of having to choose among conflicting loyalties.

Senators Vote, 66-2, to Keep Their X Cards of Michigan, declared the figures revealed by Senator Byrd were "shocking" and suggested that "X" cards be eliminated entirely and that each motorist be given a card according to his need.

"I will go further than that and say that the names of those holding "X" cards should be published," Senator Byrd commented. He predicted gasoline rationing may have to be Nation-wide by July 1, "not because of a shortage of gasoline but because of a shortage of rubber."

Senator McKellar (Democrat) of Tennessee, cut into the Byrd statistics to volunteer the information that in addition to expenses connected with running 18,000 passenger cars the Government last year had travel expenses totaling $147,000,000. The Government does not furnish automobiles to the 96 Senators, he said "although the hullabaloo over ration cards would make it appear the Senators were spending all the $147,000,000."

A breakdown of the figures on passenger automobiles operated by Government departments was given by Senator Byrd as fallows: Agriculture, 4513; Federal Security Agency, 3104; Interior, 3252; FWA, 982; I. C. C., 130; Justice, 3252; Treasury, 2704; Veterans' Administration, 389; TVA, 877; the Panama Canal, 212; the Maritime Commission, 13; National Housing Agency, 12; OEM, 35; FCC, 334;; Federal Power Commission, 16; FDIC, 67; Commerce, 312; Civil Aeronautics Board, 17; Board of Economic Warfare, 6.

Cites Contrasts

In contrast to some of these figures, he declared, the State Department has only 4 automobiles and 4 chauffeurs, the General Accounting Office only 2, the Postoffice Department only 2, and the Government Printing Office only 4.

Total number of full-time chauffeurs employed by the Government last year, he said his survey showed, was 522 and the number of part-time chauffeurs was 340. The Office for Emergency Management, he said, had 42 full-time chauffeurs to operate 35 passenger cars.

Asked Limited Card

Meantime, on the other side of Capitol Hill, Representative Woodrum (Democrat) of Virginia, said a week or ten days before rationing became effective he suggested to the Speaker of the House and the sergeant at arms that some arrangement should be made which would give members of Congress a gas rationing card with a definite limit on it.

"I foresaw the opportunity that would be taken advantage of to discredit members of Congress over the gas rationing," he said. "Nothing was done."

Woodrum said he was given an X, or unlimited, card when he replied affirmatively to the registrar's question as to whether his car was used for official business.

The Virginian declared "it does not appear to me that there has been any real serious intent or effort to try to ration or save gas. I think the thing has been abused, not only in Washington but in other parts of the country. Personally, I do not expect to abuse it."

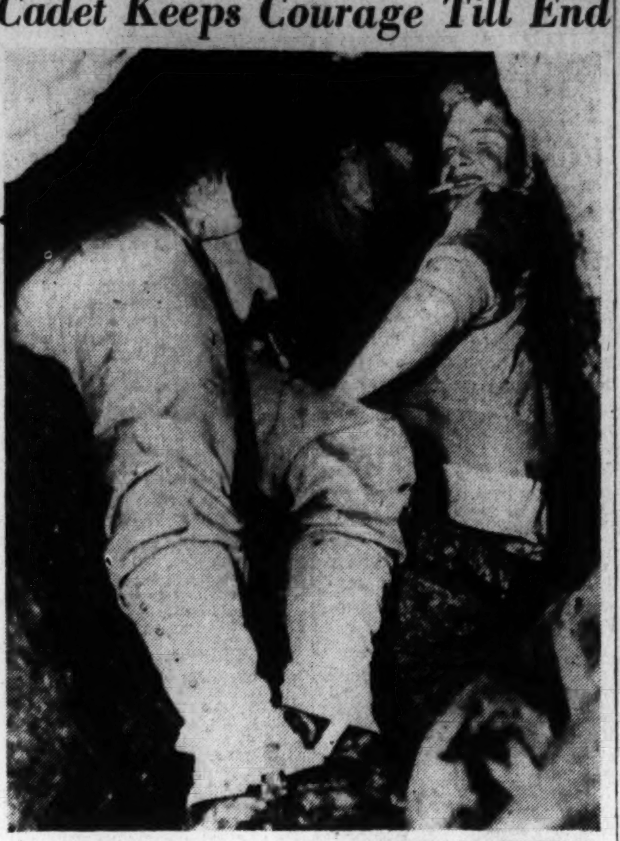
Crushed by 1500-Pound Rock, Cadet Keeps Courage Till End



Associated Press WIREPHOTO

TRAPPED—James Harper smoked a cigarette as a rescue crew sought to free him from boulder that settled on his legs

By the United Press

Portland, Oreg., May 15.—The Army lost a good man today.

Sixteen-year-old Jimmy Harper died at Providence Hospital, 18 hours after a 1500-pound boulder toppled on him in a stone quarry. During those 18 hours Jimmy—who was learning to be a soldier at Hill Military Academy—proved he had everything the Army demands.

Courage?

Ask the rescue squad who lifted the big rock from Jimmy's crushed legs after 15 hours of sweating work. They'll tell you how he never moaned or whimpered—grinned and wise-cracked and asked his rescuers for cigarettes instead.

"How long before you guys are gonna get me out of here?" he demanded frequently through the long night. But always the question was good-humored, bantering.

Alertness Readiness for self-sacrifice?

Ask Bill Mahan, 18, one of Jimmy's two companions when they set out yesterday to explore a remote tunnel in Rocky Butte, a quarry. Jimmy saw the boulder topple, might have leaped aside and saved himself. He chose to shove Mahan out of the path of the avalanche.

Cheerfulness? Ability to wise-crack in the face of pain and trouble?

Ask the men who drove Portland's "disaster" car to the tunnel with equipment for digging the boy out. Jimmy grinned when he saw it.

"I always wanted a chance to ride in that," he said.

Lust for adventure?

Well, authorities at the Military Academy admitted that Jimmy and his friends were "way out of bounds" when they entered the quarry, 1 mile from the school.

Jimmy's mother came here from Yakima, Wash., and was at his bedside when he died. He was unconscious, for physicians had given him anesthetics to relieve his pain. But all through the night he stayed conscious, felt his pain, talked constantly with the miners and soldiers digging him out and an Army doctor at his side.

What caused the boulder to fall was uncertain. But its displacement created the danger that a whole section of the tunnel might cave in. Precautions against that hazard slowed the rescue work and provided another test of Jimmy's grit.

When they got him out, he didn't say much—just looked happy. One of the rescue squad looked at Jimmy as he was carried to the disaster car—finally to get that ride.

"The kid would have made a great soldier," he said.

equivalent to the amount of fuel consumed.

Complete registration returns in the District disclosed that a fraction more than half of all who registered received either the B-3 cards, of which 53,422 were issued, or the X cards which, with a total of 15,606, constituted 11.3 per cent of all those distributed here.

On the other cards, the figures were: A, 34,147; B-1, 14,377, and B-2, 19,805.

Cantrell heaped fulsome praise on school personnel which took part in the registration, declaring he could not "overstate the part they have played. They took it like soldiers, and I haven't heard a single complaint from any of them."

Moreover, he said a group of teachers have volunteered their services to the local rationing boards in helping classify the thousands of cards.

Huge Shortage Held Unlikely

Some circles foresaw the possibility of a three-million-gallon shortage of gasoline here before July 1, basing their computation on the District gas quota and the estimated consumption on the basis of ration cards issued. But the Office of Price Coordinator Harold Ickes said if such a situation arose an official order could be issued increasing Washington's quota and ordering more gas into this area.

The possibility that the 3-gallon unit value of ration cards might be reduced, because of the larger than expected proportion of high-allowance cards issued here and elsewhere continued to haunt many motorists. A definite decision by the OPA, however, awaited complete returns on the registration in the entire ration area.

Most circles familiar with the situation expressed the belief that it would be a full 10 days before Washington begins truly to take on the rigid pattern imposed by gasoline rationing, principally because most motorists got a running jump on the program with a full tank of gas before the curtailment became effective.

The President's statement regarding publicizing gasoline rationing cards was evoked by a query at his press conference which, in turn, was prompted no doubt by the widespread criticism of the large number of X and high-allowance cards distributed throughout the ration area.

He revealed that a careful study was being made of the use of White House cars to determine what gas and tire economies could be effected, and said it already had been decided to station one White House and one Secret Service car at Hyde Park.

Usually, he told reporters, these two cars follow him when he goes by rail to his New York home. The next time they go up to Hyde Park, he said, they'll remain there to eliminate the usual driving back and forth between there and Washington.

The question of a gasoline shortage here was raised by interested sources which, using round numbers, and estimating 40 work days between now and July 1, came up with these figures:

The gasoline allotment for Washington during this period will be between 12,500,000 and thirteen million gallons of gasoline. An etsimated 14,000 trucks and taxicabs, each using 10 gallons daily, and the public buses, consuming an estimated 720,000 gallons in the entire period, will take up a total of 8,200,000 gallons—all for vehicles classified as essential, leaving between 4,300,000 and 4,800,000 gallons for John Q. Public.

Assuming that ration-card holders use all the gas to which they are entitled, and that motorists with X cards consume 150 gallons each in the entire period, the total consumption for this group would be 7,500,000 gallons—with less than five million available.

Cards Aren't Guarantees

Ickes' office, however, immediately pointed out that ration cards do not automatically guarantee that motorists will receive all the gas to which their cards entitle them, inasmuch as filling station operators, facing curtailed supplies, are free to institute a rationing program of their own.

Moreover, it was stated, the 3-gallon unit on which the ration cards are based is variable and subject to revision should the OPA find it necessary.

Finally, should a shortage arise, or should there be indications that one was imminent, Ickes' office has authority to issue a "directive" bringing more gas into the area, the coordinator's aides declared.

Meanwhile, the traffic bureau reported the volume of cars on Washington streets had "shown a considerable decrease, but the bottom level probably will not be reached for a week or more."

Business at parking lots varied from "normal" and "slight decreases" on down to a report from one agency that it had room enough for a baseball game.

Filling stations were doing business principally with trucks, but sales to private motorists, particularly within the city, were almost nonexistent. Stations on principal highways reported, however, that business was heavy although the individual amount of sales was, of course, limited.

President Hits At 'Confusion' On Rationing

By the Associated Press

Montpelier, Vt., May 15.—President Roosevelt, commenting on the origin of conflicting reports concerning gasoline rationing, was quoted tonight as saying that the "press initially contributed to the confusion and this confusion was not reduced as rapidly as might have been by Government departments most directly concerned."

The statement was contained in a letter to Gov. William H. Wills, who said he released the missive with White House approval.

In a telegram to President Roosevelt on April 2, Governor Wills had criticized "cross-purposes announcements originating in Washington from many governmental agencies which there abound."

Disruptive of Morale

The Governor quoted the President's reply as stating:

"You are right, of course, that conflicting reports from Washington on anything so important in American life as gasoline rationing are disruptive of morale; you are also right that there were seriously conflicting reports about this matter. However, in this instance as in other instances where there has been seriously conflicting reports of developments, the difficulty is not one which is exclusively within the power of the executive branch of Government to control.

"For example, the first report emanating from Washington that gasoline might be restricted to from 2½ to 5 gallons per week was not an official Government report. It was a press report based on some relatively informed conjectures by newspaper correspondents about what might reasonably be expected to be the ration. Thereafter Secretary of Interior Ickes, who directs the Office of Petroleum Coordinator, remarked at his press conference that he thought this estimate too low and a conflict of opinion upon the subject twas thus presented to the American people. It detracts relatively little from the seriousness of the conflict that it was not due to conflict within goyernmental departments.

Clarifies the Record

"The estimate of ration attributed to Leon Henderson's office was improperly attributed.

"A stenographic report of Mr. Ickes' observations on the situation discloses he neither attributed an estimate of 2½ to 5 gallons per week to Mr. Henderson nor questioned it on that basis.

"I cite these facts not only to clarify the record, but also to indicate the problem of conflicting statements, which distresses you as it distresse me, as much more broader than one which can be easily handled by executive departments of the Government.

"In this case the press initially contributed to the confusion and this confusion was not reduced as rapidly as it might have been by Government departments most directly concerned.

"In other important cases such as those having to do with rubber supplies there have been direct conflicts between statements purporting to be those of fact by authorized spokesmen of executive departments and members of Congress. These conflicts can only have served, as I think you are right in saying that conflicting statements about the rationing program served, to disrupt public morale.

"We face the extremely difficult problem of avoiding the type of statements of fact which you cite and at the same time preserving to the maximum the freedoms for which we are fighting."

He said the President declared it was the "patriotic duty of every public person" to avoid conflict in statements of fact, adding:

"Most of the nations with which we now are at war for survival would handle this problem very simply—by fiat.

"There would be no conflicts of officials or seemingly official statements of fact because those who made them would be disposed of if the practice were continued."

Joint Return Is Approved By House Unit

wife's earnings up to the same maximum. There would then be computed the tax on the total of such earnings. The difference between the tax on the combined earnings and the sum of the taxes on the separate earnings would be allowed as a credit against the tax based upon the entire joint income.

Before reviving the joint return plan the committee flatly turned down the Treasury's recommendation for taxing the interest on outstanding or future issues of State and local securities, now tax exempt.

Congress last year voted to tax interest on future Federal issues.

State Issues Rejected

The committee yesterday took two separate votes. Taxation of future State issues was rejected more than two to one. Almost unanimously the committee refused to tax State issues now ousanding.

In approving mandatory joint returns by a three-vote margin, the committee sustained Morgenthau's contention that separate returns by married persons permits tax avoidance and shows "special favoritism."

The reform was originally designed to eliminate special tax privileges of married taxpayers in the eight so-called community property States. In States having community property laws the husband, even if he earns all the family income, may attribute half the earnings to his wife. By dividing their income in separate tax returns, community property couples thus fall into lower tax brackets and pay a lower tax than taxpayers in the other 40 States. In none of the latter can a husband with a nonworking wife split his earnings for income-tax purposes.

In all States husbands with working wives can cut taxes by filing separate returns, if the combined income of the couple is over $3000. Joint returns above that point force employed married couples into a higher surtax bracket than if they filed separately.

Forces Down Exemptions

Under drastically cut exemptions in the pending tax bill, with more steeply graduated surtaxes proposed by the Treasury, the point at which working couples could cut taxes by filing separately would be forced even lower—to from $1700 to $2000.

Last year the House rejected a similar joint-return provision by a vote of 242 to 160 after an emotional debate in which women members joined in opposition with representatives from community property States.

The same controversy flamed anew at recent hearings on reviving the plan. Spokesmen for community property States charged invasion of State's rights while representatives of some women's groups said it would increase the divorce rate and encourage "living in sin." Advocates of the reform replied that compulsory joint returns have been in effect in Great Britain since 1914, and their divorce rate is lower than in the United States.

Chairman Doughton said joint returns, if finally enacted, would swell Federal revenues "about 350 million dollars," but no definite figure was possible until surtax schedules are approved. Representative Cooper, Democrat, of Tennessee, pointed out that last year's proposal, with milder rates and higher exemptions than those now proposed, was estimated to have yielded 320 million dollars. The committee is seeking desperately to piece out the total $8,700,000,000 in new revenue asked by the Treasury. It fell 500 million dollars short in its corporate tax action.

Model to Testify in Her Own Defense at Slaying Trial

By Amy Porter

Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, May 15.—Madeline Webb, 28, brunette model on trial for her life in the slaying of Mrs. Susan Flora Reich, will testify in her own defense, her counsel said today.

Jacques Buitenkant, chief defense counsel, said the former Stillwater, Okla., honor student, would tell her story as would her codefendants, Eli Shonbrun, her alleged lover, and John D. Cullen.

It was indicated that Shonbrun would do everything in his power to defend Miss Webb. The couple exchanged occasional glances during the day's proceedings, appearing calm throughout.

The announcement that the accused trio would testify came as Detective John B. Kaiser identified as Miss Webb's a black and white scarf, which the State says was used as a gag in Mrs. Reich's slaying March 9 in the Hotel Sutton.

Asserting that the scarf was shown Miss Webb shortly after she and her two codefendants had been arrested, Kaiser said:

"She identified it by saying 'that's mine'."

Displaying better poise than yesterday when she became hysterical, Miss Webb appeared interested when a tiny black felt turban with a fur trim was identified by Kaiser as having been found in a hall closet of the Hotel Sutton suite.

No other clothes were in the suite, Kaiser said.

The session was adjourned until Monday.

Select Shoe Carefully for Walking Venture, Advises Expert

With women taking to shanks' ponies as the result of transportation problems, the summer walking shoe takes the spotlight. Here are three types advised. From left to right—Each shoe demonstrates the varying degrees of support from the oxford to the pump

The perforated monk-type shoe (above) of white buckskin vamp and tan calf back gives all the support the average foot would need for walking. An ideal shoe for the woman who wants comfort plus style

By Jane Driscoll

The Post Fashion Editor

WOMEN who have walked for pleasure or exercise are walking now from sheer necessity. There will be no luxury class when it comes to gas rationing. Only those with serious jobs to perform will be riding to work. This new regime calls for some good down-to-earth walking shoes. And, as has already been witnessed, even dress shoes are taking to lower heels—so that party-goers who cannot make connections by trolley or bus will be able to "hoof it" part way.

Miss Haynes

The point of vanity has been a great stumbling block to women's comfort in the past, according to Miss Wilma Haynes, head of the physical education department of Stephens College, who was in the city recently. Miss Haynes, who is also director of the woman's physical fitness program for the Missouri Council of Civilian Defense, thinks that the casual play shoe has done much to overcome prejudice.

Speaking of her own experience, Miss Haynes says she is now wearing a walking shoe that is a size and a half larger than the average shoe she wore five or eight years ago. For any woman who has been accustomed to wearing casual shoes, this increase in size is not unusual. And many a woman who is now buying walking shoes is selecting them from one to two lasts wider than her dress shoes.

It is the beginner with whom Miss Haynes is particularly concerned, however. "A woman who has never worn low heels should not try to go into them too rapidly," she warns. "Distress is likely to result when women are out of condition. Short rest periods between walking jaunts, as well as a little wisdom in the distance of the walk, will prevent discouragement," she explained.

Most important is the selection of the shoe for this new walking venture. "Many women buy their shoes too short," says this expert. She emphasizes this point since a woman will feel a short shoe more when she strides out.

An important consideration not only for the summer, but for the duration, is the shoe wardrobe. Miss Haynes groups the necessary shoes into four types:

1. The walking shoe. It should be cool and lightweight for the beginner. A stranger to low heels might select a shoe with a medium low heel and a broad base to start with.

2. The semidress shoe. This type may have a dressier line and may be toeless. The cut-out should not press on the toe, however.

3. The slack shoe. This type may be one of many, but Miss Haynes warns that heels are not appropriate for wear with slacks or a uniform.

4. The evening slipper. This shoe should have just as much care in selection as any other type. An older woman needs support in her slippers and those that fit should need no "breakinglin" period.

To insure proper fit with new shoes, Miss Haynes makes these final points, "There should be one-half of an inch between the end of the large toe and the end of the shoe when the person is standing and there should never be any pressure on the tops of the toes."

Girl Asks: Is It Wrong to Respond With Feeling To the Embrace of Man You Love? Can You Win And Hold His Interest While Controlling Emotion?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl 18 years of age, soon to graduate from a secretarial school. About six months ago, I met a young man, 22 years of age, now serving in the armed forces as a naval ensign, and fell very much in love with him. I have always been fairly popular. In my early teens, I won a contest for beauty and popularity; and I have had (and refused) several proposals of marriage. So you see I am not just in love with the idea of being in love.

We started dating once a week and between times, we corresponded. Although he did not actually propose, he told me of his love and intent to marry me some day, when the war is over and I have had time to get my bearings in life and see things as they are. Then, about a month ago, I did something which hurt his pride and perhaps killed his love. At any rate, I didn't hear from him for the next three weeks, although I wrote him three letters during that time.

By accident, I met him again about a week ago,—two days before he left for sea, to be gone indefinitely.. I had gone to a "hen" party at one of my girl friends' homes, and to my surprise, he was there, visiting the hostess' brother. When the party began to break up, he asked to walk home with me and I consented,—although he had scarcely spoken to me during the evening. On the way home, not a word was spoken until we reached a large park near my house,—when he told me suddenly that he was leaving for sea. Then his emotions gave way. He took me in his arms, and while I couldn't tear myself away, I clamped down on my feelings and refrained from responding in kind; and the struggle for self control racked me with pain. But he did not know.

As we parted, he promised to write. But I am sure, from something he said, that because I showed no sign of emotion in his arms, he thinks I am coldly unfeeling, dead to life and the meaning of love. I cannot discuss the misunderstanding with my aunt, with whom I live, because, while she loves me very much, she has never understood young people and would only get worried and furious with him; and make matters worse.

I happen to know, through a close friend, that he has never had any affairs with girls; and that he considers such behavior terribly wrong. He comes from a grand family and has a reputation for being a fine character. I want you to tell me, Miss Haworth, whether it is wrong for a girl to show by her actions, when a boy takes her in his arms, that she has the same feelings he has? (I mean, when it is understood that they are in love; and, of course, I do not mean giving herself completely to him). If it is wrong, how can I win and hold this boy's love without showing passionate emotion? I am almost at the point where I would do anything to keep his love. Should I write to him if he doesn't write me soon? And if so, what should I say?

Sincerely, JEAN.

Intuition Is Woman's Best Guide in Love

DEAR JEAN: For normal persons, mutual love is compounded of feelings of mental, spiritual and physical rapport. This suggests that a genuine love relationship naturally would be characterized by passionately tender affectional exchanges—in which, however, there would be no intention or inference of unworthy behavior on either part, since the spiritual component of love makes for great delicacy of attitude and instinctive reverential restraint, even when physical ardor weaves a breathless spell.

It seems to me that a woman's intuition, or perhaps her instinct, is the best guide to follow, when making a split-second decision whether to resist or respond to the embrace of a man she loves. If she feels instinctively offended by some unfathomable quality in his attitude, it certainly would be "wrong" for her to give him encouragement;—wrong in the sense of being self-defiling. But if she feels their mood is completely harmonious; that his attitude is eloquent of yearning love, which feeling she shares, she would be reacting with unnatural prudery,—giving the man reason to feel insulted by her unwarranted distrust,—if she struck a pose of chill indifference, as a supposed means of professing her purity.

As a matter of fact, a man in love, who has some reason to believe the woman cares for him, will respect and appreciate and protectively cherish her infinitely more, if, in a situation of this kind, she gives him instantaneous impulsive reassurance of her answering feeling—and then gently breaks away, to keep their emotions under control. Whereas, he involuntarily resents nervously defensive treatment—particularly if his finest feelings dictated his address. Then he is bewildered, humiliated and angered—not knowing whether to blame himself or the girl for the awkward denouement.

I do not know, of course, whether your beau's farewell embrace merited curt rebuff or sweet response for a fleeting moment. Your intuition must supply the answer to that. If your heart tells you that you might safely have been kinder than you were, —it seems to me you must let time and future dealings (if any) heal the wound to his pride that your attitude inflicted. I feel it would be further confounding the issue,—and indelicate besides,— to attempt a conciliatory discussion of the incident by letter.

However, the fact that this is the second time the boy has gone off in a huff gives me to wonder if the earlier quarrel grew out of a similar rebuff. If so; and if, after weeks to reflect, you still felt yourself obliged to be firmly on the defensive against his love-making—it is probable that you were reacting with instinctive good sense in maintaining an unyielding stand. If he has created a situation in which you are implicitly challenged to make love on his terms or forfeit his attentions—then he is a bounder; and you will be well advised to wash your hands of him. It is not uncommon for sundry conscienceless young men to win a girl's love, and then try to bully her into sexual submission by such tactics.

In any event, regardless of which interpretation applies to the situation, I am confident you have more to gain than lose, where the boy is concerned, by letting him make the first move to heal the breach. If he doesn't make that move, it were best to forget him. If you have the power to win and hold his love—that power inheres in being simply yourself, without apology to him or worried self-reproach. Supposing he spurns you on that basis, he would doubly despise you in time, if you were to indicate a beaten willingness to "do anything to keep his love." So my advice is: Don't write him, unless he first writes you. If he writes, make no reference to past history—even though he should—other than to say, "We'll talk that over when we meet again." Make your letters to him cheerful, friendly documents, crammed with news about people he knows.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Safe Lips

There's a way out for the old-fashioned sentimental girl who doesn't want to leave the tell-tale lipstick smear on mom, sissy, or beau. She can use the new liquid liptone which has no greasy base. It's a pure color tone dissolved in a mild liquid, delightfully perfumed, and is applied with a brush. The only catch is it takes about 20 minutes to dry.

Dress Makes The Woman, Painter Says

You may have a set of disorganized features and bad legs, but if the sweet essence of femininity is yours and you know how to dress to enhance this quality "the war between the sexes" is won! This observation comes from the Polish portrait painter, Tade Styka, known for his portraits of beautiful women.

Styka, whose recent exhibit at the N. M. Acquavella Galleries in New York received praise from the critics, showed among his portraits Mrs. William B. Leeds, Mrs. Serge Voronoff and Mrs. R. B. Strassburger.

Dressing appropriately is an obligation which women sometimes lose sight of in war time, says Styka. "I noticed, although it does not seem quite so prevalent of late," he said, "that women dress inappropriately for social events. Certainly no woman would think of appearing on the beach in an evening dress, but many will wear an afternoon dress, or, worse yet, a uniform when evening dress is indicated. The well-dressed woman is the one who dresses appropriately for the occasion.

"Why," he asked with some surprise, "do women want to give up their greatest attribute—femininity? And why shouldn't they like to get into evening clothes at the slightest opportunity? There is no feminine attire that I can think of that so enhances a women's charm as an evening dress of the right cut and shade. I think uniforms are splendid for women doing war work in the daytime, but, as a man, I can't say that I like to see them in restaurants at night. It isn't fair to the men!"

Asked to describe what he considers a well-dressed woman, Styka replied, "It is the woman with good taste who dresses appropriately for every occasion. It is not necessarily the woman with a large wardrobe, for I have known chic women in Paris with a wardrobe of three dresses—morning, afternoon and evening. Each time you saw them it was a joy, for they had done something with a pin, or a flower, to change the whole appearance of their wardrobe."

American women, the artist said, are refreshing to talk to, delightful companions, but apt to have a mistaken idea of what constitutes sacrifice in war time. Giving up pretty clothes helps no one, says Styka, and, he adds again, "it isn't fair to the men!"

Health, Good Figure Called Career Aids by Actress

By Ida Jean Kain

CHEESECAKE is a good old newspaper term meaning leg art—and cute little Theresa Wright wasn't having any! She insisted on waiting for a role as an actress and landed two of the best in recent movies.

Her explanation is quite logical: "I was no sweater girl and knew it. I had heard a great deal about new actresses spending most of their time posing for bathing suit and leg pictures and I didn't want a career in picture magazines. I wanted to be an actress."

From her success, it appears that it is still a good formula to know what you want and to go after it without letting yourself be sidetracked in any way—or for anything.

Health Aids Career

Health is a help in any career and nobody knows it better than the movie actress. The camera picks up every tired line, every droop of the shoulders. So Theresa does what every other up-and-coming actress is forced to do: She takes care of herself.

She is not a natural sports enthusiast but she swims well, plays golf badly but plays it, walks a lot, and does a 15-minute set of calisthenics every morning.

That doesn't sound like much of a program unless you happen to be following it or a similar one. There really isn't anything difficult about it. And it keeps Theresa's measurements right up to glamour girl specifications—bust, 35 inches, hips the same, and a waist of 23½ inches.

Certainly a figure like that is no handicap to a girl in any career. Business women these days are making it their business to maintain a slim, alert appearance. The ones who are outstandingly successful get enough gymnastics to keep in good trim.

Sense of Vitality

But what really counts in getting ahead is the sense of vitality that goes with such a program. With the days ahead, it counts more than ever. Women will probably find it easier to get jobs, but the jobs will be harder, the hours longer. Under such conditions, keeping in condition ceases to be a matter of choice and becomes one of necessity.

Here are a couple of Theresa Wright's exercises. You might like to do them.

Down on the floor on all fours, with elbows and knees fairly straight. Pull up and in with your abdominal muscles and "walk" backward with your feet until you are almost full length. Hold for a second, relax. Repeat five times.

Lie on your back on the floor with arms straight out on floor at sides, shoulder level, legs straight down. Swing alternate legs up and try to touch toes to outstretched fingers.

How to Wash Woolen Blankets

Good housekeepers have always included blanket-washing as part of their spring cleaning, but this year they will be more careful than ever, because conservation of our household possessions has a new meaning. With the proper care in laundering, blankets should come out of the wash soft, clean, and with only the smallest amount of shrinking. This shrinkage will be even less if pre-shrunk blankets have been bought.

In washing, observe three precautions. Whether you wash by hand or machine, use lukewarm water, plenty of mild soap, and don't twist or scrub the blanket. If the handling is gentle, if the water temperature is kept low, and if sufficient suds are used, there is no reason why the blanket shouldn't be fluffy and lovely. In most cases it is wise to wash blankets in two soapy waters, pushing the cloth up and down in the suds to help the soil to leave the material if the hand method is being used. If using a washer, fill it with clean suds a second time and run it for not more than 5 minutes.

Rinse thoroughly, squeezing out the water gently without twisting the cloth. Hang out-of-doors, over two lines to distribute the weight. When the blankets are clean and dry, give them whatever additional moth-proofing you prefer, and wrap them securely so they will be completely dustproof until needed again in the fall.

Edith Rathbun To Be Wed

Mr. and Mrs. Seward Hume Rathbun of Washington announce the engagement of their daughter Miss Edith Grinnell Rathbun to Lieut. Loyd Victor Bell, jr., U. S. A., son of Mr. and Mrs. Bell of Monroe, N. C.

The bride-elect is a senior at the College of William and Mary where she is a member of Phi Beta Kappa, Mortar Board and Pi Beta Phi Fraternity. Her father is a member of American Institute of Architects and is president of the Washington Water Color Club.

The wedding will take place in the Chapel of William and Mary at Williamsburg, Va., on June 9.

New Trick Discovered on Pilgrimage

Garden lovers learned a new trick yesterday when they visited the charming small garden of Miss Elizabeth Dean and Miss Blanche Halbert, one of the eight Georgetown gardens opened for the annual pilgrimage for the benefit of Children's House. In order to hold the full bloom of their roses for the day of the tour, they had tied the buds in wax paper until just before the first "pilgrim" arrived.

This afternoon hundreds more are expected to visit the ten gardens to be opened by their owners. At the majestic gardens of Evermay, the mellow old house of Mr. and Mrs. F. Lammot Belin on Twenty-eighth Street, Mrs. Robert Goodale, Mrs. Thomas Wren and Mrs. Thomas Mitchell will be hostesses. In the charming, rambling garden of Mrs. William Burden, where formerly Mrs. Albert Sims held gay, outdoor parties when she lived in the old yellow house on Thirtieth Street, Mrs. Francois Matthes, Miss Mary Radford and Miss Emily C. Matthews will receive guests and show them the upper and lower gardens.

Miss Katherine Dougal will be hostess in her garden whose tunneled entrance is unique. Miss Lucy Bentley and Mrs. Devereux Green, whose small gardens are examples of much beauty in small space, will also be hostesses to visitors. Mrs. William B. Poland, Mrs. Carroll Greenough, Mrs. William S. Newton and Mrs. Edward Wilbur will be hostesses in Mrs. Henry Leonard's beautiful garden on N Street.

At Mrs. Devereux Green's there will be an exhibition of fruit and flower prints by Jean Louis Prevost, several Audubons, garden books and garden guides, books on herbs, their growing and use. And at Children's House, 3224 N Street, open for the tour, handicrafts of the children will be exhibited.

Tickets for the 10-garden pilgrimage this afternoon may be secured at any of the gardens listed.

Mrs. Ferrandou Is Guest of Son

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Ferrandou have as their house guest Mr. Ferrandou's mother, Mrs. Henry F. Ferrandou of New Orleans.

The visitor will be honored guest tomorrow afternoon when Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Ferrandou will be hosts at an "at home" between the hours of 5 and 7 o'clock. Mr. Ferrandou's mother plans a visit of several weeks here.

Swedish Attache Returns

The Attache of the Swedish Legation, Count Fredrik Wachtmeister, has returned to the Capital after a few days' stay at Hot Springs, Va., where he was joined by his mother, Countess Buelah Wachtmeister. His wife, Countess Wachtmeister, did not accompany him to the spa, being a visitor in New York that week.

Stirling Kerr And L. O. Olsen To Be Married

Mrs. Karl Stirling Kerr of Arlington announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Stirling Kerr, to Lief O. Olsen, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Olsen of Virginia, Minn.

The bride-elect is a graduate of Mary Washington College at Fredericksburg, Va., and at present is employed at the Bureau of Internal Revenue. Mr. Olsen graduated from Virginia Junior College and George Washington University. He is a member of Sigma Phi Epsilon Fraternity and Sigma Tau, honorary engineering society.

Due to the recent death of the bride-elect's father, the marriage will be a quiet home event and will take place June 13.

Culbertsons Off On Western Tour

Mr. and Mrs. William S. Culbertson will leave today for a brief tour through the Middle Western States, ending with a stay in Wichita, Kans., where Mr. Culbertson will address the State bar meeting, convening there May 21-23.

Kansas City and Emporia will be among the places where the Culbertsons will visit old friends. They are planning to return to Washington about May 27, after which they will open their summer home in Charmain, Pa.

Army Orders Postpone Wedding Of Miss Tyser

Due to a change in Army orders, the wedding of Miss Jeanne Tyser, daughter of Frank Tyser of Wharton, Md., to Sergt. Robinson Abbott, has been postponed from tomorrow until next Sunday, at the same time and place.

The event will take place in the rectory of historic St. John's Church in Forest Glen at 6 o'clock in the evening, where Miss Tyser has been soloist for a number of years. Miss Agnes Welch will be the maid of honor and William Bobinger will be the best man.

Sergeant Abbott, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Abbott of Takoma Park, Md., will arrive from Camp Wheeler, Ga., on Wednesday.

Elie Garcia Is Luncheon Host

Commemorating the first anniversary of the innauguration of Elie Lescot as President of Haiti, Elie Garcia, First Secretary of the Haitian Legation, was host yesterday at an informal luncheon at L'Escargot.

Before assuming the presidency on May 15, 1941, Mr. Lescot was Haitian Minister to Washington. Guests at yesterday's luncheon included Maj. Roche B. Laroche, Military Attache at the Legation of Haiti, Willard F. Barber, Alberto Barreto and Leon Pearson.

Mrs. J. C. Cronin Is Visitor Here

William Tyler Page and his daughter, Mrs. Eleanor Fox, have as their guest at their home in Friendship Heights, Mrs. Joseph C. Cronin. Mrs. Cronin is also a daughter of Mr. Page, who is minority clerk of the House of Representatives.

With Mrs. Cronin, who has been in San Francisco since returning from Hawaii the first of the year, are her daughter, Miss Joane Cronin, and her son, Angus Cronin. She plans about a month's visit here.

Erwin Party On June 6

The tea which Mr. and Mrs. Henry Parsons Erwin are planning for their daughter, Miss Eileen Erwin, will take place Saturday afternoon, June 6, and weather permitting, will be held in the garden of their home.

Miss Erwin, who made her debut at a dinner-dance last December, will return to Washington late this month from her freshman studies at Bryn Mawr. The party in June is planned so that she may meet the older friends of the family.

Miss Mountsier Is Guest of The W. A. Sterns

Mr. and Mrs. William A. Stern 2d of Takoma Park, Md., have as their house guest Miss Mabel Mountsier of Winter Park, Fla., and New York, who will soon return to Gotham after spending the winter and spring in the South.

The Sterns have also been entertaining Miss Barbara Brandt of New York, a magazine editor.

Mrs. Stern will leave Sunday night for Boston, Mass., to be a guest of Dr. and Mrs. William G. Lennox, who are giving a dinner Monday for the doctors of the Psychiatrical Association. Mrs. Stern, a well known writer under the name of Edith Stern, has recently completed a series of articles on mental hygiene.

Cummings-Scounas Wedding Here

Mr. and Mrs. Emanuel Cummings, who were married recently will make their home in Richmond, Va.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, is the former Miss Anne Scounas, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Scounas. She carried an orchid-trimmed prayer book with her white satin gown, fashioned with a full skirt and long train. Her veil was trimmed in white lace.

The maid of honor, Miss Anastasia Scounas, wore a matching Mary, Queen of Scots, cap with her orchid taffeta dress and carried a bouquet of yellow roses. The bridesmaids were Miss Kitty Chaconas, Miss Amelia Petmezas, Miss Demetra Demas, Miss Mary Sakellasis, Miss Anne Zuenes and Miss Mary Scounas. Their dresses were pink and blue taffeta and they carried pink roses. The flower girls, Miss Becky Kontaxes, Miss Nitan Pappas, Miss Jeanne Kowmas and Miss Doris Boukis, wore pink and blue net gowns. George Cokinos served as ring bearer.

Steve Karros was best man and the ushers were George Pappos, Nick Cokinos, Bobby Pappadeas, Toddy Lagos, Pete Peratino and George Charahor. Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Masonic Temple.

Mrs. Stivers Is Honor Guest At Farewell Fete

Mrs. Clara Wood Stivers will be honored today at a luncheon given for her by Mrs. James S. Williams at the Columbia Country Club.

Mrs. Stivers, who has purchased a home in Lexington, Ky., and plans to live there after May 27, has been widely feted by her Washington and Chevy Chase friends. Among the parties given recently was the luncheon-bridge in her honor at which Mrs. Louis Bessey was hostess at her home.

Here for a weekend visit with his mother while her address is still Chevy Chase is Sherman Harry Stivers, jr., who is stationed at New River, N. C., with the Marine Corps. Another of Mrs. Stivers' sons, Reuben Elmore Stivers, is with the Maritime Commission.

Two Parties in Diplomatic Circles Take the Spotlight

Greek Legation Scene of Fete for the Depastas; Envoy to Nicaragua, Host

Two informal fetes took over the Capital calendar late yesterday afternoon. From 6 to 8 o'clock, the Greek Minister and Mme. Diamantopoulos entertained in honor of the retiring Minister-Counselor George S. Depasta and Mme. Depasta, who will leave next week for Canada.

From 5 to 7 o'clock, the new United States Minister to Nicaragua, James B. Stewart, was host at the Mayflower Hotel.

Minister Stewart, who has been in this country only three weeks, came from his former post as Consul General at Zurich, Switzerland. He will be off Wednesday for Denver, Colo., where he will meet his wife, the former Hattie Sterns, who is visiting relatives there. His wife accompanied him back from Europe and then traveled on westward while he came to Washington for a series of conferences at the State Department.

Miss Mary Lee Stewart, their daughter, who was in school studying at Scripps' College, Pomona, Calif., while her parents were in Switzerland, will join her parents in Denver. From there, the three will proceed to Nicaragua, by way of Mexico City.

Gala on the surface, yet accented with an undercurrent of sadness as is the case with all farewell parties to a popular departing couple, yesterday afternoon's fete at the Greek Legation was planned for a company described as "about 50," but looking much more like 100, at least. Guests included several members of the Diplomatic Corps, and a few from residential and official circles—all close friends of the Depastas.

King George Expected in June

"When is King George of Greece coming to Washington? Or is he coming at all?"

These two questions, phrased a dozen different ways, rippled through the crowd time and time again. Minister Depasta was noncommital as to the date of arrival; so was First Secretary Philon A. Philon. Minister Diamantopoulos, however, said his majesty definitely was coming, and that he was expected to arrive in June.

The date? Nobody knew that yet. But sometime in June. That much was certain. The date would be formally announced in due time, and plans for entertainments honoring his majesty would also be made known within the next few weeks.

With that item of interest settled, to a certain extent, attention turned to Minister Depasta and his attractive wife who have been Washington residents since 1938, but will be off soon to Canada.

Before his appointment to the post formerly held by Nicholas Lely, who left here for New York to serve as Greek Consul General, Mr. Depasta was in the State Department at Athens. Five years before that, however, he had been Consul General in Chicago for a decade, so his return to America was in the nature of a homecoming.

Off to Ottawa Early Next Week

Next week, however, he will leave for Canada where he will serve as the first Greek Minister at Ottawa. Accompanying the Depastas to the Canadian capital will be another member of the Greek Legation staff, who has been around Washington almost long enough to be considered a residential fixture. She is Mrs. Mina Druilhet, formerly of New Orleans; and she has been here for 24 years. One of the most efficient secretaries in the Diplomatic Corps, she will assist Minister Depasta and his wife in their job of establishing a Greek Legation in Canada.

When dark-haired, dark-eyed Mme. Depasta, who speaks several languages and is a past master at making friends and keeping them, came to Washington, she was the first official hostess in the Greek Legation for a number of years. Neither her husband's predecessor, Mr. Lely, nor Demetrios Sicilianos, who was Minister here during Lely's term of office, was married.

A woman of numerous interests, Mme. Depasta has been devoting much time recently toward Red Cross work and has been ably negotiating duties as cochairman of the Greek surgical unit and garment production unit of the Red Cross. She plans to start a similar type of work in Canada, and when she and her husband start out by motor northward next week, she will have among her belongings a letter from Miss Mabel T. Boardman to the Canadian Red Cross.

E. S. Hulls In Charleston

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Seabrook Hull, whose marriage took place May 2 in Greenwich, Conn., are currently on a wedding trip to Charleston, S. C., where the bridegroom has a plantation. Mrs. Hull is the former Miss Leidy Thiery, daughter of Mrs. Anna V. Thiery.

Attendants at the ceremony were the bride's sister, Mrs. Georette Ross and Maubert St. George. After May 20 the couple will reside in Washington.

Kranking—Sickles Betrothal Told

Mr. and Mrs. William D. Kranking announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Mary Elizabeth Kranking, to William George Sickles, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. Sickles of Washington.

No date has been set for the wedding.

Woodrow W. Sayre To Wed Miss Chase In Massachusetts

The Philippine High Commissioner and Mrs. Francis B. Sayre have gone to Hamilton, Mass., where the marriage of his son, Woodrow Wilson Sayre, and Miss Edith Warren Chase will take place this evening at 7 o'clock in the parish church.

The vows will be read by the Rev. Francis B. Sayre, jr., of Cambridge, brother of the bridegroom, and the Rev. Vivian T. Pomeroy, pastor of the First Church of Boston.

Miss Chase, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Chase of Milton, Mass., made her debut in 1937. She is a member of the Boston Union League. The prospective bridegroom is the son of the Commissioner and the late Jessie Woodrow Wilson Sayre. He is a graduate of Williams College and is doing graduate work in philosophy at Harvard.

Harry Talfourd Frosts Here For Two Weeks

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Talfourd Frost of Chicago have arrived to spend two weeks in Washington and are at the Mayflower while renewing their many acquaintances in the Capital.

Mr. Frost, who had completed plans for the building of Quezon City, which was to have been the new capital city of the Philippines, left the Far East with Mrs. Frost shortly before the attack on Pearl Harbor.

Miss Chapman Gives Party For Her Niece

The round of luncheons, dinners and parties that has marked this week for Miss Mary Alice O'Conor and her fiance William Joseph Kenealy, was culminated last night with a buffet supper given by her aunt, Miss Alice Chapman, at her Chevy Chase home.

The supper, to which some 25 members of the bridal party and our-of-town guests were invited, followed the wedding rehearsal at the Most Blessed Sacrament Church where the couple will exchange vows today at 10 o'clock.

Included among the guests were the bride's parents Mr. and Mrs. Justin V. O'Conor and her sister Miss Helen O'Conor who will be a maid of honor, the bridegroom's parents Mr. and Mrs. John T. Kenealy and his sister Miss Joan Kenealy, Miss Anais Harding, another maid of honor and the bridesmaids Mrs. George E. Harrington, Mrs. Richard P. Whitty, jr., and Miss Catherine Hickey.

Others there were Mr. and Mrs. Charles O'Conor of Philadelphia, Mr. and Mrs. John J. Crowley of New York, Mrs. Martha Bromley, Dr. Aloysius D. O'Donnell, Michael M. Doyle jr., Capt. George E. Harrington, Patrick A. Deenihan, Richard P. Whitty, jr., and Justin V. O'Conor, jr., who will be ushers at today's wedding.

Miss Eileen Boland, daughter of Representative and Mrs. Patrick Bolnd, entertained for the bride-elect on Thursday with a luncheon at the Shoreham. Her guests included the bridal attendants, Mrs. O'Conor and Mrs. Boland.

Kettlers to Give Supper Tonight

Lieut. and Mrs. William J. Kettler will entertain at a barbecue supper party tonight in the garden of their home at Woodside, Md. Mrs. Kettler, who has been serving on the staff of Senator Millard E. Tydings, has resigned in order to devote her time to Red Cross Motor Corps work.

Guests will include several former coworkers of Mrs. Kettler. Among those in the company will be Col. George Combs, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd C. Davies, Mr. and Mrs. George Quinn, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Deek, Mrs. Mabel McDarment, Mrs. Jane Leeke, Mrs. Grillett Scoular and Miss Corinne Barger.

Mt. Vernon Ladies Association Considers Storing Treasures In Washington's Mansion

WARTIME protection of the priceless Washington possessions at Mount Vernon is among the matters being considered by the Mount Vernon Ladies Association at its seventy-sixth annual grand council now in session at the historic shrine. In event of war emergency it might become necessary to put into safekeeping the treasures that hundreds of Americans view daily at the Washington home.

During the Civil War soldiers of both armies by common consent left Mount Vernon unmolested.

The association, during its session, which began Thursday, will consider problems connected with the restoration, preservation and maintenance of Mount Vernon. One of its recent activities has been the issuing of a new edition of The Maxims of Washington. This is being sold at Mount Vernon.

Mrs. Horace Mann Towner, regent of the association, is presiding over the grand council. Twenty-one vice regents representing their States, are attending.

Immediately after the opening of the session the members assembled at the Tomb of General and Mrs. Washington to place on the sarcophagi wreaths made with flowers from the Mount Vernon garden, and to repeat in unison a prayer of General Washington appropriate to present day conditions. The members then returned to the mansion where a salute of allegiance to the flag was given, following which the annual report of the regent was read by Mrs. Towner.

At the afternoon session Charles Cecil Wall, resident superintendent, gave his annual report.

Dr. Mott Speaks

PEOPLE of today are living in the most significant moment of history, believes Dr. John R. Mott, veteran religious worker.

Speaking yesterday before the Women's Committee of Washington Cathedral Dr. Mott said: "I have been journeying for 50 years over the world and in that time have visited and revisited more than 80 different countries, but the present time is the most significant in which men have lived."

A member of the Cathedral Council, Dr. Mott paid tribute to the cathedral as "a symbol and a reminder of the marvelous incomparable power of the Christian faith."

"It reminds us that we have behind us 20 centuries of Christian witness," he said. "Nothing can take the place of cathedrals which stand as Christian witnesses for hundreds of years. They remind us of historic Christianity and of the spiritual things for which they stand."

Despite the great involvement of the young in the present war, Dr. Mott expressed the belief that the vision of youth was not fading in the war and that a world-wide desire of most faiths is to come together in Christian unity.

"Christ's power will be realized" he predicted, "and this agony of man's spirit will be over and a brighter, more Christian day will dawn for the world."

Dance Group to Meet

MISS CLAIR DAMROSCH SEYMOUR will be the guest of the Square Dance Group tonight at the clubhouse of the Washington Branch of the American Association of University Women. She will discuss poise and coordination, and will demonstrate exercises she has designed especially to make for grace and dignity and to reduce stress and strain in the new demands of the war effort.

A niece of Dr. Walter Damrosch, Miss Seymour formerly danced with the Elizabeth Duncan School in Switzerland and the Dalcroze Ballet at the Paris Opera and conducted classes in New York before coming to Washington. Mrs. Thomas A. Groover and Mrs. Lewlie H. Whitten will be hostesses and Miss Laura Silsby will be in charge of the program.

Mrs. Bryant Elected

MRS. RYLAND C. BRYANT was elected regent of the Susan Riviere Hetzel Chapter, D. A. R., at its meeting yesterday at the home of Mrs. Harry S. Kimberly, 3401 Macomb Street. Other new officers are Mrs. Robert Palmer Smith, vice regent; Mrs. J. V. Hopkins, chaplain; Mrs. Guy Withers, recording secretary; Miss Anne Scott West, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Kimberly, treasurer; Miss Mildred W. Chancellor, registrar; Mrs. Bessie Wilmarth Gann, historian; Mrs. Charles F. Creighton, delegate.

A report on the Continental Congress in Chicago was given by Miss Luella P. Chase, delegate, special mention being given to the installation as State regent of the District D. A. R. of Mrs. Geoffrey Creyke, past regent of the chapter. A complimentary breakfast was given Mrs. Creyke at the Chicago congress by 50 District daughters and special guests.

Assisting Mrs. Kimberly as hostesses at the meeting yesterday were Mrs. Ryland C. Bryant and Mrs. Charles F. Creighton.

To Unveil Marker

Marcia Burns Chapter, D. A. R., will unveil a marker to the memory of Mary Fields Craig (Mrs. William Franklin), in Rock Creek Cemetery today at 2 o'clock.

Mrs. Craig died on May 30, 1940. She was the mother of Donald Alexander Craig, widely known newspaperman, who died September 30, 1936, and Margaret H. Marsh (Mrs. B. Franklin), and the sister of Mrs. William H. Lester and the Misses S. Helen and Margaret Barnett Fields of this city. Relatives and friends are invited to the ceremony.

Alumnae to Meet

Zeta Tau Alpha Alumnae will hold their annual senior luncheon today at 1:30 at Tilden Gardens. Two scholarship awards will be made and following the luncheon there will be a short meeting and installation of the new officers of the alumnae chapter. Miss Adelaide Woodley is taking reservations.

The next regular meeting will be Tuesday at the chapter rooms at 8:30 p. m.

Annual Card Party

The annual card party of the Chapter House Corporation of the Daughters of the American Revolution will be held today at 2 and 8 p. m. at the Chapter House, 1732 Massachusetts Avenue.

Mrs. Elmer F. Cassel is in charge of the arrangements, assisted by Mrs. Alfred B. Garges and Mrs. Edwin J. Ryan The proceeds of the party will be used for the Chapter House and for war work.

Music to Feature

Two former Ohioans, Miss Irma V. Lackey, of the National League of American Pen Women, and her sister, Mrs. Hugh A. Allen, of the Creative Art Club of Arlington, Va., will sing a cycle of spring songs, accompanied by Mrs. Allen at the piano, for the Ohio Girls Club at the installation of officers to be held Monday night at the Woman's City Club.

Election Tomorrow

The Washington Chapter of Immaculata College (Pennsylvania) Alumnae will hold its annual election meeting tomorrow at the home of Mrs. Dwight C. Bracken, 2947 Upton Street Northwest. Following the election, plans for the summer will be discussed. Representatives from the Washington, D. C., Chapter will attend the Immaculata College Alumnae annual meeting at Immaculata College, Immaculata, Pa., on May 24.

Draft Age of 18 Opposed

OPPOSITION to lowering the selective service induction age to 18 is expressed in a resolution passed this week by the board of managers of the District of Columbia Congress of Parents and Teachers. The resolution points out that members of the board feel there is no imperative need at present for the use of boys of 18 in war service and that such boys should remain in school as long as possible in order that they may be better able to assume their places in civilian life after the war.

The board also indorsed the program of the American Social Hygiene Society to reduce and control venereal diseases throughout the whole of the United States and not to concentrate such efforts merely in areas adjacent to military camps.

Study War Finances

RECOMMENDATIONS that the war program be financed by taxation as far as possible, and that inflationary money in the hands of low-income groups be drawn off by an income tax rather than a sales tax, have been made to the House Ways and Means Committee by the National League of Women Voters.

In a letter to committee members, Miss Marguerite M. Wells, league president, urged each, individually, to work for a graduated personal income tax schedule "at least as heavy as that now proposed by the Treasury Department," and asked that the tax bill include provision for collecting the bulk of income taxes on wage earning and salaried persons at the source.

At the same time the league completed plans for a campaign to arouse public opinion behind its two-point tax program in 600 local communities in the United States. A feature of the campaign, which is to be waged until the new tax bill is enacted, will be the distribution of several million broadsides titled "Bigger Taxes Are Better Taxes."

Geographers to Meet

MRS. ELISABETH SHIRLEY ENOCHS will speak on "Present Problems of Latin America" at the meeting of the Society of Woman Geographers which will be held at the home of Mrs. William Chapin Huntington today at 4:30 p. m. At this meeting the results of the triennial election of officers and council members will be announced.

Those who will attend will include Mrs. Ruth A. McBride, Mrs. Katharine Clarke-Hafstad, Miss Louise A. Boyd, Mrs. Eve Chapline, Mrs. Muna Lee de Munoz-Marin, Miss Helen B. Smith, Miss Irene A. Wright, Dr. Laura Hatch Martin, Dr. Millicent Todd Bingham, Miss Edith M. Fitton, Miss Ellen N. LaMotte, Miss Isabelle F. Story, Mrs. Lucile Quarry Mann, Dr. Helen M. Strong, Dr. Marion E. Blake, Mrs. Constance D. Lathrop, Miss Mary A. Nourse, Mrs. Charles M. Hendley, Mrs. Phyllis Pulliam Jervey, Mrs. Caroline Benedict Carroll, Mrs. Bertha Lum, Mrs. Sophia A. Saucerman, Mrs. Bettina Crowe and Mrs. Wilma C. Fairbank.

Spring Benefit

THE LADIES' BOARD of Georgetown University Hospital will give the annual spring benefit for the hospital at the Mayflower Hotel today at 4 p. m. The program will be a concert by the Trapp Family Singers.

The committee on arrangements is headed by Mrs. W. E. Gannon, who is assisted by Mrs. Leon Martel, Mrs. John Galen Carter, Mrs. William Leahy, Mrs. Raymond Kirschner, Mrs. Leo Brison Norris and Mrs. Henry Quinn.

Boxholders for the program include the Countess Szechenyi, the Princess Margaret Draper Boncompagni, Mrs. Mary McGrerry, Father Arthur A. O'Leary, Mrs. Norris and Mrs. James Cahill.

Among the patrons are His Excellency Amieto G. Cicogna, Apostolic Delegate; Right Rev. Msgr. Edward L. Buckey, Very Rev. Leonard Walsh, O. S. M., Rev. Wilfred Parsons, S. J., Hon. G. Howland Shaw, Dr. and Mrs. George Tully Vaughn, Mr. and Mrs. William D. Willcoxon, Mrs. Thomas Lowe, Mrs. John A. O'Donoghue, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Gannon, Mrs. James Young, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Leahy, Mr. and Mrs. Terence F. Cunneen, Mrs. T. Cushing Daniel, Hugh T. Fegan, Mr. and Mrs. Henry H. Flather, Mrs. Joseph Leiter, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Mangan, Mr. and Mrs. Richard McCauley, John Saul, Mr. and Mrs. Henry I. Quinn, and Mr. and Mrs. Andrew J. Haire.

Dollology Club Tea

THE DOLLOLOGY CLUB will hold a silver tea at the home of Miss Etta Mai Russell, 478 N Street Southwest, from 4 to 6 p. m. Proceeds will go to purchase a membership in the Children's Museum. Each member of the club will present a doll to Miss Russell to be used in her Doll Lending Program in connection with her welfare work.

Barney Neighborhood House, which is in the same block as Miss Russell's home, will hold its spring festival at the same time, and members of the Dollology Club will visit this event and inspect the activities of this social center.

200 on Yale Faculty Given Leave to Aid in War Work

Two hundred members of the Yale faculty are now on leave of absence so they can participate directly in war work, Dr. Charles Seymour, president of the university, last night told 200 members of the Yale Club of Washington, at a meeting in the Mayflower.

Describing Yale's contribution to the war effort, Dr. Seymour said that half of the remaining faculty at the university was devoting its out-of-class time to research and similar war work. Every single laboratory, he said, is being used exclusively for war research.

As further contributions, Dr. Seymour pointed to the Naval Reserve unit at the school, and to the reduction of the regular course from four years to two years eight months.

As to the question of Yale's future, the educator answered that if America loses the war, the future is obvious. Thus, he said, winning of the war must be Yale's immediate goal.

Representative John M. Vorys (Republican), of Ohio, was toastmaster. Others who spoke briefly included, Robert Lincoln O'Brien, president of the Harvard Club of Washington; Senator Robert Taft (Republican), of Ohio; Wayne Chatfield Taylor, Undersecretary of Commerce; Charles Taft, Office of Defense Health and Welfare Services; Eugene Meyer, editor and publisher of The Post; Senator John A. Danaher (Republican), of Connecticut; and Col. F. Trubee Davidson.

agencies, not counting the War and Navy Departments.

The Virginia Senator charged the Agriculture Department operated 4,513 passengar cars and 13,505 trucks last year, and served notice he will offer next week an amendment to ban purchase of additional new automobiles by non-war Federal agencies. Lee urged a companion amendment to cut the number of departmental chauffeurs.

Expense Limit Battle

Another effort will be made by Byrd to restore the eight million dollar limitation on Agriculture Department traveling expenses imposed by the House. The Senate committee had wiped out this 50 per cent travel cut, proposing instead that one and a half million dollars be turned back to the Treasury out of the department's travel allotments.

Byrd, whose ban on new-car purchases will be offered separately from his travel limitation, said it cost the Agriculture Department $1,142,456 to operate its passenger cars some 54,677,000 miles last year "and that doesn't include the cost of the cars or the salaries of the full-time chauffeurs they hire.

The Senate meanwhile approved without opposition an outlay of 176 million dollars to carry on the department's school lunch and food stamp programs, an increase of $44,500,000 over amounts approved by the Budget Bureau and the House.

Senator Russell (Democrat) of Georgia, floor manager of the bill, linked the school lunch program with war preparation, asserting "that literally thousands of boys were unable to meet the physical requirements of Selective Service because of inadequate food.

Byrd told reporters he favored this phase of the department's activities, which the Senate action would continue at present levels. Some 6,200,000 children in 93,000 schools were served lunch under the program in March.

Senator Russell, in opposing efforts to limit transfers of funds within the department, said a 5 per cent restriction might hinder the "food for victory program" and important research activities. Byrd replied that the entire amount transferred could be used to purchase cars, or for purposes unrelated to defense.

Hits Publicity Expenditures

The Virginian, tangling frequently in debate with Russell, also singled out Agriculture Department publicity expenses, charging $823,700 was spent by the department for press, radio, motion pictures and electrical transcription.

"Is there any wonder Congress is charged with being spineless and weak," Senator Wheeler (Democrat) of Montana told the Senate. "We pay the department this money for publicity so they can go out and attack us."

Clashing once with Byrd, Russell charged the Virginia Senator had consistently opposed the farm program. Byrd hotly denied he was opposed to the objectives of the farm program, "but I'm going to denounce extravagance wherever it is."

Negro Leaders Plan to Promote Victory Drive

Planning to launch a city-wide Douglas MacArthur-Dorie Miller victory campaign, a conference of leaders of Negro organizations has been called to meet tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock, at the Phyllis Wheatley Young Women's Christian Association, 901 Rhode Island Avenue.

Having as its general intent, "to develop a deeper realization among the citizenry of their vital stake in the war, and to promote participation in all forms of war activity leading to victory," the conference will pay tribute to the American commander in the South Pacific, and to the Negro mess attendant, who was awarded the Navy Cross by President Roosevelt this week.

District Commissioner Young has been invited to attend the conference, which will decide the specific aims of the campaign, elect officers, and lay plans for establishment of MacArthur-Dorie Miller Clubs among all organizations and institutions in the District of Columbia.

Sponsors include James A. Arnols, the Rev. R. W. Brooks, George W. Goodman, Miss Dorothy Height, Dr. W. H. Jernagin, William S. Johnson, the Rev. C. T. Murray, John T. Rhines, Mrs. Therese Lee Robinson, George H. Rycraw, James E. Scott, Jeanette Welch, Dr. Charles Wesley and Mrs. Velma Williams.

Ewald Again Receives Honor For Advertising Betterment

HENRY T. EWALD

Columbia, Mo., May 15.—Henry T. Ewald of Detroit, president of the Campbell-Ewald Co., today received a medal of honor from the University of Missouri School of Journalism for the advancement and betterment of advertising, the first award given by the school in the field of advertising.

Last year Ewald received an honorary degree of Doctor of Laws from Wayne University, Detroit, for his "rich contribution to the life of Detroit," as well as the gold medal for distinguished services to advertising, awarded at a banquet in New York City. The latter is the outstanding personal recognition in advertising given yearly by the Annual Advertising Awards.

His "effective contribution" to the profession of advertising includes personal services in many capacities—such as chairman of the board of both the American Association of Advertising Agencies and the National Outdoor Advertising Bureau; director of the Advertising Federation of America and of the Traffic Audit Bureau.

In a talk coincident with the receipt of the medal, Ewald made the following recommendations affecting war-time advertising:

First—The use of full-page newspaper advertisements to sell war savings bonds and other Government securities, to salvage waste, to build morale, to give publicity to every effort that will help us win the victory.

Second—This advertising to be sponsored by retail stores, banks, manufacturing companies, large and small, the country over, in every community. This may be done by these concerns singly, cooperatively, in groups—whatever seems locally most desirable.

Third—That such advertising, for the most part, be prepared through the National Advertising Council in Washington, although local ideas and suggestions should by no means be discouraged.

Fourth—Throughout this war period it will become more and more difficult for advertisers, both national and local, to advertise peacetime products. Such advertising as I propose would, I am sure, serve to keep trade names, hallmarks and reputations fresh and green against the return of normal living.

Hears Demands For Fish's Defeat

By the Associated Press

Hamilton, N. Y., May 15.—Demands that the Republican Party purge itself of pre-war isolationist influences highlighted the State convention of Young Republicans today with open attacks concentrating on Representative Hamilton Fish.

Defeat of Fish "by the party it-Bacon, former vice chairman of the Republican State Committee, who told delegates the 22-year veteran of Congress, seeking Republican renomination in New York's Twenty-sixth District, "should be repudiated in the primaries."

Primary election defeat of Fish, who numbers President Roosevelt among his constituents, also was advocated by Edward Wright, independent candidate for association president, in a telegram saying that "more than any other individual, Mr. Fish is a symbol and a rallying-point for forces of doubt and disunion. His defeat will immeasurably strengthen the Republican Party."

Don't Evacuate Young, Defense Rally Is Told

Evacuation of small children, especially those of preschool age is not as desirable as keeping them in the security of the family circle despite bombings, Dr. Aase Skard, daughter of the former minister of foreign affairs of Norway, told a rally of women defense workers yesterday at Hiser Theater, Bethesda, Md.

Mrs. Skard addressed a rally of area chairmen and street leaders of the women's activities of Montgomery County civilian defense called by Mrs. B. Peyton Whalen, chairman of women's activities. Deprecating clamor about gasoline rationing, Dr. Skard pointed out that conditions in European countries are so bad that many children haven't tasted candy in years.

Mrs. Whalen announced this would be the last general meeting of the women's activities because of gasoline and tire rationing, and said that news letters will be sent to area leaders instead.

Mrs. Whalen asked that every woman support the salvage campaign being carried on by her group.

Republic Steel Urges Action in 'Outlaw' Strikes

Cleveland, May 15 (AP).—Republic Steel Corp. announced today its president, R. J. Wysor has asked the War Production Board to "take immediate action" to end a walkout of some 1500 C. I. O. United Mine Workers at two of the concern's Pennsylvania mines.

"We have lost 17,000 tons of coking coal production at our Clyde No. 1 and No. 3 mines at Fredericktown and Clarksville, Pa., so far this week because the men object to handling powder under the Federal Explosives Act and have refused to work," Wysor said in a telegram yesterday to Donald M. Nelson, WPB chief.

"This loss of coal production will cause a curtailment of operations in our steel plants. The strike is in violation of our contract with the United Mine Workers of America. The men have been advised by union officials from Pittsburgh that they have no grievance, that they are interfering with the war effort, and that they can expect no different arrangements from those under which they should be working."

"About 1500 men are involved. Urge you to take immediate action to get these men back to work."

Admiral Huse Funeral Set For Today

Private funeral services will be held today for Vice Admiral Harry McClaren Pinckney Huse, 83, one of the Navy's most outstanding heroes, who died Thursday at the Naval Hospital in Bethesda, Md.

ADM. HUSE

Admiral Huse, as a young lieutenant, commanded one of the first American detachments to land on the island of Puerto Rico and was cited for conspicuous gallantry at the Battle of Santiago Bay during the Spanish-American War. Lieutenant Huse subsequently became one of the outstanding officers in the Navy. After American occupation of Vera Cruz in the Mexican crisis in 1914, he was awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor for bravery, and named a rear admiral two years later.

While serving aboard the Gloucester on July 25, 1898, Admiral Huse, then a lieutenant, sailed into Guanica Harbor, Puerto Rico, and commanded a landing force from the vessel. He and his men fought their way into the village, after which the young officer hauled down the Spanish flag from a staff and hoisted ours in its place. The American flag was later sent to the museum at the U. S. Naval Academy.

In 1918, Admiral Huse performed the unusual feat of diving overboard to rescue a drowning sailor.

Born at West Point, son of Col. Caleb Huse, United States Army, and Mrs. Harriet Pinckney Huse, Admiral Huse chose to serve in the Navy and was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1878. Prior to his entry at Annapolis, young Huse was educated and traveled throughout Europe.

Admiral Huse commanded the Atlantic Fleet Train in 1919 and was assigned to special duty in London and Paris. In 1920, as vice admiral, he was named commander of our naval forces in European waters. He also served as commandant of the Third Naval District in New York and president of the Naval Examining Board here. He retired in 1922.

Admiral Huse, who lived at 2400 Sixteenth Street Northwest, is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mary S. Huse; a daughter, Mrs. L. M. Humrichouse of Ithan, Pa., four sisters living in Plainfield, N. J., and two grandchildren, Mrs. A. F. Little, this city, and Lieut. James W. Humrichouse, U. S. Navy.
